

Phoned Red embassies 8 weeks before slaying CIA bugging of Oswald calls bared

By NICHOLAS HORROCK
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency secretly tape-recorded two telephone conversations between Lee Harvey Oswald and the Cuban and Soviet embassies in Mexico City some eight weeks before President John F. Kennedy was shot to death Nov. 22, 1963 in Dallas, Texas, government sources familiar with the events said Saturday.

The call to the Soviet Embassy, according to the sources, alerted the CIA to the presence of Oswald in Mexico City and on Oct. 10, the agency warned the Federal Bureau of Investigation. There is no indication that the FBI, which was investigating Oswald for his pro-Castro activities, ever followed up on the information.

The call to the Cuban Embassy, the sources said, was not associated with Oswald until after Kennedy's death. A federal commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren found that Oswald, acting alone had shot the president.

The calls reportedly were placed by Oswald on a trip to Mexico City in late September and early October, 1963. The events of this trip have never been fully made public and have been the subject of speculation for more than a decade.

The reports of the calls are the latest developments in the increasing speculation about the Warren Commission's conclusions. Evidence that the CIA and FBI may have been less than candid with the commission have added to the questions surrounding the assassination and have led to more calls for a reopening of the inquiry.

The Mexico City trip was only given scant treatment in the Warren Commission report because publication of information about it might have exposed "sources and methods" of the CIA and impaired national security, intelligence officers and commission staff sources have said.

In response to inquiries from the New York Times, the CIA issued an unusual public statement on the matter. It would not confirm that there were any tape-recorded conversations, but said:

"On Oct. 9, 1963, CIA headquarters received information that a person named Lee Oswald contacted the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City in late September or early October, 1963. In transmitting the information on Oct. 10, 1963, CIA headquarters said Lee Oswald probably was identical to Lee Henry (sic) Oswald, a former radar operator in the U.S.

Marine Corps, born Oct. 18, 1939, in New Orleans who defected to the Soviet Union in 1959 and who subsequently made arrangements to return to the United States with a Russian wife.

"This biographical data was based upon FBI reports provided to the CIA following Oswald's defection to the Soviet Union.

"This information was also provided to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Data hints more SLA members

Documents name 2 spinoff groups

SAN FRANCISCO — Scores of documents dealing with the inner workings of two mysterious Bay Area terrorist groups were seized by police and federal agents early Saturday at the former hideout of captured fugitives William and Emily Harris.

The documents have raised speculation among law-enforcement officials that, although most of the known members of the Symbionese Liberation Army died in a police shootout in Los Angeles 15 months ago, its remnants emerged under two different aliases to wage a campaign of bombings against police agencies.

Sources close to the investigation said the seized material could be the first major breakthrough toward identifying persons connected with the New World Liberation Front (NWLF) and the Red Guerrilla Family, both of which appeared on the California terror scene after the SLA-police shootout.

The apartment was sealed by police after the Harrises were arrested Thursday. After search warrants were issued, the material was removed late Friday and early Saturday.

It had been disclosed earlier that, after the arrests of the Harrises outside the apartment in the Bernal Heights District of the city, three automatic carbines, two shot-

Harrises linked to bombing attempts

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bombs found in the hideout of Patricia Hearst's terrorist comrades are "identical" to one used in an unsuccessful attack on a police station last month, it was reported Saturday.

The San Francisco Examiner quoted police sources as saying each of four bombs found at the apartment of Bill and Emily Harris was the same as the unexploded pipe bomb discovered under a patrol car behind the Mission District Station on Aug. 8.

Police at that time said the bomb "could have blown up the whole block."

"These bombs were the same thing and obviously came from the same place," an official source told the Examiner, using the word "identical."

The source said the wires were color-coded and the color codes were the same in the bombs found at the apartment and at the police station.

The San Francisco Chronicle reported that a federal source close to the investigation said that one of the explosive devices was a pipe bomb similar to an unexploded bomb.

President may visit his 'old friend' Nixon

By RICHARD E. LERNER
United Press International

President Ford said Saturday in Los Angeles that he might contact former President Richard M. Nixon during his three-day visit to California because "what's happened in the past I don't think should destroy a friendship."

In a taped television interview, Ford also said he is unsure whether Israel has nuclear weapons. But in any event, he said, the United States is obligated to "study" Tel Aviv's request for Pershing tactical missiles, which could be mounted with nuclear warheads.

THE PRESIDENT returned to California for three days of speeches and golf only two weeks after Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, a follower of mass murderer Charles Manson, pointed a loaded pistol at Ford in Sacramento.

Ford was scheduled to fly to Palo Alto today to dedicate facilities at the Stanford University Law School. At 9 p.m., he was due to give a speech to the National Association of Underwriters at the Disneyland Hotel in Anaheim.

Opening the visit Saturday with a speech at Pepperdine University in Malibu, Ford said financial pressures may doom private colleges like Pepperdine and vowed to fight any move to limit tax breaks for those who donate funds to such institutions.

In Los Angeles, Ford taped a half-hour interview for broadcast later on station KNBC-TV.

He said he might contact Nixon during this visit. The former president lives in near-seclusion at a walled estate in San Clemente.

Asked why he was considering contacting Nixon, Ford said: "I worked with him in the past. What's happened in the past I don't think should destroy a friendship."

He said he did not know whether his "old friend" might attempt to return to public life.

Nixon continues to receive intelligence briefings by teletype every 10 days and is in regular touch with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

As to whether Israel possesses nuclear weapons, Ford said, "I do not know categorically whether they do or not."

But he said documents related to the recent Israeli-Egyptian Sinai disengagement agreement "spell out that we will study Israel's request" for Pershing tactical missile batteries.

U.S. officials have said any Pershings sold to Israel would have only conventional warheads, but they are designed to take nuclear tips as well if a nation has them.

Ford also:

— Restated his opposition to court-ordered school busing "as a means of achieving quality education" and said he doubted the widespread opposition to busing "has any relationship to racism on the part of most people."

— Denied his California trip is part of his political campaign to be elected president and said he welcomes "healthy competition" for the Republican nomination from former California Gov. Ronald Reagan. "We're close personal friends," Ford said.

— Said he does not regard Tuesday's victory of Democrat John Durkin in the New Hampshire Senate election as a "defeat," although he campaigned for Durkin's opponent. He said it was an "organizational victory" for the Democrats.

At the Pepperdine campus, Ford said "the institutions of private education in the United States are being battered and buffeted in ways that may ultimately jeopardize their survival."

"If these institutions should suddenly close, shifting the burden from private donors to public taxpayers, the tax load would be heavy indeed. America and American taxpayers would suffer the consequences. We must not allow this to happen."

Kissinger backs missile stance

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, apparently annoyed by Pentagon criticism, said Saturday that he wanted to put "in perspective" the U.S. military relationship with Israel.

He said all of Israel's major requests for arms, including the medium-range Pershing missile, were submitted to the United States a year ago and have been under study since then.

The secretary spoke to newsmen at the State Department after a breakfast meeting with Defense Minister Shimon Peres of Israel. His remarks were clearly aimed at rebutting Pentagon statements of the past few days expressing surprise that, in the recent Sinai negotiations, Kissinger had agreed the United States would give sympathetic consideration to providing the Pershing to Israel. Up to now, the Pershing has been deployed only with nuclear warheads.

Friday, for instance, a Pentagon spokesman said the Defense Department was not informed until recently that the Pershing had been discussed in the negotiations and

Loopholes for power firms said costing public $1 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American consumers are paying nearly $1 billion a year more in electric bills than they should be because of tax loopholes enjoyed by the nation's 150 largest, privately owned power companies, a study charged Saturday.

The situation exists, the report said, because the utility companies are able to charge their customers for millions of dollars in income tax which they don't really pay the federal government due to accounting methods and tax breaks.

Of the 150 companies studied, 122 charged their customers more taxes than they actually paid, the report said, and 57 of the utilities paid no federal taxes during 1974.

The report was issued by the Environmental Action Foundation after a 12-month investigation by its Utility Project, a group formed in 1972 to study the utility industry.

It said the law allows utilities to pass on to their customers, in the form of higher rates, the cost of income taxes due the federal government. But investment tax credits and depreciation breaks allow the companies to defer actually paying the taxes until later years, and in fact the taxes are really "phantoms," the report said.

"In 1974, these same 150 power companies charged their customers for $1.4 billion in federal income taxes. This is $930 million more than they actually paid to the government," the study said. "Much of this sum was passed on to utility stockholders in the form of extra profits, a transition which falls outside the normal rate-making process."

The report listed as examples Commonwealth Edison of Chicago which paid $26 million in federal income tax but charged its customers over $100 million; Carolina Power & Light which charged its customers $14 million in income taxes "even though it received a $24 million refund from the Internal Revenue Service;" Public Service Gas & Electric of Newark, N.J., which charged its customers $13 million while it received the same amount as a refund for back taxes; and Philadelphia Electric which "received an $11.2 million credit but charged its customers for $48 million in taxes."

The report said Congress earlier this year increased the investment tax credit for utilities and further liberalized the law in such a way that virtually all of the nation's electric utilities will be exempt from federal income tax as long as the change is in effect.

"This enlarged loophole will probably result in the federal government's refunding of most of the more than $2 billion in income taxes paid by utilities since 1972," the study claimed. "Unless citizens' groups and regulatory commissions are on their toes, most of this windfall will find its way into the pockets of utility stockholders."

Embattled N.Y.C. official quits

Combined News Services

New York's Sanitation Commissioner Robert Groh, under an ultimatum from Mayor Abraham Beame to get the city streets cleaned up or get out, got out Saturday, resigning his $39,000-a-year post.

The resignation, effective Oct. 3, came nine days after Beame warned Groh that "heads would roll" unless conditions improved in 10 days. Groh denied that the ultimatum affected his decision.

Last Wednesday, Beame paid a surprise visit to a Sanitation Department garage and found that more than half the workers were washing up to go home half an hour early.

Two supervisors were suspended, but Groh reinstated them less than 24 hours later. He said that they offered "plausible excuses" and that a departmental hearing would still be held.

Groh said he gave Beame a progress report on the cleanup Friday night. But later it was learned that the mayor had summoned the commissioner to Gracie Mansion and the resignation was tendered as a result of their exchange.

Groh told a hurriedly called news conference that there had been substantial progress in the cleanup but that a barrage of editorials and reports in the news media had ruined morale, including his own.

Beame's ultimatum to Groh came in the wake of layoffs and budget cutbacks earlier this summer that led to the department falling behind in collections. There was growing public criticism of the department's performance.

Described as furious over the condition of the streets, Beame warned Groh and four other top department officials on Sept. 11 to "shape up" within 10 days, or else.

Groh had been sanitation commissioner since April 1974.

Musician

Orchestra leader Vincent Lopez, a fixture on the nation's big band scene of the 1920s, '30s and '40s and one of the nation's leading numerologists, died Saturday at a nursing home in suburban North Miami. He was 80.

Lopez had been ill since suffering a stroke four weeks ago but his death was attributed to liver and pancreas failure. His last engagement with his orchestra was last May at the River Boat in New York's Empire State Building, where he appeared for three weeks. Until his death he continued to operate orchestras in New York City and Miami.

Lopez was born in Brooklyn in 1895 and learned to play the piano as a child. His father wanted him to become a priest and sent him to a monastery for training at the age of 12. The abbot heard him play the piano and sent the boy back home, urging his parents to arrange a musical career.

Too casual

Prince Rainier of Monaco says he and his wife, the former Grace Kelly, sometimes have to admonish their beautiful 18-year-old daughter that she can't behave as casually as other people because it could damage her reputation.

"Sometimes Caroline says 'I want to be like everyone else,'" Rainier said in an interview with Radio Monte Carlo. "We are forced to tell her, 'You will never be like everyone else. It's not possible. There are things you can't do because people are watching you, because it will give you a bad name, a bad reputation. Most of the time she realizes this.'"

Caroline, a student in Paris, has appeared on magazine covers and in Paris newspaper pictures wearing low cut dresses and slouching on armchairs at night clubs.

Coming back

Argentina's Peronist Party said Saturday in Buenos Aires that President Isabel Peron will return to office from her leave of absence Oct. 17, the day marking the 30th anniversary of her late husband Juan D. Peron's rise to power.

The party statement, issued by its executive council, was aimed at stifling reports about the possibility the 44-year-old Mrs. Peron may not return to power.

The speculation grew last week after acting President Italo Luder, considered to the left of Mrs. Peron, sacked the interior and defense ministers and the right-wing governor of the key province of Cordoba, all of whom were considered close supporters of Mrs. Peron. The firings were seen as an attempt to undermine her power base. However, government sources said Mrs. Peron agreed with Luder's actions.

Lays claim to JFK heritage

Shriver joins presidency race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sargent Shriver laid claim Saturday to the political mantle of John F. Kennedy as the late president's brother-in-law became the eighth candidate to formally enter the sweepstakes for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination.

Opening what he called a "people's campaign," Shriver said he can offer "the honest and truthful leadership that summons the best that is in us — as John Kennedy once did."

"I intend to claim that legacy...for those billions of unknown human beings around the world for whom the memory of those days is still an inspiration."

The 59-year-old Shriver denied he is a stalking horse for the surviving Kennedy brother, Edward.

But he left no doubt that he would drop his own candidacy and support Kennedy should the Massachusetts senator abandon his often-proclaimed refusal to run.

At a news conference following his speech before hundreds of friends and supporters in the packed ballroom of a downtown hotel, Shriver said of Kennedy:

"All of the candidates now in the field agree that if Sen. Kennedy wanted the nomination he could get it."

"But I think we ought to take him at his word — let him alone — and get on about the business of selecting a presidential candidate."

The question arose when Shriver was asked if he would drop his own campaign if Kennedy entered the race.

"Wouldn't everybody?" Shriver replied.

"I'm not a stalking horse," he said. "He doesn't need a stalking horse."

Shriver said Kennedy, who did not attend the announcement, has offered him his encouragement and advice but has not formally endorsed him because he has promised other candidates to remain neutral in the 1976 presidential race.

But Shriver had no hesitation about invoking the names of others from the ranks of the Kennedy family.

"I am fortified by my family," he declared. "By my mother...by my wife Eunice...by Rose Kennedy and Ethel Kennedy and Jackie, by Jean and Pat and Joan..."

Among the family members who joined Shriver's wife Eunice and their children in looking on were Ethel, widow of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, and two of her children.

Neither Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis nor Joan Kennedy, Edward's wife, were there but both are named on an official list of supporters.

Shriver said he has met the requirements for federal matching campaign funds by raising $5,000 in each of 20 states. He said that in less than nine weeks he has raised a total $186,352 with an average contribution of $124.

Although Shriver said he has made no decision on which primaries to enter, aides reported he is seriously considering the Feb. 24 New Hampshire race and the March 2 Massachusetts contest.

Shriver said he is seeking support from all political elements of the country but could not endorse the nomination of Alabama Gov. George Wallace for either the presidential or vice presidential spot.

Although he has held top appointive posts, Shriver, now in private law practice, has never won elective office. He was the Democratic vice presidential nominee in 1972, when George McGovern chose him to replace Sen. Thomas Eagleton of Missouri.

Shriver came to political prominence as one of the "band of brothers" who helped propel John F. Kennedy into the White House in 1960. He later served as the first director of the Peace Corps, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity and ambassador to France.

Other Democrats already declared as presidential candidates are Sens. Henry Jackson of Washington and Lloyd Bentsen of Texas; Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona; former Govs. Terry Sanford of North Carolina and Jimmy Carter of Georgia; and former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma.

Demos deadlock on delegate fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic Compliance Review Commission reached a deadlock Saturday over a challenge to the plan of party regulars for selecting at-large national convention delegates from New York State.

The panel, a unit of the Democratic National Committee, voted by a 10 to 9 margin to rebuff the protest brought by the liberals from the New Democratic Coalition and Americans for Democratic Action.

However, because a final decision on the dispute would have required an 11-vote majority, the challenge was put off indefinitely for later consideration by the commission.

A decision on the challenge could affect delegate selection plans of other states, involving 300 to 400 convention delegates.

At issue is the New York party's plan under which presidential candidates who win 15 per cent or less of the state's 274 regularly elected delegates would be denied any of its 55 at-large delegates, to be chosen by the state committee.

At-large delegates corresponding to candidates who failed to meet the 15 per cent minimum would be classified as uncommitted. Liberals contend this could make the overall delegation more susceptible to power-broking at the convention.

In offering a motion to reject the New York plan, commission member Justin Ostro of East Hartford, Conn., charged that the plan amounted to "a blanket attempt to balloon the uncommitted delegation."

Ostro said the party organizations of 10 or 15 other states were "laying in the weeds waiting to apply this rule" if the compliance panel permitted New York's plan.

Alabama's Democratic state chairman, Robert Vance, said that with the 15 per cent threshold rule, the popular will of Democrats voting for regular delegates in New York and other states could be "completely and utterly thwarted."

Approving the New York plan would mean "we will stamp approval on the theft of 300 or 400 convention delegates,"

Vance asserted.

Former New York State chairman Joseph Crangle called Vance's charge "irresponsible" and said it could lead to divisiveness within the party.

"Shame on you, that's all I can say, Mr. Vance!" Crangle declared.

Ostro's motion called for rejecting the recommendation of the panel's Legal Advisory Council, which held that the New York party organization was entitled to set the 15 per cent threshold rule.

The vote on the motion was 9 in favor and 10 against, with one abstention. But an 11-vote majority was required. Under the commission's rules, all five New York members on the 25-member panel were disqualified from voting on the issue.

Army said he had 'common cold'

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The daughter of a microbiologist who died of a rare disease he had been studying for the Army at its Biological Warfare Laboratory at Fort Detrick, Md., in 1951, said Saturday that his illness had initially been dismissed by Army doctors as a common cold and that when his condition worsened he was at first denied admission to a military hospital.

With his fever "quite high," Mrs. Patricia Kephart said, her father, William A. Boyles, 46, was taken to the public hospital in Frederick, Md., by a private physician who was later reprimanded for bringing in a patient "with such a contagious disease."

Military and civilian officials apparently realized the mistake within two or three hours and Boyles was transferred to the Fort Detrick hospital, where five and a half hours later he lapsed into a coma from which he never recovered.

The Army disclosed Friday that Boyles had died of anthrax — a bacteriological infection carried by cattle, but seldom found in the United States — and admitted that it had falsified his death certificates and issued a false press release stating that he had died from pneumonia.

The Army also admitted cover-ups in the deaths of two other employees at Fort Detrick, Joel Eugene Willard, a 53-year-old electrician on July 5, 1953, and Albert Nickel, a 58-year-old animal caretaker on Feb. 10, 1954.

Vague and misleading obituaries, based on information supplied by the Army, appeared in local newspapers, and until Friday, when Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., demanded and received an official memorandum disclosing some of the steps in the deception, the Army apparently made no effort to clarify the record.

Most of the work at Fort Detrick was classified secret and one Army spokesman said he believed the officials had lied about the deaths out of concern for national security. But he indicated that the officials also may have feared that the truth about the deaths would have alarmed the residents of nearby Frederick and made it difficult for experiments to continue.

"There was no effort to cover up the deaths," the spokesman said, "but they didn't put the true cause of death. That would have scared hell out of the people of Frederick."

After 1969, when President Nixon renounced chemical and biological warfare and ordered the destruction of offensive stocks, the Army scaled down its activities at Fort Detrick and shifted to what it calls "defensive research."

Boyles' daughter and his widow, interviewed by telephone at the Boyles home in Frederick, said the Army had told them the death had been related to Boyles' work, but that they had never been formally told the true cause and Mrs. Boyles said, "We certainly didn't ask."

Mrs. Boyles said, "Everybody accepted the fact that Detrick was highly secret. My husband accepted it and I accepted it. We were never told anything."

Mrs. Boyles said she began receiving federal compensation shortly after the death, but that the money was not equal to her husband's salary and that she had to work as a teacher to support herself, her daughter and a son. She said she had never seriously considered suing the government and had no plans to do so now.

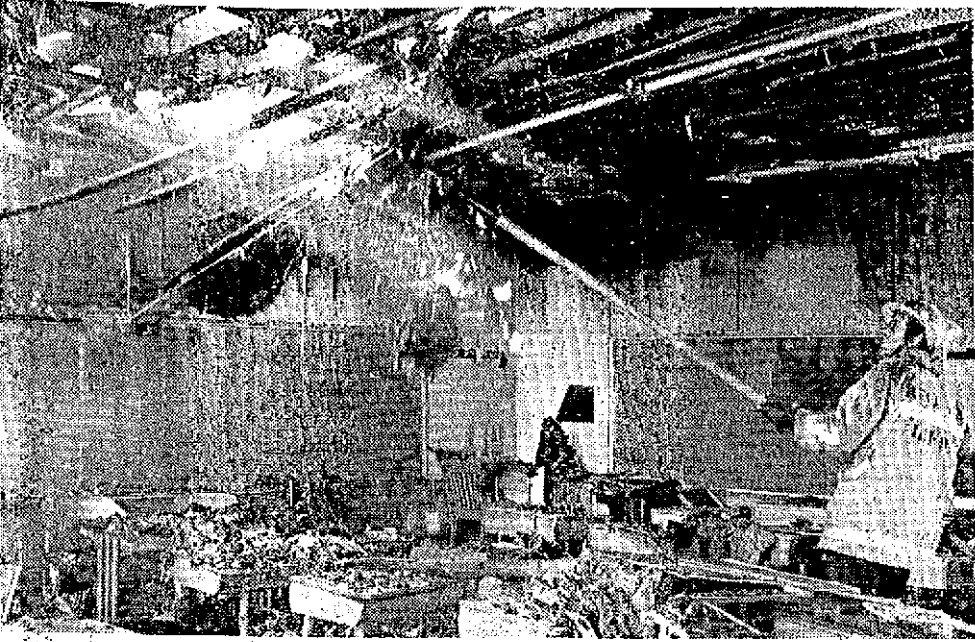

Both women said they were not bitter about the Army's deception, but Mrs. Kephart said she still resented the fact that her father was not immediately admitted to the military hospital — to which as a civilian employee of the Army he was entitled — and that the private doctor — whom she declined to name — "had to take the rap."

'Nonpolitical' character of Ford's Calif. trip defended

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

SAN DIEGO. Campaign Director Howard "Bo" Calloway Saturday defended the "nonpolitical" character of President Ford's current California trip and declared, "We're not going to let anyone laugh him out of meeting with his constituents."

Reporters covering Calloway's news conference at the Republican State Convention had asked why the President didn't plan a stop here.

"I've taken the position, rightly or wrongly," Calloway answered, "that he should not start campaigning this early."

Newsman gave him a "you've got to be kidding" reaction. He soberly assured them that he was not.

The President's right to communicate with any Americans who want to communicate with him should not be met with laughter or cynicism, Calloway said. "It would be political if he came here."

The former secretary of the Army was further strained by a barrage of questions on the fate of Vice President Nelson Rockefeller if Ford should win renomination.

Calloway, practiced from the persistence of the question over the past weeks, said the vice presidential choice was open and that Ford would make a decision near convention time next summer.

But the theorem stressed Ford's pleasure with the job Rockefeller has done as vice president. It stressed as well that the committee Calloway heads is a Ford committee, not a Ford-Rockefeller committee, and that the campaign welcomes support to Ford without a proviso of loyalty to a vice presidential choice.

Finally, Calloway said, Rockefeller's own wishes with regard to continuing in his post are not known.

Newsman, reading Ford's open stance on his running mate as an attempt to soothe the GOP's anti-Rockefeller element while Ford solidifies national support, got no concurrence from Calloway.

Asked when the President will, indeed, start campaigning and how the start will be signified, Calloway said he expects the campaign to become officially political after the State of the Union message, or roughly Feb. 1, 1976. All will know, he said, because it will be posted on the White House bulletin board.

Calloway said he takes former Gov. Ronald Reagan at his word that he has not made a decision on challenging Ford for the GOP nomination, but "I must plan on the assumption that he is running. It will be easy enough to back off if he does not run."

San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, fresh from a reelection landslide, indicated at a news conference that he will support Ford and also U.S. Senate candidate Robert H. Finch but that his formal announcements will await proper timing.

Republican Wilson praised Reagan as qualified "but not as well qualified as Ford." Wilson said he entertains some doubt about Reagan's declaration, noting, "I think he's a realist and not one who would seek to leave as his final contribution to the party a divisive race."

"If he is not reasonably assured that he has a very good chance, he probably will not make the race."

Reagan's national campaign chief, John Sears, told newsmen he thinks "there's not much left for Reagan to resolve," in arriving at a decision on whether to challenge Ford.

Supporting his own "no doubt" that Reagan will run, Sears intimated that a recent speaking engagement by Reagan's wife, Nancy, in Michigan was evidence.

Sears cited as a possible additional credit to a Reagan candidacy the pervasive national blame of Washington, D.C. for the country's ills.

Jail time linked to recidivism

There is a direct relationship between the length of time a person spends in jail and whether or not he will ever return to jail.

Recidivism tends to increase as jail time increases and to decrease as jail time decreases.

This was the conclusion of the head of the Orange County Criminal Justice Council this week following a detailed two-year study of the matter which will be presented to Orange County supervisors Tuesday.

Keith Concannon, executive director of the council, also concluded that courts, probation officers, law enforcement officers and the Justice Council should meet soon to discuss alternative treatment strategies for light offenders who apparently do not need any jail time. Peter Schultz, who compiled the study, concluded that it would be "more cost effective if no prisoners were sent to jail."

His study for the council showed that "no sentence or a short term sentence is associated with lower levels of recidivism."

Schultz said he considers it likely that the best deterrent to recidivism is a short jail term coupled with extended probation, so that the person involved can be under supervision.

Schultz said his study also indicates there is no correlation between the judge's sentencing and the amount of data given the court concerning the prospects of the defendant in making good or going back to jail.

Usually the court has data from the probation department on the rehabilitation prospects of the prisoner but there is also input from other sources and transport him to the hospital.

Harbor officer Phil Dudley said a witness reported seeing Henson's truck eastbound on Paseo del Mar at Pt. Fermin about 1:30 p.m. Suddenly it made a sharp turn, drove across 60 feet of dirt, bounced once off the cliff, then landed nose down on the rocks.

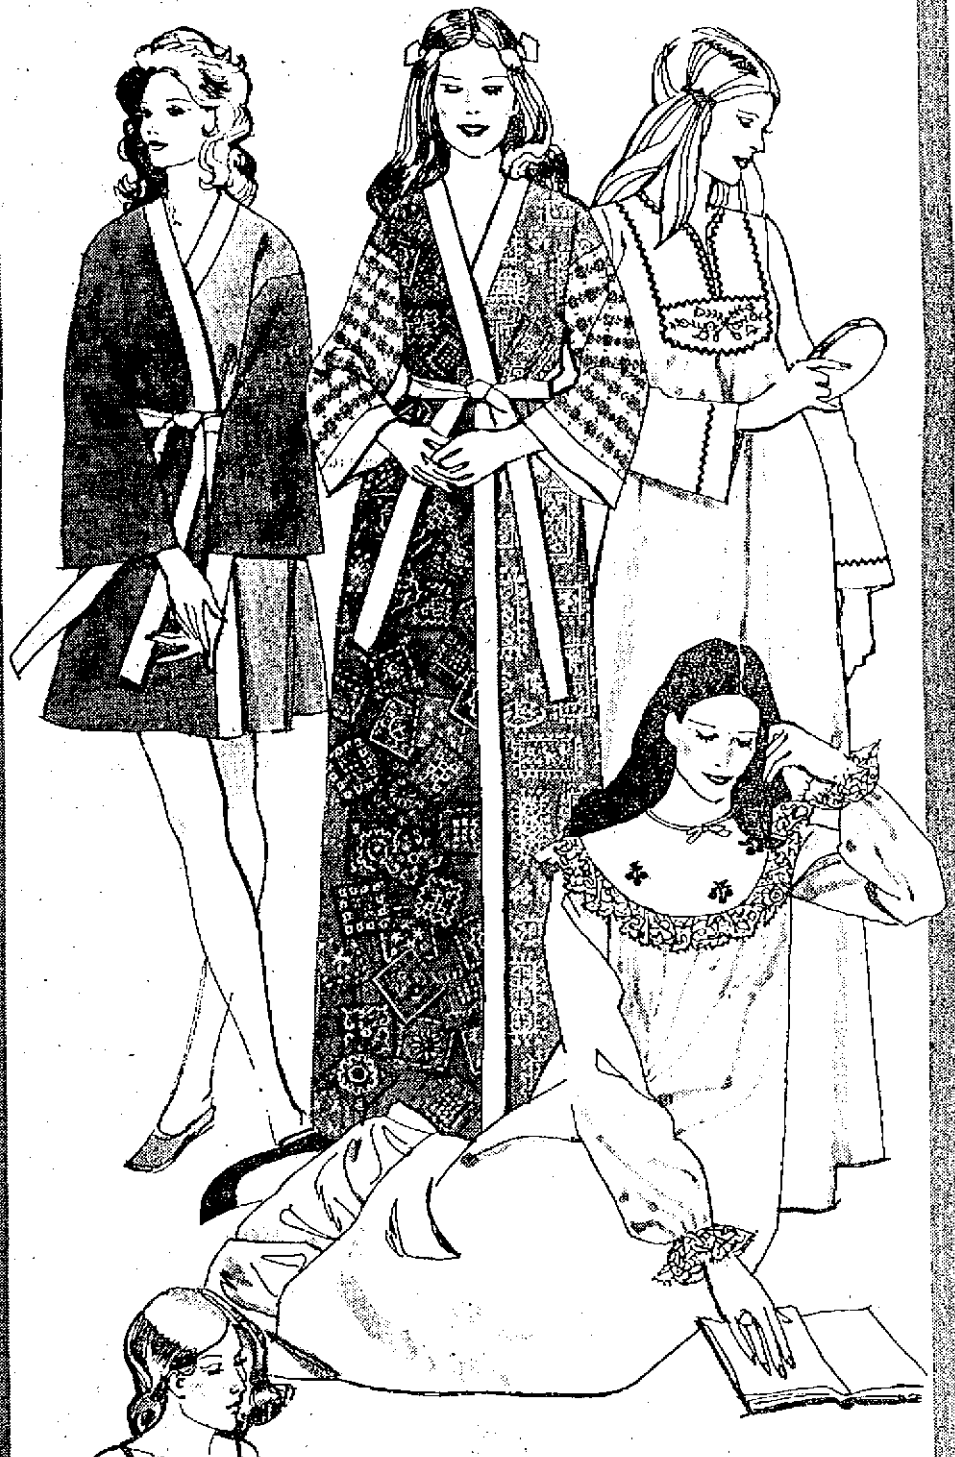

Henson, the witness said, was able to crawl out of the wreckage before he collapsed.

MAP SHOWS 5-MILE PLANNING BOUNDARY, PROPOSED MANAGEMENT ZONE BOUNDARY AND 1,000-YARD PERMIT BOUNDARY

New coastal-zone boundaries urged

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

The State Coastal Commission, in adopting a proposed coastal plan for California last week, recommended the creation of a new coastal zone within the five-mile planning boundary originally mandated by Proposition 20. The new zone would be called the Coastal Resource Management Area.

In effect, the commission said there is nothing particularly sacred about the five-mile figure. Indeed, most of the state's coastal resources, it indicated, lie within a variable strip of land that is considerably seaward of the five-mile boundary.

In Long Beach, for example, the resource management area comes closer to duplicating the 1,000-yard permit area than the five-mile zone. Save for a slight jog in the line near Ximeno Avenue and Anaheim Street, the management area boundary runs straight west along Seventh Street until it reaches the Los Angeles River. Then it shifts north to Pacific Coast Highway, where it continues west until it hits Western Avenue in the Wilmington area.

IN other parts of the state—notably in rural and undeveloped areas—the line extends in some instances to the five-mile line, or the nearest coastal range (whichever is closer to the ocean).

If the Legislature accepts the concept of an inner and outer zone, as the two might be called, the future management of California's coastline, then, will focus largely on that relatively narrow zone that contains the state's beaches and coastal bluffs, its coastal estuaries, bays and wetlands, and its coastal recreation and agricultural lands.

The management zone is also felt to be more realistic than the existing 1,000-yard permit zone, since the latter also has an arbitrary quality about it.

UNDER Proposition 20—the initiative measure that was passed by the voters three years ago to protect the coastline against helter-skelter development—the permit zone is the area in which new construction and development are regulated through a permit system run by the state commission and its six regional bodies.

The state commission, in adopting the coastal plan, called for the continuation of the present permit system for up to three years, during which time local governments would prepare their own implementation plans.

Thus, if the state plan is enacted into law by the Legislature, the commissions would continue for three years beyond the December, 1976, expiration date of Proposition 20.

After that interim period, the job of regulation would revert to the communities, with the state agency acting more or less as a watchdog and appeals board.

AS for the six regional commissions, they would go out of business after the three-year period.

The local governments, in developing their own implementation plans, would be required to bring them into conformity with the state coastal plan. Their coastal policies, moreover, would be governed geographically by the proposed Coastal Resource Management line, rather than the five-mile boundary or the existing 1,000-yard permit line.

Until the cities' plans are actually certified by the state agency, however, the commissions would exercise their permit power within the 1,000-yard line or the coastal management line, depending on which is closer to the mean high tide.

But the state panel made it clear that the coastal communities would be encouraged to develop their own plans as quickly as possible—the incentive presumably being the right to take back the reins of coastal authority as soon as the local plans are certified.

In agreeing to have the local governments implement the coastal plan, the commission, in effect, acceded to the principle of local control. But it nonetheless reserved the right to overrule the localities in important areas.

Thus, under the commission's proposals, the state coastal body would have the right to reverse local regulatory decisions when it came to variances or conditional use permits, the approval of large commercial or institutional projects, and the approval of structures close to waterways, wetlands, beaches, bluffs and prime agricultural lands.

In addition, it would have the right to reverse a permit denial involving an energy installation designed to serve more than just the community in which it was located.

As for that outer zone extending from the management zone boundary to the five-mile limit, the commission proposed—after first voting otherwise—that the state coastal agency take a direct hand in approving energy facilities and major public works in the area.

The idea behind the move was that major public projects—such as highways and sewer systems—could not help but have an effect on the immediate coastal environment.

In carrying out the coastal plan on a local level, the coastal communities would be guided by several considerations: the enhancement and maintenance of shoreline recreation areas, the protection of coastal estuaries and wetlands, the protection of agricultural lands, the preservation of forest resources, the designation of scenic areas and the protection of wildlife habitats.

Also the protection and rehabilitation of existing low and moderate-income housing, water conservation, prudent energy plant siting, the correlation of transportation systems to coastal recreation areas and the protection of soil and mineral resources.

If the commission's recommendations are adopted, the price tag could run to $5.5 million a year for the first few years, with an additional $250 million required for the acquisition and restoration of certain coastal properties.

The annual costs would diminish, however, as the local governments assumed a greater share of the responsibility for implementing the act, and as the regional and state commissions gradually gave up their permit authority. Beyond that, though, the costs would be defrayed to a great extent by funds available under the U. S. Coastal Zone Management Act.

The commission adopted the coastal plan after two days of tiring, sometimes confusing deliberation—but on a final note of self-congratulation.

"Proposition 20 was an experiment," declared commission chairman Melvin Lane. "And we believe the voters have gotten results. It has been long, tedious work and has proven there are no easy answers. The plan will keep changing as it goes forward."

Commissioner Roger Osenbaugh expressed the feeling of many, though, when he indicated that the commission's biggest job my lie ahead, when it has to sell the plan to the Legislature.

Since the authority of the state and regional commissions ends Dec. 31, 1976, the Legislature is expected to act before then, but there's no guarantee that it will adopt the commission's plan without significant revision.

There's good reason to believe, in fact, that a strong argument will be made for restoration of local control well before the three-year interim period expires at the end of 1979.

18 rescued as boat hits buoy

Navy and Coast Guardmen rescued 18 persons from a 38-foot chartered sportsfishing boat which began to ship water after it struck a buoy off San Clemente Island Saturday morning.

Coast Guard spokesman Del Horton said the accident occurred about 5:20 a.m.

The 18 were picked up by small Navy launches which were in the area. They later were transferred to the Coast Guard cutter Point Hobart from Oceanside which arrived at the scene about 9:30 a.m. and were taken to the Avalon terminal so they could return to the mainland.

The fishing boat New Long Pin was towed by a Navy craft to Wilson Cove in San Clemente. There were no injuries in the incident.

Antitheft labels

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. Saturday signed a bill requiring permanent serial numbers be placed on all appliances costing more than $50 in California to help police identify stolen property.

The measure by Assemblyman Alfred Siegler, D-Vallejo, takes effect April 1, 1977.

New waterbed idea gels; old leaks patched

By SHAWN G. KENNEDY
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — In 1970 the waterbed was the bed of the future. Everyone wanted to buy one — or at least try one out. But enthusiasm for it faded somewhat when owners discovered that it came with more than a few unpleasant, if not dangerous side effects, among them seasickness and cold leaky mattresses.

But designers at Loftcraft, a Manhattan concern that specializes in made-to-order bedroom furniture, and a chemical engineer have come up with what they feel is a solution. They have designed a bed they say will end those nightmares of the waterbed enthusiasts. They call it the Gel-bed.

Instead of just water, the Gel-bed mattress is filled with Flo-lok, a plastic substance (with a consistency not unlike that of applesauce) that supports the body and at the same time lets the mattress move with it. So the floating sensation of the waterbed is still there.

But unlike the waterbed, this movement is not fast enough to make waves.

"There are more advantages," said Randy Parsons, president of the three-year old Loftcraft. "The Gel-bed is not as heavy as the waterbed; it's about one third the weight. And it is not cold, so you don't need a heater."

Still, it is a liquid, so what about accidents? Parsons was asked.

"It won't flood anything," he said. "The Flo-lok might ooze out onto the bedding if the mattress splits or is punctured, but it doesn't move fast, so you just scrape it up, dump it into the toilet and patch up the bed."

Parsons said that the outside covering on the mattress was extremely strong so it was not likely that it would tear.

One advantage of the Gel-bed that waterbed owners will appreciate is that it doesn't require a special frame; it may be used on a platform bed or a regular bed frame.

The Flo-lok mattress can be purchased separately — they range in price from $170 to $300 depending on the size — but the company will also build an entire frame. Their designs go from the spartan, a plain birch platform bed, to the luxurious, the box bed that boasts such extras as stained glass and shelves for stereo equipment.

Fight joined to break TV's condom-ads ban

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Zero Population Growth, a national population limitation lobby, has joined an effort to break the ban on television advertising of condoms, according to the organization's September newsletter.

ZPG spokeswoman Susan Lowe said condom ads have been carried recently by television stations KNTV in San Jose, Calif., and WJAN in Canton, Ohio. She said local ZPG members have been urged to "write now in support of contraceptive advertising" to stations carrying such ads.

A Newark, N.J., radio station, WNJR, had a six-week advertising campaign on the contraceptives, directed at black listeners, but it did not use the word "condom" as the TV ads do, Ms. Lowe said.

ZPG promotes stability of the U.S. population as soon as possible, by voluntary means.

The National Association of Broadcasters Code Authority bans advertising of contraceptives on participating stations, ZPG said.

About 60 per cent of TV stations subscribe to the NAB code, which was revised in November, 1972, to allow the advertising of sanitary napkins, douches and other personal and sanitary products — but not contraceptives, the organization said.

Condom producers, ZPG representatives and other population and family planning groups plan to attend a meeting Oct. 6-8 of the NAB Code Authority's TV Code Board in New York City and push for further relaxation of the code to allow condom and other contraceptive advertising.

"When advertisers want to break the code or have it changed, they customarily run their ads on noncode stations and then prove to the code boards that such advertising did not cause a public outcry," ZPG said.

The condom ads running on KNTV, San Jose, emphasize "responsible parenthood," it said.

GSA assailed for property tradeoff

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., accused the General Services Administration Saturday of making the Air Force exchange $19.5 million worth of industrial property in California for an office building that has become a "white elephant."

Brooks, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, said he would call GSA Administrator Arthur Sampson and Air Force officials to testify at hearings Oct. 2 into the property tradeoff.

The swap, made in March 1974, left the GSA with a huge office building built by Rockwell International, a major defense contractor, at Laguna Niguel, Calif., about 12 miles from Richard M. Nixon's home at San Clemente.

While Brooks did not say so in announcing the hearings, committee members were expected to explore the possibility that the office building was acquired chiefly to store Nixon's presidential papers.

Of the 50,000 square feet of space available in the building, Brooks said, only 190,000 square feet are in use after 18 months because other government agencies refuse to use it.

"This building has turned out to be a white elephant," he said. "We would like to find out why the Air Force declared property it was still using to be excess so it could be exchanged. We would also like to know why the GSA acquired a $20 million office building without congressional approval."

Sampson, responding to

Brooks' charges, said it was the congressman's fault if the building had become a "white elephant" because he had personally held up the exchange for a year. The delay, he said, caused federal agencies scheduled to go into the building to renew leases elsewhere.

"Additionally, there have been indications that the intervention of Congressman Brooks has made some agencies reluctant to occupy space in the building," Sampson said.

Sampson also lashed out at Brooks for criticizing the transaction before the hearings begin. "Apparently he has made up his mind already, which is typical of his conduct in such matters in the past," he said.

Brooks said the exchange was worked out with GSA after Rockwell found it no longer needed the building and could not find a buyer for it.

Rockwell, Brooks said, was permitted to draw up a list of Air Force property it wanted and GSA then declared it to be surplus.

Scott's brother said key to Patty's arrest

By WALLACE TURNER
New York Times Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The arrest of Patricia Hearst and three radical companions resulted from information Walter Scott gave the FBI about a hideout in Pennsylvania, an official close to the investigation said Saturday.

Scott, a 42-year-old brother of Jack Scott, the radical sports figure, went to the Harrisburg, Pa., police the night of Jan. 31 and volunteered that he had information about where Patricia Hearst might be hiding, the source said.

Miss Hearst, granddaughter of William Randolph Hearst and daughter of Randolph A. Hearst, an executive in the family's complex of real estate, newspaper and mining interests, was kidnapped on Feb. 4, 1974, a few days short of a year before Scott went to the Harrisburg police.

The Harrisburg police immediately put Scott in touch with an FBI agent, who questioned him. This information was checked out by agents for months, but within a few weeks the effects of his disclosures began to be felt in the radical underground.

In March, a federal grand jury in eastern Pennsylvania began to take evidence bearing on inquiries traceable to Scott's disclosures. There were unconfirmed reports that Miss Hearst and William and Emily Harris had been hiding out in a rural area.

In San Francisco, The Examiner, of which Randolph Hearst then was editor, reported the discovery in a farmhouse of fingerprints of Miss Hearst, the Harrises and Wendy Yoshimura, a woman fleeing prosecution on an indictment involving illegal possession of explosives.

The farmhouse is at South Canaan, Pa., 20 miles from Scranton. It turned out to be untrue, however, that Miss Hearst's fingerprints were found there.

The Harrises, members of the self-styled Symbionese Liberation Army, a radical group that kidnapped and apparently converted Miss Hearst to its cause, and Miss Yoshimura were arrested in the same area here Thursday, as was Miss Hearst.

Saturday, the San Francisco police issued an all-points bulletin for the arrest of Kathleen and Josephine Soliah, sisters of Stephen Soliah who rented the apartment in San Francisco where Miss Hearst and Miss Yoshimura were seized.

Prosecutors said at Soliah's bail hearing and arraignment Friday that the sisters had been seen moving between the flats where the Harrises lived and where Miss Hearst and Miss Yoshimura lived.

A police inspector said the sisters were wanted in connection with an investigation of explosives, possession of illegal weapons and conspiracy. The bulletin warned that they were armed and dangerous and should be approached cautiously.

The FBI has not detailed how it discovered the houses where Miss Hearst, Miss Yoshimura and the Harrises were arrested Thursday afternoon.

The San Francisco Chronicle said Saturday that a rookie FBI agent, who was not named in the account, managed to follow a man and a woman through the streets of San Francisco a few days ago without their discovering him. He followed them as they moved between three different houses, and it was at two of these that the arrests were made.

The Chronicle's account said that agents were in vans and camper bodies on pickup trucks where they could watch the houses to see who went in and out. That was how they found the Harrises. To make certain that it was William Harris, an agent, dressed in the style of the neighborhood, followed him into a public laundry, nodding and smiling.

Miss Harris, still had not been sighted. But on Monday Stephen Soliah had been seen entering one of the "safe" houses of the SLA. Finally, on Thursday afternoon the FBI moved on the Harrises, picking them off as they returned home from a jogging outing. That was about 1:15 p.m.

Other agents then moved on the other two addresses — one of which has not yet been made

Harris' parents visit him, promise support

REDWOOD CITY (AP) — The parents of captured Symbionese Liberation Army member William Harris had a "joyful" reunion with their imprisoned son Saturday and said afterward: "He'll get all the support we can possibly offer."

Harris' mother and stepfather, Betty and Lt. Col. Jerry Bunnell of Carmel, Ind., visited him at the San Mateo County Jail here where he is being held with his wife, Emily, and Patricia Hearst. They also saw Emily in a separate visiting room.

"I'm so joyful," Mrs. Bunnell said after the visits. "I didn't know where he was or whether he would be shot down." She said the meeting with Emily also was "very joyful. They both looked real good."

Asked whether she was worried about her son's future, Mrs. Bunnell said: "No. I'm just a mother with hope."

"Hi, honey," were her first words to her son, she said.

Her son told her "that he loved me and missed me," Mrs. Bunnell said, and asked about his two sisters. She said she didn't ask him about his activities during the 19 months since the SLA kidnapped Miss Hearst.

Mrs. Bunnell said the family would give as much financial assistance as they could to the Harrises, who told a U.S. magistrate on Friday they couldn't afford a lawyer to defend them on various state and federal charges.

"But we're just average middle-class Americans living in a mortgaged house," Mrs. Bunnell added.

She said her son asked for some money so he could buy cigarettes, and they left $20 with the sheriff.

What made her do it?

Patty Hearst's odyssey

"Please call it a rescue, not a capture." —Catherine Hearst

By JACK V. FOX

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)

—What makes Patty run?

What made her run for a year and half after she was dragged away by a weird terrorist group into bank robbery, kidnapping and shooting?

What made her run clear across the country, leading the FBI on its most embarrassing chase, only to give up without a struggle 12 miles from the Berkeley apartment where she was abducted?

HER PARENTS say it was fear. Fear of her captors in the Symbionese Liberation Army. Fear of being shot if she tried to turn herself in. A terror-inspired "conversion" to revolution through brainwashing and looking into a gun barrel.

Patty herself hasn't yet said.

But the two faces of the 21-year-old, 100-pound newspaper heiress—one named Patty and one named Tania—are so contradictory that a federal judge has refused to release her on $1 million bail lest she start running again.

A few insights into Patty's motivations have come to light in her behavior since she pleaded with officers not to shoot when they finally tracked her to a tiny apartment in the Mission district of San Francisco.

One of the most significant was her first meeting in jail with her mother, father and two sisters.

ACCORDING to publisher Randolph A. Hearst's San Francisco Examiner, she greeted her parents as "mom" and "dad" and happily surrendered herself to their embraces. In several of her celebrated tape recordings she had referred to them as "pigs" and called her father a "corporate liar."

When the visit was over, Hearst said, "We asked her if she wanted to come home with us." Her mother said that Patty replied: "Where else?"

"Please call it a rescue, not a capture," said Mrs. Hearst.

When she was booked into the San Mateo County jail she was asked to list her occupation. She said, "Urban guerrilla. Self employed."

Those words were influential in the decision of U.S. District Judge Oliver Carter to reject her release on bail. He said what worried him was whether the girl was "a flight risk."

The manner of her arrest seemed to make it possible she wanted to be caught.

She had moved into the top floor of the two-story apartment building Sept. 9 with Miss Yoshimura.

THURSDAY afternoon at 2:25 p.m. two FBI agents and two San Francisco Police Department officers went to the apartment building.

Jerry Prill, who had rented the apartment to the fugitives, said he had spent the morning sawing wood on the floor below and heard the two girls above laughing throughout the day.

As Prill tells it, he was approached by the officers and told the women were criminal suspects. The front door to the girls' apartment was triple-locked so he led the officers to a back door.

FBI agent Tom Padden called out to the women and when Miss Yoshimura opened the door slightly, Padden yelled, "Don't move or I'll blast your head off!" Prill said. Patty cried: "Don't shoot, I'll go with you."

Tim Casey, police inspector accompanying Padden, tells a slightly different story. He said he told Patty, "Don't make a move," and she replied, "All right."

In a picture snapped of Patty in a police car she wore a huge grin. She seemed almost exhilarated.

If Patty had wanted to give herself up, it appears there was nothing to stop her so far as the remnants of the SLA were concerned.

Randolph Hearst and his wife, understandably, reacted as would any parents concerned for a child they love.

"If people will remember, she was originally a kidnap victim," he said. "I'm sure she's going to have some unpleasant times, but I don't see that there's anything she should be terribly afraid of."

But he appeared, perhaps, to underestimate the gravity of charges against her.

Patty faces trial in three different court jurisdictions on 22 charges including kidnapping, robbery, bank robbery, assault with intent to murder and violations of national firearms laws.

Maximum penalty for her alleged participation in the Hibernia bank robbery in San Francisco could be 25 years in federal prison.

She faces 19 felony charges in Los Angeles that could send her to prison for life.

Patty will appear again in federal court Tuesday for a full hearing on whether to grant bail and, possibly, to decide upon which area will have first jurisdiction.

There was an almost carnival-like atmosphere at the 20-story federal building in San Francisco's civil center area during the first two hearings as hundreds of the curious jostled to see Patty and snap her picture.

"Do you think she was brainwashed?" asked one teen-age girl.

"I'll bet she'll be home and free by Christmas," said another.

A waitress in one of San Francisco's fine restaurants was cynical.

"All I can say is that Patty sure upstaged Squeaky Fromme," she said.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning said Saturday Patty Hearst may have to testify herself to convince a federal judge she will not jump bail while awaiting trial on federal bank robbery charges.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter revoked Miss Hearst's $500,000 bail Friday and set a final hearing on the matter for Tuesday.

Browning said in an interview that he originally had favored bail for Miss Hearst, but changed his mind when she termed herself an "urban guerrilla."

If Miss Hearst testifies, it would be her first major public utterance since her arrest.

The U.S. attorney also said Patty's parents, Randolph and Catherine Hearst may be called by her attorney to argue they could supervise their daughter adequately to ensure she does not flee.

Browning and Patty's attorney, Terence Hallinan, already have conferred on the possibility of resetting bail, an authoritative source said.

Hallinan was not available for comment.

Browning also said he originally had favored bail, but changed his mind shortly after Patty's arrest.

"When she listed her occupation as urban guerrilla and said she was still a dedicated revolutionary, I decided she was a bad bail risk. Then she also had a firearm in her purse," Browning said.

JUDGE Oliver J. Carter, sketched by KRON-TV artist Walt Stewart in San Francisco as jurist denied bail to Patty Hearst.

Hallinan said Friday night he regretted Patty's self-characterization as urban guerrilla when she was booked at the San Mateo County jail. He said he felt Patty was simply Patty's ex-lover says he feels 'uncertainty'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Steven Weed says it took him a year to put his life back in order after his fiancée, Patricia Hearst, was kidnapped from their Berkeley apartment by terrorists.

Now she's been captured and jailed, and Weed is submerged in turmoil once again.

"In many ways," Weed said in an interview Saturday, "I feel more uncertainty now than I did a week ago."

Weed, 28, was the only witness to Patty's abduction acting in exasperation in the face of a persistent clerk and that the remark was not meant to be taken literally.

"If she can satisfy me next week that she won't run if bail is set, then I won't oppose it," Browning said. "But, of course the final decision is up to Judge Carter."

During a court hearing on bail Friday, Judge Carter said, "In this case we have a person who has announced to the world with others their revolution against the system. And I am inclined to believe them until they tell me otherwise. They said it to the world and then punctuated it with gunfire."

The judge said it would take strong evidence to make him change his mind and reinstate bail.

"I spent a year of my life trying to put this thing behind me and coming to the point where I really felt that I understood what happened and why...I tied up all the loose ends," he said.

"But now it's like stage two; it's like things have started all over again. I feel extremely unsettled."

Weed was interviewed by the San Francisco Examiner.

LANDS BILL A TOSS-UP BY BROWN

SACRAMENTO (AP) — What does a governor do when two identical bills reach his desk and only one can become law?

If he's California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., he tosses a coin.

Brown faced the decision this week when he got two carbon-copy measures to authorize the State Lands Commission to remove artificial structures or obstructions from lands in its jurisdiction.

The coin came up heads, so the governor signed a bill by Assemblyman Terry Goggin of San Bernardino and vetoed one by Sen. Nate Holden of Culver City. Both are first-term Democrats.

"There seemed no fairer method of avoiding redundant statutory language," Brown said Saturday.

Teamsters take lead over UFW

SALINAS (AP) — Results of two farm labor elections announced Saturday in the rich Salinas Valley have pushed the Teamsters Union ahead of the United Farm Workers in the total number of field hands represented and elections won.

Employees at Bruce Church Ranch here who voted Friday under California's new farm labor representation law cast 302 votes for the Teamsters to 186 for the rival UFW, with 11 workers voting for "no union representation."

The results of a runoff election at Oshida Farms gave the Teamsters 120 votes to 74 for the UFW.

EMPLOYEES at a second Bruce Church holding in Santa Maria voted earlier to be represented in negotiations by the UFW. The Salinas ranch is considered a separate unit.

The latest wins gave the Teamsters 61 victories to 52 for the Cesar Chavez-led UFW. The Teamsters Union now has won the right to represent about 7,900 workers to 7,600 for the UFW.

Results of several key elections, including the crucial vote at E & J Gallo Winery, will probably not be known for weeks until the Agricultural Labor Relations Board—which supervises the elections—decides how to handle the votes of "economic strikers." They are employees who left their jobs when the UFW struck grape ranches in 1973.

ALRB officials scheduled a hearing on the Gallo votes for Oct. 6 in Merced. A ruling there will be used in counting ballots at half a dozen other major ranches where the strikers votes will decide the results, included among the disputed ranches is the huge Guimarra Vineyard, the nation's largest grape grower.

Berkeley fire fighters back on job

BERKELEY (UPI) — Berkeley firemen returned to their jobs Saturday, ending a 25-day strike.

Members of the Berkeley Association of Fire Fighters voted 119-18 to approve the new contract Friday night. All eight engine companies were fully manned by 8 a.m. Saturday.

"We would have liked to see some more movement on the financial issues," said Jack Rinne, president of the firemen's union. "But the city did make concessions in nonfinancial areas."

Rinne said the pact provides for a 15% per cent raise over two years, beginning with an immediate 10 per cent hike retroactive to July 1. Firemen will not be compensated for their four weeks off the job.

Brown vetoes state employe 'pick work hours' bill

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A proposal to let most state employes set their own working hours was vetoed Saturday by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.

The bill by Assemblyman Leroy Greene, D-Sacramento, would have required all state employes, except for state colleges and other selected institutions, to set up a flexible time program by January 1977.

Under the program, now used by some private companies, employers set time boundaries and allow workers to choose their hours between the limits. For example, an employee might be allowed to work any eight hours between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Proponents of the system say it can allow employes more time with their families, reduces rush-hour traffic, and increases morale and productivity.

Brown said he agreed flexible time scheduling can have those effects "under appropriate circumstances."

But he added, "Those objectives can more effectively be achieved under existing law" without blanket requirements.

Among bills signed by the Democratic governor was a measure outlawing the so-called bait-and-switch advertising technique.

The bill by Sen. Ruben Ayala, D-Chino, would make it a crime to advertise an unavailable, low-price item for the purpose of enticing a customer into a store. Current law allows prosecutors to file civil suits for fraudulent advertising in such cases.

Brown vetoed a bill by Assemblyman Lawrence Kapiloff, D-San Diego, that would have limited the permit fees cities and counties charge for low-rent housing developments for the elderly. Kapiloff said the measure was aimed at curbing rents.

Other bills signed included:

—A measure by Assemblyman Howard Berman, D-Beverly Hills, allowing school teachers to take pregnancy leaves.

—A bill by Assemblyman Ken Maddy, R-

Fresno, allowing recall proceedings against a local official to begin 90 days after the official takes office, instead of the current six months.

—A burglary prevention measure by Assemblyman Alfred Siegler, D-Vallejo, requiring all appliances sold in California after next April 1 to have a serial number.

Japan protests Pan Am rate cut

By RICHARD HALLORAN
New York Times Service

TOKYO — Pan American World Airways, joined by Northwest Orient Airlines, has opened up a rate war against Japan Air Lines and other Asian carriers across the Pacific Ocean.

The American carriers have drastically cut their round-trip economy class excursion fares, drawing first private and now public protests from the Japanese carrier and the Japanese government, which inadvertently permitted the new fares through a bureaucratic slipup.

For a ticket from New York to Tokyo that once cost $1,318, the traveler may fly now for $850 provided he is gone more than 30 days and less than 120. The same roundtrip ticket from San Francisco that was $1,040 is $570 now.

The Japanese Foreign Ministry delivered what an American diplomat described as a "clearly worded" protest to the American Embassy Friday, demanding that the United States government have Pan Am and Northwest withdraw their new rates.

American officials said the next step would be for the State Department to consult with the Civil Aeronautics Board to determine an American position. They said there appeared to be three choices — to ignore the Japanese protest, to back down, or to negotiate. They indicated that negotiations were the most likely course.

The officials also said this issue was but one of several aviation disputes between the United States and Japan, including a Japanese request for more landing rights in the United States.

Meanwhile, it was learned Saturday Japan Air Lines has proposed a new transpacific round trip fare of $650 to counter Pan Am's latest discount rates.

The sources said JAL, working through the International Air Transport Association in Geneva, has asked major world airlines to vote by mail on its $650 proposal.

The Japan Times said JAL president Shizuo Asada is trying to persuade Pan Am to work out a compromise fare.

The current dispute over the lucrative transpacific routes began on Aug. 1, when Pan Am applied for the new fares to the CAB and the Japan Civil Aviation Bureau of the Ministry of Transport. The approval of both is required by the Civil Aviation Pact between the two nations.

The CAB in Washington approved. But the Japanese CAB telephoned Pan Am on Aug. 13 and the American Embassy on Aug. 14 that it disapproved. The air pact requires, however, that written notice be received within 15 days of the application. But the Japanese did not file their written notice with the American Embassy until Aug. 19.

The spokesman from Pan Am, supported by officials at the American Embassy, asserted that Pan Am's application to the Japanese CAB was therefore, automatically approved under the treaty.

This past week, the Japanese government leaked the story to the Japanese press as it was preparing its protest to the American Embassy — without revealing that it had missed the deadline for giving written notice of disapproval.

Instead, officials of the Japanese government, including the Minister of Transport, Mutsuo Kimura, and of Japan Airlines have publicly accused Pan Am and the United States CAB of "unilaterally" cutting fares in violation of the Civil Aviation Pact.

Secret island deal with England told

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

LONDON (AP) — The United States gave Britain a concealed discount of between $8.5 million and $9.5 million on purchases of missiles and spare parts for its Polaris fleet to cover nearly all the costs of buying an Indian Ocean island for U.S. naval use, informed sources said Saturday.

The secret deal in the mid-1960s related to the controversial project for developing Diego Garcia, a coral atoll in the Chagos Archipelago, as an American air and naval communications center.

INFORMANTS said Britain bought the Chagos group in 1966 from its then colony of Mauritius, contributed to resettling Diego Garcia islanders and took over a privately owned company which had worked the island's copra plantations. Copra is dried coconut meat.

Most of the 1,200 evacuees are now living in makeshift slums in Mauritius, earning an average of about $30 a month as part-time port workers, truck loaders or domestic servants.

Their plight has aroused controversy among U.S. and British lawmakers. As a result, informants said, the governments in London and Washington are consulting at a high level, to coordinate the explanations they are being pressed to offer the project's critics.

In Washington, a spokesman said the Pentagon had no comment on the report.

U.S. Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger last spring gave this breakdown of what Congress has allocated for the project and what the ultimate cost is likely to be:

— $18.1 million for the construction of various installations.

— $13.8 million requested, but not yet approved by Congress, to permit building to proceed in fiscal 1975-76.

— An overall amount of $108 million estimated as the ultimate cost of improvements, construction, food, salaries and other expenses.

These figures do not, sources stressed, include the amount of the discount allowed to Britain for its 1966 purchases. The discount reportedly covered Britain's initial costs in buying the Chagos chain and the takeover of the copra company. The British coughed up an extra $1.5 million in 1973 toward resettling the islanders, who, the Foreign Office said, were reluctantly evacuated to Mauritius.

The basic argument used by the United States in its resolve to press ahead with the Diego Garcia project is to counter the spread of Soviet naval power in the Indian Ocean.

This has been portrayed as a vital Western interest. A strong U.S. air and naval presence in Diego Garcia — 11 square miles of land in the center of 28 million square miles of Indian Ocean — is to insure access to oil tanker lanes from the Persian Gulf to Europe and Japan.

PENTAGON plans include deepening Diego Garcia's lagoon to accommodate an aircraft carrier, destroyers and a tender able to service nuclear-powered submarines carrying nuclear-tipped missiles.

Fuel and ammunition bunkers, cold storage plants, a 600-man garrison, and a 12,000-foot airstrip also are planned. There are unconfirmed reports that giant B52 bombers might be based on the island.

The 1966 agreement makes the Chagos group available to the U.S. and British governments for 50 years and the flags of both countries will flutter over the islands.

Abu Rudeis oil running out

ABU RUDEIS, Israeli-occupied Sinai (UPI) — The nodding pumps dotting the flat sand as far as the eye can see will be useless within about a decade after Israel returns these oilfields to Egypt. There won't be any more oil to pump.

Israel pumps 100,000 barrels a day from 88 wells — 13 of them offshore — dotting the Sinai shoreline of the Gulf of Suez.

The output of 4 million tons of oil a year, all of it refined in Haifa and Ashdod, supplies Israel with 55 to 60 per cent of its annual needs — a staggering figure for a small nation with little money to buy such expensive commodities abroad.

The five oilfields in the Abu Rudeis complex — 32 miles long and 16 miles wide — will be returned to Egypt in mid-December as part of the interim peace agreement.

To compensate for the loss, the United States has agreed to give Israel an estimated $400 million a year for five years to buy oil and has agreed to guarantee oil supplies if no one will sell to Israel.

The government-run

Netivei Neft Co. has operated the oilfields since Israel seized them with the rest of Sinai in the 1967 Middle East war.

Its general manager, Jerusalem-born and Cambridge-educated Michael Kisch, said on a tour of the sun-baked installation that all the oil will be pumped out within 8 to 12 years at the present rate of production.

Many of the 160 artists pulled their own works off the walls of the Palace of Culture in Moscow's Park of Economic Achievements when they learned that city culture overseers had removed 41 of the 800 works on grounds they were biased.

Artists later announced that a compromise had been reached and the show would reopen Sunday.

Danes pay dearly for welfare state

By JOHN VINOCUR

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Something has gone wrong in a country where they start offering an optional extra year of high school in the fall so as not to drown the labor market.

Something is amiss in a place where someone can write a book called "Does It Pay to Earn More Money?"

No one suggests that a nation has gone rotten that provides everyone with good schools, virtually free medical care, dignified old age and the right to complain.

But Denmark acknowledges it is in trouble.

THE country has been Western Europe's leader in unemployment for the past year with up to 13 per cent of the blue-collar force jobless. Emigration ran to 40,000 in 1974 — the proportionate equivalent to 1.6 million people leaving the United States — and is now up 25 per cent, the highest rate in a century.

And since 1971, when they reached 44 per cent, taxes have represented a greater part of the gross national product than anywhere else in the industrialized world.

BEYOND the statistical horror show, the problem is that Denmark's troubles outpace recession and involve the functioning and growth of its superwelfare state.

Many Danes now believe that the country's recovery depends not only on the standard economic stimulants, but a deep decision on whether people want to continue in the direction the welfare state has brought them.

This direction is one in which 85 per cent of the population gets some kind of money from the state. That could mean 25 per cent off a subsidized house-painting bill, or two-thirds back from the cost of sending a child to a private kindergarten. You can get paid for moving from a private house to an apartment. You can get a tax break for moving from an apartment to a private house.

THIS direction has also meant that the number of employees in the state sector runs to about 700,000, the same amount employed by heavy industry.

On the local level, it requires a town like Gladsaxe, outside Copenhagen, with a population of 60,000, to have 3,000 municipal employees, 300 of them working in the tax division.

It means, too, that taxes to support the infrastructure are murderous, the kind that make a new Chevrolet cost $22,000 or a small Renault $7,000.

Ultimately the situation leads to a book like "Does It Pay to Earn More Money?" The book tries to answer a question that in most other places would be thought inconceivable: Can a salary increase mean less real income?

Danes, particularly those with incomes of around $10,000 a year, are so roped into a system of tax allowances for children, high taxes and sliding rent subsidies that the extra money from a promotion can take them out of a salary area with more advantageous social benefits.

EDITOR'S NOTE

Good schools, free health care, even payments on the TV set. That's what Denmark provides its citizens. But guess what? Most now regret it. Most are telling welfare statisticians to quit coddling the unemployed, get to work and turn the clock back — or ahead.

political opposites, the Central Labor Union and the Danish Federation of Industry, have agreed that a working wife often represents no additional income for a couple.

The result is a loss of worker initiative and a society that has maneuvered itself into putting a premium on production.

"If I offer some of my people a chance to work on Saturday at double time," a U.S. businessman said, "I'll be laughed at, and for good reason. Everybody knows that taxes will take so much of their overtime that what's left will barely pay for lunch, a beer and transport."

The Danish experience with unemployment over the past two years, resulting from the oil crisis, less competitive export products and a building boom not dampened early enough, has provided a good look at where the society has gone.

The state provides up to $500 a month after taxes to the jobless, and municipal governments can offer additional money so that rent, mortgage, car payments and even television payments can be met if they are considered a necessity.

A CONSTRUCTION worker like Einar Johansen said idleness has made him depressed, but Einar Dahl, a 49-year-old crane operator who has been out of work for the better part of two years, has another view:

"I'll say what other people are too embarrassed to say. In Denmark, unemployment is a paradise. It would take the devil himself now to make a young guy work in a factory. I've got a month's job in August for about $1,200. But because my kids are grown up, I'll pay around 60 per cent in taxes. Under those circumstances, you're being punished to work."

The Federation of Danish Industries says, hopefully, that Dahl's viewpoint reflects that of only the least efficient workers.

But Jorgen Nyboe, a home builder, complained publicly that he was unable to hire enough construction workers this summer, although thousands are out of work, and suggested that the problem could be the disproportion between unemployment benefits and taxes.

SVEND AUKEN, a Social Democratic member of Parliament, seemed to take the issue further and offend his traditional constituency by saying he could not believe some bricklayers were unable to find work. The bricklayers union brought suit, but Auker's point was made.

Workers say they feel the Danish system protects them from the whims of employers, but they often add that the country's 12 per cent inflation rate and high home and automobile prices penalize them in relation to wealthier Danes.

Dr. Claus Curdt-Christiansen admits this is so. A physician, he makes about $80,000 a year. He bought a home north of Copenhagen for about $100,000 because he figures deductions to homeowners effectively mean going from a 60 per cent to a 43 per cent tax bracket.

"A man with a quarter of my income couldn't really improve his situation," Christiansen said. "A Dane has to make about $20,000 a year to have room to maneuver so as to make tax savings."

FACING the world at 17 or 18 in the Danish context has become difficult as well. With unemployment among young people running at about 25 per cent, the state decided to add on an optional extra year of high school for students not continuing toward university degrees.

Mrs. Lise Nyboe Andersen's 17-year-old daughter, Agnete, will go into the shelter program at Hendriksholm High School outside the capital. "It looks like the best way for Agnete to mark time for a while," she said. "All her friends started looking for jobs and found it impossible."

There is no well-defined,

"In Denmark, unemployment is a paradise. It would take the devil himself now to make a young guy work in a factory...Under these circumstances, you're being punished to work."

right-left political blame to go with what public opinion polls show is mounting dissatisfaction because both the Social Democrats and the Conservatives have increased the social-welfare apparatus during their terms in office. But a gradual movement away from welfare state ideals looks clear.

GALLUP polls show that two-thirds of the population think taxes are unfair and 63 per cent feel the welfare state has gone too far. Another 55 per cent feel Danish society is moving in the wrong direction, a direction they think means undisciplined children, alienation and stress.

At the same time, there are indicators that Danes, considered liberal thinkers by the rest of the world, were also hardening their attitudes on life-style.

A recent poll showed 72 per cent thought the state had done enough for drug addicts and 59 per cent agreed with a decision to cut off the free supply of gas and electricity to a Copenhagen hippie commune. Another poll found 69 per cent wanting university students to pay back all their scholarship money to the state.

THERE has been a double political result. The Progress Party, the group most aggressively attacking government spending and taxes, has become the third largest political organization in the country. And the old-line parties have been pushed into calling for a moderate rollback in both taxes and government expenditures.

Led by Mogens Glistrup, a lawyer who says he has mastered the tax system so as never to have paid a penny, the Progress Party asserts Denmark will never become competitive again until it removes its barriers to initiative and ends the situation that makes work increasingly unattractive.

"If two years ago you said Denmark had enough libraries, why then you were a fascist, and you sounded like you were in favor of something like nuking Hanoi," said Stefan Kjaerulff-Schmidt, a Progress Party member of Parliament. "Glistrup has become respectable. He is no longer considered mentally unsound. And the old parties are imitating him."

THE LAST budget of the minority Social Democratic government does provide, in fact, less government spending. The maximum age for children's allowances to parents has been lowered from 18 to 16, and the hiring of kindergarten teachers has been stopped. The school-construction budget is being reined in and there are some limitations in the area of medical assistance.

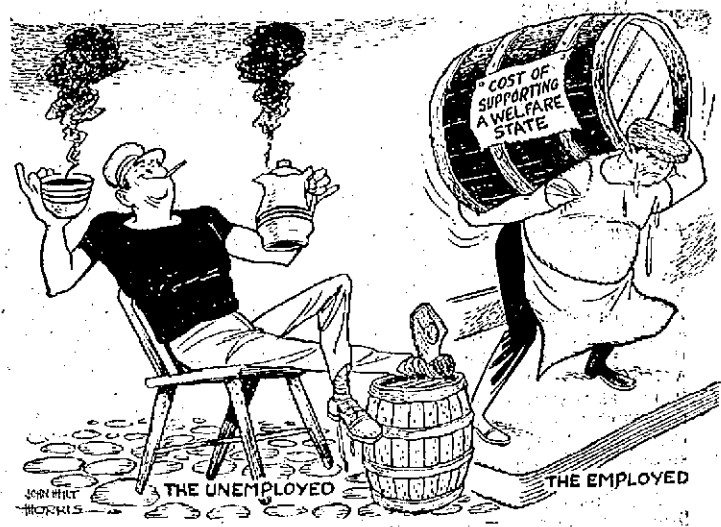

But there was resistance in Parliament to most of the cuts. Moreover, according to figures from the industry federation, expenses in the social sector are up 4 or 5 per cent.

"Denmark has gotten to the point where people brag about cuts in the budget when they really mean slowing the rate of increase," says Jorgen Hansen of the FDI.

Under the circumstances, the alternatives for Denmark's ruling socialists are to make major cuts in the operation of the welfare state while waiting for the economy to begin moving — economists say Denmark is entirely dependent on recovery of its big clients — or to step further to the left.

AN ATTEMPT to bring industry increasingly under worker control with a greater worker share of the profits would seem to be the only course remaining for the government of Premier Anker Joergensen because any kind of tax increase now would be political suicide.

But a Social Democratic bill that would lead to turning profits into funds run by labor unions got an

Marriage Italian style jolted by equality law

ROME (AP) — Marriage Italian style — based on male dominance and female submission — lost its validity before law Saturday.

A new family law, passed in May over church objections, took effect at midnight lifting women to equality with men in matrimonial matters.

The Roman Catholic Church and the party it supports, the dominant Christian Democrats, had opposed the bill claiming some provisions to be too liberal and likely to undermine the traditional family unity.

BUT LEGAL experts and some families hailed the law, replacing Napoleonic decrees as amended by fascism, as another triumph for women's liberation.

Divorce became legal four years ago and was upheld in a referendum in 1974. Women and leftists, united behind the divorce and new family laws, are now battling for legal abortions in Italy.

Women in Italy's upper and middle classes are expected to take full advantage of their new equality, but, as one Italian remarked, "You can hardly expect a poor peasant woman in the south to raise her voice against her man, not to mention taking him to court." The new law accords women the same rights and duties as men.

A MAN, for instance, will no longer be listed as "head of the household." A woman no longer has to acquire the last name of her husband, but will use

Action Line

P.O. Box 230 Long Beach, Calif. 90801

Action Line is your service, solving your problems, getting your answers, cutting red tape and standing up for your rights. To get action, write Action Line, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90801. Questions are selected for their general interest and helpfulness. Please, do not send original documents you want returned.

Flag

The picture on the cover of the new General Telephone Directory is nice, but I believe the flag is backward. Can Action Line please publish the rules for hanging the American flag? D.S., Long Beach.

The flag is shown as it should be when it is displayed flat or hanging vertically, according to "Our Flag," a Department of Defense booklet which includes the history of American flags, laws and rules and guides governing its use and display. The booklet says that "When the flag is displayed flat, either horizontally or vertically, on a wall or in a window, the union (or blue field) should be uppermost and to the flag's own right (to the observer's left when facing the flag)." The cover of the new directory is a copy of a painting of the first official American flag. It was painted by the American artist, Stevan Dohanos. Hal Compton, spokesman for General Telephone in Long Beach, told Action Line the picture will appear on millions of the company's directories across the United States.

Aid

I'm currently enrolled in a vocational rehabilitation program, but I'll have to drop out if I don't get some money soon. I applied for welfare and after months of going from office to office, I'm still broke. I've been promised assistance and then denied. I have managed to get food stamps, but I need money. If only the welfare office would help me as promised, I can continue learning a trade and then I'll be able to work. Can Action Line help? B.V., Long Beach.

You should receive a check within a week. According to an official with the Los Angeles County Department of Public Social Services, your first two applications for general relief were denied, but then your financial circumstances changed and your third application was approved. However, it takes some time for the county's computerized payment system to accept a new claim. In your case, the process was expedited and you're scheduled to start receiving monthly benefits right away.

Medicare

When my father turned 65 two years ago, he signed up for the Medicare A program, but refused the B coverage for outpatient treatment and doctors' visits because he still had insurance through his former employer. In November, he was stricken with throat cancer and his medical bills made the Medicare B coverage a necessity. In January, my father called the Social Security office in Norwalk and said he wanted to enroll in the B program. He was assured everything would be taken care of. My father held off getting his chemotherapy treatments until July, but now Social Security says he didn't enroll in January and can't apply for another three months. My father's condition has deteriorated and he can't wait forever for this coverage. His medical bills are going to leave my mother destitute. Can Action Line help? L.M., Lakewood.

No. Social Security is unyielding on your father's case and he won't be able to get the B coverage for another 10 months. A spokesman for the Norwalk office said that a person, who initially turns down the B coverage at age 65 and later changes his mind, must apply during the first three months of any subsequent year. The insurance then becomes effective the following July 1. The Norwalk office can find no record of your father's request for coverage in January. The spokesman said that when a person is unable to apply for the coverage in person, he can request that the enrollment forms be sent to him, but apparently in your father's case, no form was ever mailed to him. He will have to wait until January to apply for the coverage and it won't take effect until July 1, 1976. "We sympathize with his situation," the spokesman said, "but the rules are cut and dried for such cases."

SOUND OFF!

I would like to sound off about the spaces that are set aside in shopping centers and other parking lots for exclusive use of the handicapped. I think it is a wonderful idea for these people who do not have the ability to walk far. It just makes me sick to see some person, a normal, healthy, walking person, disregard the signs, pull in and park with no thought about the handicapped people. So please look before parking. Mrs. G.A., Lakewood.

that a decision had been made to give favorable study to it.

The Pentagon statements left the net impression that the Pershing had been requested only recently and that the request surprised Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger. Others have characterized the decision to treat Israel's military requests favorably as a direct U.S. reward for Israel's agreement to enter into the new Sinai disengagement accord with Egypt.

A participant in Saturday's Kissinger-Peres meeting said the Kissinger was "boiling" over reports in the press, attributed to Pentagon officials, that raised questions about his authority to make military arrangements with Israel.

A dispatch in Saturday's editions of the New York Times said Schlesinger had reportedly taken the position that Israel would "have to stand in line" with American forces for new weapons from the United States.

Kissinger said Saturday that it was useful to "put in perspective" the "military-supply relationship."

"As you know," he said, "the United States has had a traditional commitment to the survival and security of Israel and has had a continuing military-supply relationship for a decade or more with Israel."

"The basic Israeli requirements were submitted to the United States in August 1974 and have been studied since then," he continued. "These requirements included all the essential items now under review, including the Pershing missile."

The list Kissinger referred to was submitted during a visit to Washington by Premier Yitzhak Rabin.

The Pershing missile, which has a range of 450 miles, has been the subject of much discussion in Washington since it was disclosed that the United States pledged to give sympathetic study to the Israeli need for sophisticated weapons. The Pershing and the F16 fighter have been mentioned specifically.

"With the conclusion of the reassessment, some items were released," he said. These include the F15 fighter, the Lance short-range missile and laser-guided bombs.

2nd crash victim dies

SHERMAN OAKS (UPI) — Christine Dahlquist, 81, Lincoln, Neb., Saturday became the second victim of a two-car collision involving Pepperdine University Chancellor M. Norvall Young.

Mrs. Dahlquist died of burns and injuries she suffered when the car she was in was struck from behind last Tuesday. Beulah Harrison, 55, Claremont, was killed instantly in the crash.

The California Highway Patrol said the auto occupied by the women was stopped on Pacific Coast Highway when it was struck by a car allegedly driven by Young.

Navy, the U.S. ambassador and his staff in Mexico and to the representative of the FBI in Mexico.

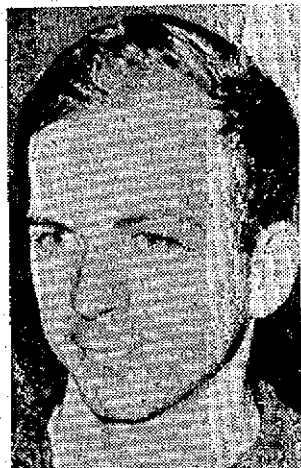

"Following the assassination of President Kennedy, CIA records revealed that a person believed to be Oswald was in contact with the Cuban Embassy on Sept. 27, 1963, for the purpose of receiving a transit visa for use en route to the USSR."

"In addition a number of photographs of individuals believed to be in contact with the Cuban and Soviet Embassies in Mexico City were received from the CIA station in Mexico and were compared with pictures of Oswald by CIA officers in Mexico City and CIA headquarters and by United States authorities in Dallas, Texas."

"It was determined that none of these photographs was the photograph of Oswald."

Three staff members of the Warren Commission were assigned to investigate the Mexico City trip and other matters involving the CIA. They were William T. Coleman, now secretary of Transportation, Howard P. Willens, a former Justice Department official now in private law practice, and W. David Slawson, a law professor in California.

Coleman said in an interview that he was "disturbed" about the possibility that U. S. security might be harmed by the recent disclosures, but he acknowledged that he and other staffers received information from the CIA on Oswald's activities in Mexico, and they did not run counter to the commission's conclusion that Oswald killed Kennedy and a Dallas police officer.

Coleman said he was sure that Lee Rankin, the Warren Commission chief counsel, was informed of the CIA Mexico data and that "at least two or three commission members" knew.

tion between the police station bomb and the explosives in the Symbionese Liberation Army hide-out.

Inspector Don Hansen, head of the city bomb squad was seen Friday emerging from the Harrises apartment with a cylindrical object wrapped in a newspaper. He refused comment.

Meantime, police searched for two "armed and dangerous" sisters of the man charged with harboring Miss Hearst and another fugitive in a gun-stocked apartment.

Inspector Jim Molinari said Kathleen Soliah, 23, and Josephine Soliah, 24, were wanted for investigation of possession of explosives and illegal weapons, conspiracy and possession of explosives in a specified area.

An all-points bulletin issued Friday night described the women as "armed and dangerous" and warned officers to be "very cautious" when approaching.

They are the sisters of Stephen Soliah, a 27-year-old housepainter charged with harboring Miss Hearst and fellow fugitive Wendy Yoshimura.

At the Harrises' apartment, authorities said they found at least four explosive devices, including a pipe bomb.

Police Inspector Gary Kern said the apartment also contained three .30-caliber automatic carbines, two shotguns and two pistols plus ammunition.

A search of Miss Hearst's apartment, 2 1/2 miles away, netted two loaded sawed-off shotguns and six pistols with ammunition, plus a pot containing several marijuana plants, a federal source reported.

guns, several handguns, hundreds of rounds of ammunition and 40 pounds of black powder explosives were found in the one-bedroom flat.

An hour after the Harrises were taken into custody, police and FBI agents raided an apartment three miles away and captured Patricia Hearst, fugitive newspaper heiress, and Wendy Yoshimura, a longtime Berkeley radical and suspected bomb plotter.

Investigators studying the material obtained from the Harrises' apartment noted that an industrial leader targeted by the New World Liberation Front also was among the persons marked for death by the SLA.

He is Charles DeBretville, chairman of the board of the Bank of California and a director of several conglomerates.

In early August, the NWLF set off dozens of firebombs around the Woodside home of DeBretville. The bombs exploded two sticks of dynamite that destroyed the executive's car in his driveway.

His married daughter, who was home alone, managed to flee the flames.

Later, there were four attempts to murder California policemen with bombs placed under their squad cars. The devices, however, were found before they could detonate.

Earlier this year, the Red Guerrilla Family took credit for bombing FBI offices in nearby Berkeley. Nobody was injured, but the violent act caused more than $100,000 damage and the reported destruction of scores of investigative records.

It was this same group that planted a bomb in the San Francisco offices of the Treasury Department's Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms Bureau.

Heat and smog on tap for Southland as summer ends

Fair, partly smoggy skies and warm temperatures are predicted throughout the Southland today and the early part of the week as the waning days of summer provide residents with weather to remember during the foggy, rainy days of fall and winter.

National Weather Service forecasters said temperatures will range from the 70s near the beaches to near 90 degrees inland after night and morning low clouds burn off along the coast.

Forecasters predicted a slightly cooler high of 84 degrees in Long Beach today, following a high Saturday of 87 degrees.

Temperatures in the mountains should hover in the mid-70s, while the desert areas will heat up to near 100, the forecasters added.

Survival tips for Grand Prix spectators

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

You can find out where to park and who's driving, but is it possible to survive the Long Beach Formula 5000 Grand Prix in relative comfort?

Probably. But it could take a bit of doing unless you're crazy about crowds, noise and heat.

Ticket sales Saturday topped 50,000 for the three day program—35,000 of them for the Sunday race—and an influx of 70,000 is expected into the usually sleepy downtown.

Police expect hot weather, based on the usual late September pattern, and the noise level is predicted at something above the usual roar of the Alamitos Bay power boat meets.

However, with a little forethought—an early departure, sun hats, optional ear plugs, and money—the Grand Prix can be survived.

Keys to survival, the creature comforts like food, drink and rest-rooms, will be easily available, according to Grand Prix officials. First aid and emergency provisions appear to be well rehearsed and adequate. Mobility, of necessity, will be limited to times when the cars aren't running.

And if you have some thought of wandering downtown and seeing the action from a sidewalk along the route—either with or without a ticket—forget it. Ocean Boulevard will be swept clear of pedestrians before any cars move, and anyone in the area will have to move back at least 40 feet north on a perpendicular street or stay inside whatever building he enters until the cars are off the street.

The following survival tips, not necessarily in order of importance, are offered by Grand Prix Association and police officials:

Food and drink—

You can bring in a sack lunch and a thermos but no coolers, cans or bottles (alcoholic or otherwise.) A concessionaire will have 48 stands in the race area where beer will cost $1, soft drinks 50 cents, hot dogs 75 cents and hamburgers and sandwiches $1 and $1.10. Also, cafes and bars on Ocean Boulevard and intersecting streets will be open during the times when the cars are not running.

Restrooms—

A total of 237 will be scattered throughout the race area.

Emergencies—

Five first aid tents will be spaced within the race area, manned by volunteer doctors and nurses. Another first aid station will be located in the Arena. Three Med-Evac helicopters will be stationed on a landing pad and 35 Long Beach paramedics are scheduled to be on hand with their units to take care of race accidents and spectators. Three ambulances will also be available.

Crowd control—

An estimated 350 Long Beach police officers and security guards will be in the race area and at the six "seal points" to check entry and exit. Downtown buildings will also have security guards and there will be no access without a pass.

Mobility—

Ocean Boulevard will be closed to vehicle traffic Friday between 8 a.m. and 3:45 p.m. Friday and between noon and 6:15 p.m. Saturday and from midnight Saturday until the race ends Sunday. Other streets and sidewalks in the area bounded by Pacific and Bonito avenues and south of First Street will be open during the following intervals between practice runs and qualifying heats

Friday: Open until 10 a.m., closed until 10:45, open until 10:55, closed until 11:40, open until 1:30 p.m., closed until 2:15, open until 2:25, closed until 3:10.

Saturday: Pine Avenue only closed between First and Fifth streets between 9 a.m. and noon for the Formula 5000 Concours D'Elegance. Streets and sidewalks open until 1 p.m., closed until 1:45, open until 1:55, closed until 3, open until 3:10, closed until 3:30, open until 3:45, closed until 5, open until 5:10, closed until 5:55.

Sunday: Streets and sidewalks in the area bounded by Magnolia and Cerritos Avenues south of Broadway will be open until 1 p.m., closed until approximately 3, closed until the end of the race at about 5.

At midnight Saturday the entire circuit will be sealed until the end of the last race Sunday, and anyone in the area without a pass will have to leave, officials warn.

Parking is available with ticket purchases and is first-come-first-served on Friday and Saturday and at assigned lots for the Sunday race. A detailed story on parking locations will appear in Monday's Independent Press-Telegram.

A map of entry and exit points, parking, and the race course will be printed in Tuesday's paper.

A STUDY IN CONTRASTS: THE TRAFFIC AND BUSTLE OF BELMONT SHORE'S SECOND STREET...

Belmont Shore, Naples

A bit of 'sea life' in Southeast L.B.

By MIKE JELF
Staff Writer

Tucked away in the southeast corner of Long Beach and little known to the rest of the world is one of the outstanding sea-oriented neighborhoods of Southern California—Belmont Shore and Naples.

The area, like its residents, is diverse enough to defy generalization, but it's noticeably different from the tract-home monotony that blankets much of Southern California.

It's an area where you'll find waterfront homes with private boat slips and rich residents, and a few blocks away young wage earners' cramped apartments with fold-down beds.

PEOPLE OF means moor costly yachts at the marina, while those with simpler tastes and leaner purses sunbathe on the beach or swim at Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool.

Young women in bikinis sun themselves on doorsteps, while old women in overcoats wheel their shopping carts to the neighborhood shops. Boys meet girls, middle-aged swingers down cocktails and gays show off their clothes, though not in the same bars.

As in other beachfront neighborhoods, the common denominator that allows these diverse types to coexist peacefully is a casual enjoyment of life, an attitude of "live and let live."

The artery tying together the separate neighborhoods is Second Street, which runs through both Belmont Shore and Naples.

Numerous bars, restaurants, clothing stores, record shops, more bars and miscellaneous other businesses, commonplace and exotic, line the street. On summer nights the sidewalks support a continuous promenade of nearly every type of person or groups imaginable.

The art of walking is more developed here than in other neighborhoods. This is so partly because of scale: Shops and places of entertainment are within easy walking distance of the homes.

Residents also walk or bicycle to avoid the year-around parking problem. Some Belmont Shore apartment dwellers may not find a parking spot closer than two blocks from their homes, and so quickly learn that trying to park is more trouble than walking to their destinations.

Belmont Shore residents have a reputation, probably exaggerated and/or outdated, of being young singles in constant quest of other young singles with the object of playing doubles.

It's true the emphasis in the shore is on youth. Among about 6,400 residents tallied in the census five years ago, about 30 per cent of the male population was in the 25-to-34 age bracket and 25 per cent of Women viewed as paramedics

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Anaheim expects to be the first city in California to put women to work as paramedics.

The plan, discussed for some time with Anaheim officials and with County Supervisor Ralph Clark, a former mayor of Anaheim, calls for the assignment of intensive care nurses from Anaheim Memorial Hospital to the paramedic rescue vans.

They would cover a shortage of trained firemen-paramedics until January 1977, when additional crews of men are expected to be certified.

THE ASSIGNMENT of women nurses to paramedic duty may point the way for other cities to fill out shortages of emergency crews.

Santa Ana, Costa Mesa and Fountain Valley are facing shortages of paramedic crewmen and Laguna Beach and many other cities want medically-trained firemen.

Orange County trains the paramedics, all of whom must be firemen. If the women are designated as relief paramedics, they would be the first non-firemen used.

Even though they are registered nurses, highly trained in intensive care, they would be required to undergo more training, chiefly at the Orange County Medical Center (OCMC), where the county's paramedics are trained.

A NEW class starts at OCMC each 18 weeks, providing 1,000 hours of mostly medical training. The course also covers radio communications, since the county has a series of five "base hospitals" outfitted with two-way radio communications to paramedic vehicles and portable transmitters.

County supervisors last week hinted that the shortage of men paramedics might be solved by assignment of nurses, and decided to consider the issue at Tuesday's meeting.

They also called for a special task force to consider changes in the paramedic training program, possibly by contracting with private hospitals for the required training.

IT APPEARS that the OCMC training program cannot fill needs of the several cities for qualified men, supervisors said, because the paramedic program is expanding more rapidly than anticipated, and because the capacity of training classes is relatively small.

Another factor is that county certification standards require 1,000 hours of training, although the state requires only 500 hours of training for paramedics.

Proposals to shorten the training period for paramedics came from Supervisors Ralph Dietrich of Fullerton and Thomas F. Riley of Newport Beach.

They said because OCMC is unable to meet the growing need for paramedic training, there is a waiting list of 14 months for cities wanting to train paramedic crews.

SANTA ANA has lost so many men it had to shut down one paramedic van, and Riley said Costa Mesa is asking for training of selected firemen, while Fountain Valley needs training for replacement paramedics.

Dietrich and Riley suggested "restructuring" of the Emergency Medical Care Committee, headed by Dr. John Philp, the county health officer.

Graduation day for student park-builders

By KRIS SHERMAN

You will find something more in woods than in books. Trees and stones will teach you that which you can never learn from the masters.

—St. Bernard, Epistle 108

For several past and present students of Will Rogers Junior High School, 365 Monrovia Ave., Saturday was graduation day.

But instead of conventional diplomas, the students received accolades from civic and school officials. Their completed subjects included a first-hand lesson in city government and a personal involvement in ecology.

Their term project—three years in the making—is the Rogers Mini-Park, a 1.2-acre island of land between roadways at Appian Way and Nieto Avenue.

And according to all who attended tree-planting ceremonies Saturday morning, the park wouldn't be there if not for the stubborn involvement of the Rogers students.

"This park started out as a nebulous idea three years ago," said Third District Councilwoman Renee Simon. "But because the kids wanted to get involved...and

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

TWO LITTLE old ladies perched on their camp stools and listened in rapt attention as the new Long Beach Municipal Band played one of its first concerts in the bath house shell on the beach.

Little Old Lady No. 1 nudged her companion and asked:

"What's that they're playing, sister?" "According to the program card on the bandstand, it's the 'Refrain from Spitting,'" replied Little Old Lady No. 2.

It was an honest mistake, and it came about because musicians and audiences in pre-World War I days weren't as couth as they are today. Listeners and footloose were sometimes given to spitting and cursing between numbers, breaches of deportment expressly prohibited by signs tacked to the bandstand. The city fathers even provided a plainclothesman to police the conduct of tuba players and saxophonists, whose saliva supply has always been more than ample.

We'll never know if the band played the "Refrain from Cursing" number as an encore for the two little old ladies. All we do know is that the Long Beach Municipal Band has survived two world wars, a depression, a calamitous earthquake and various attempts to scuttle it in behalf of economy. The band plays on at the ripe old age of 66, its arteries and repertoire showing no signs of hardening.

Indeed, Everett E. Siegrist's musicians are as much at home with the themes of the Beatles, Benny Goodman, Perez Prado and Les Brown as with the marches of John Philip Sousa and Edwin Franko Goldman.

One night last week, the Long Beach Historical Society invited the band over to the Vets Park clubhouse to help salute the Bicentennial. The guests outdid themselves with the likes of "Yankee Doodle," "You're a Grand Old Flag," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Beautiful Ohio," "Old Man River" and a raft of other selections which caught the sweep and flow of the American past.

The Long Beach Municipal Band is a history-maker in its own right, the only full-time municipal band in the United States. It has a national reputation for imaginative musicianship and a yearly concert schedule that would have made the late impresario S. Hurok drool in envy.

It's not accidental. E. Harry Willey, that turn-of-the-century operator of the Majestic Ballroom, knew what he was doing back in 1909 when he sold the band to the city's voters as a fulltime institution. By the time Willey was hired away by the Salt Lake Railroad in 1915, the band was a landmark in Long Beach.

Otis Foster, a bass player in the band, succeeded Willey as conductor and stayed on until 1923 when he took a better-paying job as storekeeper for the City of Long Beach.

That was the signal for the band to step up in class by tapping as director Herbert L. Clarke, cornet soloist and assistant conductor of the Sousa band. Clarke, a Sousa star at the 1893 Columbian Exposition in Chicago and the 1899 Paris World's Fair, stayed on the podium for 20 years until fabled B. A. Rolfe took over.

The tuba-sized Rolfe was the originator of radio's "Hit Parade," and he brought pop tunes and novelty to the municipal band, which was a big hit at World War II USO dances and dockside bon voyages for departing troop ships.

When Rolfe left to try his baton in television and radio, J.J. "Jonny" Richards, former musical director of the Ringling circus band, signed on, serving five years until retirement in 1950.

Eugene LaBarre, late of the New York World's Fair and New York Police bands, succeeded Richards. On LaBarre's death in 1956, the legendary Charles J. Payne came aboard for 17 years. The dynamic and innovative Payne developed the scheduling of band concerts in all public and parochial schools, and his name became synonymous with good music in Long Beach and throughout the West.

Siegrist, chosen as director when Payne retired in 1973, is a retired Montebello police lieutenant and former director of the Long Beach Elks Band. He came to the municipal band podium from the ranks, and is extremely popular with his musicians.

The band will never atrophy under the leadership of the 46-year-old Siegrist. Not when it's giving up to 900 concerts a year and cutting record albums. The plaque presented to the band by the Long Beach Historical Society was for quality, not stamina, and it will join hundreds of other awards in the band's trophy room. And all those "big band" alumni in the band think that's pretty hip.

What does the band do for an encore—the "Refrain from Spitting" or another 66 years?

Randolph Hearst
Sept. 18, 1975

The full story of Patty Hearst, William and Emily Harris and their comrades in arms will be a long time in unfolding. There may always be doubt about whether Miss Hearst was brainwashed into being an urban guerrilla and about whether she was victim or victimizer or some of each.

No one knows yet if Miss Hearst or her companions will try to turn the trial into a forum for the SLA's political beliefs. It will be curious if they do, for their mild behavior when the FBI came to call contrasts with their fiery rhetoric about a fight to the death against the "fascist insects that prey on the people."

Miss Hearst not only made no attempt to flee, she accepted the services of lawyers dispatched by her family. It is hard to denounce fascist insects when corporation lawyers are buzzing about trying to arrange your release on bail.

Whatever the ending of the Hearst kidnaping story, the capture of the remaining SLA members does restore luster to the reputation of the FBI. There may be arguments about whether the FBI was fully aware, partially aware or unaware that it was close to nabbing Miss Hearst and the Harrises. Wherever the FBI thought it was on the trail, however, there is no doubt the FBI was on the trail. There is no doubt the FBI's dogged persistence paid off.

Now the questions are in the hands of the courts. They will be answered in detail, if not necessarily definitively. Newspapers, radio and television will cover them in detail. After that there will be the books; Miss Hearst's fiancé, Steve Weed, is finishing his, and it would not surprise us to learn that Clifford Irving has one under way.

The first political kidnaping in America, an act that started as a news media crime, will end as a media event, too. All of us may be a little bit better informed than we really want to be.

End of a bad policy

The Long Beach City Council has proposed what seems to be the most reasonable and most compassionate solution to the myriad problems that have long beset the Carmelitos Housing Project.

The council's suggestion is that the project be gradually phased out of existence.

Residents who want help in finding homes elsewhere would be assisted by the city housing authority. When residents left, their apartments would be allowed to stay vacant. In a few years at most, natural attrition and the help the city gives residents in finding other homes can be expected to vacate the project. The vacant project site could be developed into an area of houses and apartments.

Another approach is proposed by county government. That approach is to paint up, fix up and expand project housing. But the malaise that has attacked the 35-year-old project in recent years will not be solved that way.

The high rate of fires — 3½ times the rate in the rest of Long Beach — might well continue. The skyrocketing vacancy rate might decline, but in its place might come overcrowding, and with it even more crime than now plagues the project.

The county proposal would perpetuate the bad policy of segregating government housing for the poor — of creating a government-sponsored ghetto. That can never work as satisfactorily, for the community or for the poor, as providing housing in the community — housing that does not make those who live in it feel that they are set apart.

On the Carmelitos issue, the Long Beach council members are unanimous. Their opinion should be heeded by county government. Doing so would be in the interest of those who now live in Carmelitos, in the interest of their neighbors, and in the interest of providing decent housing in the future for those of low income.

Congress tries common sense

WASHINGTON — Sometimes it is the quiet things, slipping by almost unnoticed at the start, that change the power structure of this noisy city more than anything else. The new Senate and House budget committees are the latest evidence of the point.

These committees were formed just a year ago on the reasonable but unprecedented notion that the Congress itself should try to keep its appropriations in line with the nation's revenues. It was even suggested that if the President or the committees of the Congress asked to put out more money than was likely to come in, the budget committees could challenge the deficit, and propose budget cuts and spending priorities.

WELL, OF course, the deficits are now running higher than ever before, and these budget committees of the Congress haven't had time to get their staffs or their procedures in order, but the principle of guiding if not controlling appropriations has already been established.

For example, on last Aug. 1, the Senate, on the urging of both Republican and Democratic members of the Senate Budget Committee, rejected the fiscal 1976 military procurement conference report (HR6674). On Capitol Hill, where committee decisions are usually regarded as commands, especially when the committees of the House and Senate agree in conference on the money to be voted, this was a startling surprise. Never before had a military budget conference report been defeated, especially when recommended by the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, John Stennis of Mississippi.

In the fight over money in this town, which most of the big fights are all about, there has been no more formidable coalition than the Pentagon and the armed services committees. When they have agreed in the past, nobody could stand against them, not the rest of the Congress, or even the President. But the Senate Budget Committee, led by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and Sen. Henry L. Bellmon, R-Okla., prevailed.

WHAT HAS happened in this intervention of the Senate Budget Committee may be more important than any other event in this Congress. The new budget committees have taken the problem of congressional fiscal responsibility seriously. They have limited powers, but they have avoided party ideology, and have dared to question the most powerful committee chairmen of the House and Senate.

Also, Muskie has made clear that his fight against what he regards as excessive spending by the Pentagon also applies to excessive spending on domestic social programs in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. He is leading the fight with Bellmon against what they regard as extravagance at HEW as well as across the river at the Pentagon, and Muskie's liberal colleagues are scolding him for his cuts and priorities.

"Muskie and the liberals on the (Senate) Budget Committee," says the Liberal Council of National Priorities and Resources, "seem to have been seduced by the conservatives." Likewise, the liberal Americans for Democratic Action, concluded that "if Muskie can defeat Stennis and the Pentagon, he almost surely can defeat the Child Nutrition Act amendments and any major increases in social programs, such as expanded food stamp benefits, or any social initiatives."

BUT SOMETHING new is happening here. Muskie, Bellmon and their colleagues in the Senate Budget Committee are reaching beyond ideological and partisan assumptions, and insisting that fiscal responsibility in the Congress is more important than the prerogatives of their parties or the committee chairmen.

James Reston

New York Times News Service

Muskie has been very careful to respect the prior responsibilities of the chairmen of the appropriations committees and the Ways and Means Committee, provided they stay within reasonable guidelines, pay attention to over-all priorities, and work together to avoid "busting the budget."

"Nobody promised us a rose garden when we undertook budget reform," Muskie told the Senate the other day. "We know the task of addressing our national fiscal priorities and beginning the long road back toward a balanced budget would be a thankless one."

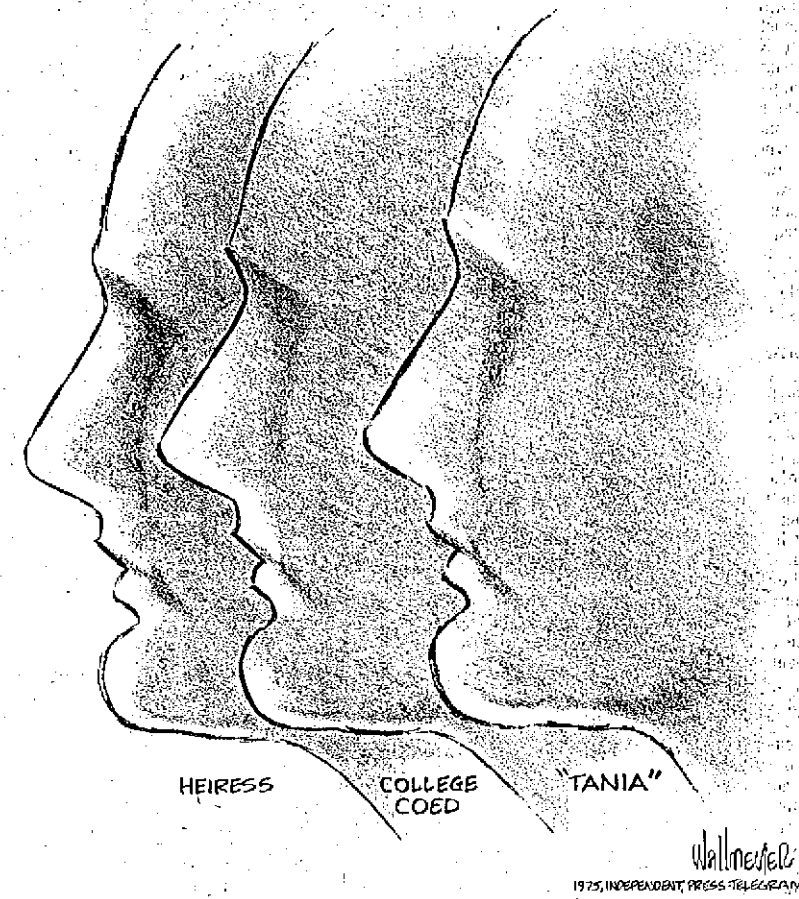

"We knew those whose favorite programs would be cut would complain we were damaging the national interest, and those whose programs were allowed to grow might complain that the growth was not fast enough. We did so because of our conviction that failure to put the Congress and the country on the course toward fiscal responsibility and a balanced budget was to abandon our responsibility to our people."

"I think it's fair to say, at the end of our first year, that the budget committees of the House and Senate, with the help and support of the membership and committees of both bodies, have gained a toe-hold in the struggle toward fiscal responsibility."

OF COURSE, it's no more than a toe-hold, bitterly opposed by many of the most powerful Democratic chairmen and liberal members of the Democratic party, but these budget committees, created almost by accident after Nixon's impounding of funds voted often recklessly by the Congress, and aided mightily by the financial nightmare of New York City's financial crisis, are gradually having an important effect on Capitol Hill.

Almost unnoticed, they may have started a quiet revolution in the Congress, and imposed a little common sense into the ideological and party struggles on Capitol Hill.

THE THREE FACES OF EYE PATTY

A candidacy shifts purpose

SACRAMENTO — Tom Hayden's problem, of course, is getting people to take his U.S. Senate candidacy seriously. For more than three months, he has been cruising California telling Democrats he should be their nominee next November instead of the incumbent, John Tunney.

The suggestion at first was that his candidacy was solely for the purpose of assuring public dialogue on issues that would be ignored if Tunney were not challenged. But now, predictably, the bug has bitten him.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

"With the summer passed," he said last week, "I definitely can envision an upset victory in the 1976 primary based on our continuing growth since our announcement last June."

TEN YEARS AGO Tom Hayden was living in Newark, N.J., organizing low income tenants, participating in poverty programs, and engaging in various activities for which his degree in political science from the University of Michigan had given him little preparation.

While at Michigan he was a founder of the Students for a Democratic Society and in 1962 had prepared the first draft of the document known as the Port Huron Statement. The document probably did more for the health of American conservatives, in terms of increasing their adrenaline flow, than anything since Earl Warren's nomination as chief justice of the United States.

And in 1968 and 1969 his name became known nationwide when he was arrested and prosecuted, as one of the "Chicago Seven," for his part in the demonstrations at the Democratic convention.

Now here he is, stumping the state just like a regular politician, asking to be entrusted with a major role in shaping the future of California and the United States.

HAS HE SHIFTED from his radical posture? No, he says, he is the same. It is the country that has shifted.

"To say it in a general way, Americans are waking up to a new world that they didn't know was going to come about in their lifetime."

We are experiencing, he says, "a change in America's role in the world (which) means for all of us that hard times are ahead."

"It means for people who thought that they had a sense of economic security and stability a sense that they are slipping."

"It means for the middle class a feeling that quite possibly their middle-class security will not be enjoyed by their own children."

"It means for people who thought that they could live long and healthy lives that they're starting to question whether they can afford to get sick."

THERE MUST be some truth to what he is saying about the attitude of Americans shifting, because it is difficult to imagine voters of 10 years ago discussing calmly, with a candidate, the question "Can we abide with an enterprise system if the exclusive goal of the people in charge of it is to maximize profit?"

Hayden asks that, but follows quickly, lest liberals rejoice too soon, with the declaration that he does not subscribe to the idea "that in this crisis we should just extend the power of centralized government into the area of planning to insure our stability."

Not everyone listens calmly to Tom Hayden.

"Do you think," he was asked after a recent speech, "that a traitor should be a U.S. senator?"

The candidate answered with a statement that had as its subject something other than himself, a device which is a basic tool to any accomplished politician. It is likely Tom Hayden will find that John Tunney knows how to use that tool, too.

WHAT IS particularly interesting about Tom Hayden's campaign is that many of the things he is saying — prepare for hard times ahead . . . there are limits on what America can do . . . we must husband our resources — are being said by another young, intellectual Democratic politician.

But Jerry Brown waited until after he was elected governor to say most of those things. Or, at least, to say them loudly.

Brown's name gave him an edge going into his primary that Hayden does not have going into his. But the governor is more popular now than he was last November, too. If more people start identifying Tom Hayden with Jerry Brown, it could make for a far more interesting Democratic primary than anyone imagined.

Letters to the editor

What speed limit?

EDITOR:

The heading of your Sept. 13 article "55-mile speed limit ignored" is the understatement of the year. I recently drove 4,800 miles in 11 states other than California, and drove between 60 and 70 miles an hour most of the time. I was frequently passed by cars, trucks, buses and tank trucks with trailers.

I rarely saw more than one patrol car in each state, and none in some. I saw just about as many in California as in the rest of the states combined. In some states at least, the 55-m.p.h. speed limit just does not exist.

I find it hard to believe that a big drop in fatalities is the result of something that exists mostly on paper.

Tom Hayden: from radical to pragmatist

By KIRK CHEYFITZ
Knight Newspapers

There were about 70 people at the party, all looking reasonably affluent. They had gathered in the backyard of a middle-class West Los Angeles house to meet the candidate, drink some wine, nibble the cold cuts and possibly make a contribution.

A question-and-answer session was in progress. Someone asked the candidate what his goals were. And then: "Would you like to be President?"

TOM HAYDEN, standing in the middle of a loose semicircle of people, joked for a minute and then answered in his characteristically matter-of-fact tone: "My dream is that we ought to — around a more human type of politics — take over the whole government."

Hayden has believed for a long time that the government is beyond the control of most people, that America has fallen far short of its dreams of democracy. Organizing people to peacefully take charge of their own affairs is an old goal for him. "It is the same goal he has pursued, in one way or another, as a leader of the student protest movement for the last 15 years. He is the co-founder of the radical student organization Students for a Democratic Society, one of the Chicago 7 arrested after the demonstrations at the 1968 Democratic National Convention, and a defendant in the most famous conspiracy trial of the decade.

He is also the husband of actress and activist Jane Fonda: the man who lives in comfort with his wife and their two children in a modest two-story frame house half a block from the Pacific in Santa Monica; part of a superstar couple whose name appears as often in society columns and magazines like People as it does in the analytical pages of left-wing journals.

NOW HE IS, in addition to all that, a slow-talking, 35-year-old intellectual who is running for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate in California. It is a major change of tactics from the old days of holding mass demonstrations and occupying campus buildings. But a lot of things have changed since the 1960s began.

The belief among regular Democrats and people in the street is that Hayden does not have a chance of winning the election. His opponent is Sen. John V. Tunney, a young, good-looking certified liberal with a voting record rated at 86 out of a possible 100 by the liberal Americans for Democratic Action.

Tunney, completing his first term, goes into the race with endorsements from virtually all the state's top Democratic office holders. He also has his Senate position to generate news coverage and the financial backing of many of California's major business leaders.

Hayden's organization, on the other hand, is chronically broke and party regulars are looking askance at his candidacy. His staff — about 15 true believers working for subsistence salaries — is long on enthusiasm but short on experience in election campaigning. For most of them, the principal campaign of their lives was the decade-long effort to end the war in Vietnam.

JANE FONDA, TOM HAYDEN
Is yesterday's radicalism today's common sense?

STILL, HAYDEN is a serious candidate. A few weeks ago, insiders on the Tunney side were privately granting that Hayden might capture 15 per cent of the vote when the state goes to the polls for the Democratic primary next June. Then they watched him run a little and upped their predictions to 20 and 30 per cent.

Part of the reason for their increasingly serious attitude toward Hayden is certainly California, a state known for unpredictable voting habits. With only one exception, no incumbent senator has won reelection there since 1962.

But something deeper than California's normally mercurial politics may be at work in this election. Hayden has enshrined that feeling in a slogan: "The radicalism of the 1960s is the common sense of the 1970s."

BEHIND THAT slogan, Hayden is trying to develop a program around issues he thinks will mean something in people's lives: eliminating unemployment, closing tax loopholes, limiting corporate power. And he is trying to mold a style of campaigning he hopes will make politics more functional for people, to make them see it as a way of acting together to solve their problems and improve their lives. Right now, he says, "politics is so empty" it is no wonder that almost no one believes in it.

"We are concerned about actions and about doing things and about a program more than we are concerned about talking about a personality or making promises about what I will do if I am elected and go to the Senate in 1977," he once told a group of potential supporters.

A Hayden volunteer, he has said, might be asked to march to the banks to protest discriminatory loan practices — known as redlining — that blight neighborhoods by making it impossible to borrow money to buy or improve a home in certain areas.

AND IF THE protests don't work, Hayden has said, the volunteers could work on a ballot initiative to create a state bank where loan policies would be controlled by the community people who make the deposits. "It's something that could be achieved in California within the year," Hayden has declared.

There are few abstractions in the Hayden campaign. There is, instead, an almost ruthless pragmatism.

"In terms of a grass roots campaign," Hayden has said, "it's not what you propose, it's what you do."

Hayden believes there is now a potential majority willing to support what he wants to do. The country's disastrous experience in Indochina, which he opposed from the start, and the damaging look that Watergate provided into the interior of American politics, have turned the country around, Hayden says.

"A lot more people have come around to the same view of the system's bankruptcy," he says.

Hayden's claims that his views represent a potential majority are seen as a wishful daydream by just about every political observer in the state. But Louis Harris, the national pollster, wrote a book in 1972, based on more than 10 years of probing the public mood in America, that supports many of Hayden's conclusions. In fact, much of Hayden's campaign rhetoric about what the people want has been lifted from the book, Anguish of Change, which has become the unofficial bible of the Hayden campaign. The candidate quotes — and misquotes — from it often.

WHAT HARRIS says, using a bewildering array of percentages from hundreds of surveys, is that most Americans are more receptive to basic changes in the system than their leaders. The distrust of big government and big business is at an all-time high, Harris suggests. "And the surest fact of the 1970s," he writes, "is that, if the current crop of leaders do not wake up to the drastically changed national priorities . . . then the people will not rest easy until they throw them out and put a new generation at the helm."

So Hayden sees a new movement beginning. And, with a work ethic that probably would make some Puritans uneasy, he is running for office as hard as he can. Tom Hayden is out to win.

Now, with the election nine months away, Hayden is moving around the huge state of California — bigger than most countries — trying to talk to as many people as possible. Working in a populist tradition, he is asking for people's opinions before determining his programs, trying to feel out the new consensus for change that he believes exists.

ALTHOUGH HAYDEN denies it, there are major problems in making the shift from the idealistic push to put an end to a way into the confusing compromises of electoral politics. Hayden tries to laugh it off. "There's nothing wrong with compromise as long as it leads to total victory," he says. But he knows it isn't that simple.

The best example of this is the problem that has become Hayden's biggest political dilemma: defense spending. Basically, Hayden's ideals tell him that the Pentagon's budget should be slashed and the arms race should be ended. But he is running in a state that reaps huge profits from military aerospace contracts. At least 100,000 jobs are at stake, according to one analysis.

So Hayden has taken to slipping and sliding on defense spending. He says each contract must be examined individually. He says he isn't sure he can oppose defense spending at a time of high unemployment. And the more he hedges, even though he admits he is hedging, the more he sounds like a politician. The left-wing press in California has been attacking him steadily for his lack of a coherent position on defense spending. Hard-line radicals have decided that Hayden has degenerated into "just another liberal."

HAYDEN HAS also dismayed some of his former leftist followers by presenting a personal history that implies he has always worked in electoral politics. In a way, he is arguing that everything he has done — the marching, registering black voters, demonstrating at the Democratic convention, writing books and pamphlets, teaching, traveling to Hanoi — is part of an effort to lobby for change through the electoral process.

Now there is a reasonable theory that any kind of political action in America, from bombing the Capitol to taking a senator to lunch, is a form of lobbying. It may even be true. It works logically.

But for Hayden to maintain that he has been working in the Democratic party all his life is a basic distortion, his leftist critics argue. It denies the thrust of a large part of his life that was devoted to resisting a particular government action rather than lobbying for a change in the structure of government.

THE CRIES from the left that Hayden has "sold out" to the establishment are ridiculed by campaign workers. Hayden sees his life as consistent, from radicalism to his announcement for the Senate. He says he hasn't changed.

"No, I think what's changed is the system," he says. "The movement of the 1960s did not leave the country untouched. It forced Lyndon Johnson to abandon the presidency and it ultimately stopped the war. It left laws to protect the rights of the country's racial and cultural minorities, and it kicked off a movement to win equality for the absolute majority, women. It contributed to the recognition of China, which was a signal that anti-communism was fading."

As Hayden puts it, "The standard liberal program has been achieved." And so he thinks it is time to stake out a new program.

Whether Hayden will win or lose is impossible to predict, as is whether he will succeed in building a grass roots, statewide organization that will endure.

THE CAMPAIGN is young.

Hayden's people are still figuring out how to go about doing what they want to do.

The bigger questions loom ahead. What will Hayden do if he loses? Is this the beginning of a new kind of movement?

Jane Fonda, who splits her life between public appearances with her husband, spending time with their children and pursuing her movie career, is optimistic. But she also expresses an idea most of the campaign's staff and volunteers would agree with: that the campaign can win without getting Hayden elected.

"There's a lot of people, with a lot more experience than I in electoral politics, who now think he can win," she says. "I thought so before anybody." Then she adds: "I don't say it anymore because it is going to be misunderstood. But even if he doesn't win, I think what's going to happen is going to be real important."

MEANWHILE, Hayden's history would indicate that he has the special kind of endurance it will take to keep up the pace of the campaign he is now trying to wage. And he is also possessed of the long view of history that allows him to wage battles he knows will not be readily won, working toward goals he believes lie far in the future.

In 1972 Hayden wrote a book called The Love of Possession is a Disease with Them. The title was taken from Chief Sitting Bull's description of the white race, delivered to his brothers at the Powder River Council in 1877. The book links the Vietnam war with America's older wars against the Indians. "The real lesson of Vietnam is what it may yet teach us about our genocidal history," Hayden wrote.

Describing the kind of endurance and vision it would take to end the Vietnam war, Hayden finished the book this way:

"... each act, each heightening of consciousness, each organized protest, will have the effect of water dropping on stone, inevitably wearing the stone away. Each drop seems ineffective because its result on the stone is invisible. . . . No single drop will smash that stone. But in time strong become weak and the weak strong; the water continues and the stone is no more."

No lead, no wine either

I am the shamed owner of a gas guzzler. It amuses some people, angers others, makes most of my acquaintances feel superior and embarrasses my friends, who feel socially diminished by being seen in company with a person who still drives a gas guzzler.

The best of them tried to nudge me back to respectability. They urged me to buy a new small car — a gas sipper, I suppose — and restore my social standing. Most of them have bought new gas sippers at prices ranging from $3,000 to $4,500 and feel as smart as a man in the latest Paris slacks. When I drive to their houses in my gas guzzler, they wave for me to park it down the street so their neighbors won't suspect them of consorting with a gas hog.

THE HUMILIATION is not easy to live with but even harder is the absolute lack of sympathy these otherwise dear friends show for the tribulations of a gas guzzler owner.

It does no good to explain that I did not set out in life to own a gas guzzler. In 1969, when I bought the present cause of my shame, no one told me it was a gas guzzler. Indeed, the gas guzzler wasn't invented until last year when, in another triumph for the phrase-making industry, cars that had once been the very essence of American conformity were abruptly stigmatized as menaces to the American way of life.

By that time, the car had been paid for, and I was reveling in the rare luxury of being free of car loans, which meant that a couple of hundred dollars which would normally go for car payments every month were available, instead, for cigars, wine, sirloin and a weekend in Atlantic City.

AS SOON AS society told me I had been driving a gas guzzler all those years, of course, I rushed out to price a little, socially acceptable car with which to repair my social standing. A terrifying social crisis soon became apparent.

A respectable new little gas sipper would cost at least $3,100, before bankers added interest charges. It would get 30 miles to the gallon. On a two-year payment plan, it would cost about $1,700 a year in bank payments and (driving

Russell Baker

New York Times News Service

12,000 miles a year) some $265 for gasoline. A total of almost $2,000 a year.

The gas guzzler, which needed expensive premium gasoline, would cost almost $600 in gasoline over the same mileage. Repair and upkeep were running about $500 a year. A total of $1,100.

IN BRIEF, a socially acceptable new car would mean there would be $900 a year less to spend on cigars and wine over the next two years. It seemed too high a price to pay for respectability. I stayed with the gas guzzler.

My friends who had plunged back into debt for respectability were rewarded when, in the early summer, my guzzler arrived on Nantucket Island, a place where all forward-thinking people fret about ecology in the summer months while real estate speculators practice greed all year round.

To my dismay, Mobil Oil, sole gasoline supplier for the island, had cut off the sale of premium gasoline. When asked where premium could be bought, a service station attendant said, "Cape Cod," which is a $50 round trip by ferry.

AN ACT OF monopolistic corporate arrogance, I complained among my friends. How it delighted them! They stroked their expensive new little gas sippers, which ran on regular, and praised Mobil for ecological statesmanship in forcing the evil, island-destroying gas guzzlers to ruin their engines and retire prematurely to the guzzlers' graveyard.

What of consumer rights? I demanded. What of the oil industry's obligation to serve the public? My friends, good liberals, lovers of the consumer, despisers of the oil industry in other times, smiled with pleasure at the prospect that I would soon lose my $900 wine-and-cigar bonus, as they had. Wineless-ness loves company.

On official corporate stationery, I wrote the president of Mobil, telling him I knew the problems of getting gasoline to a small island off Cape Cod were almost insuperable, but I had such faith in the oil industry's ability to do the impossible that I believed Mobil could do the job.

A MOST considerate vice president replied at great length. A study had been made. It was impossible for the industry to provide premium gasoline to an island 20 miles off the mainland. I showed the letter about "American industry!" I cried. "A bunch of can't-do guys!"

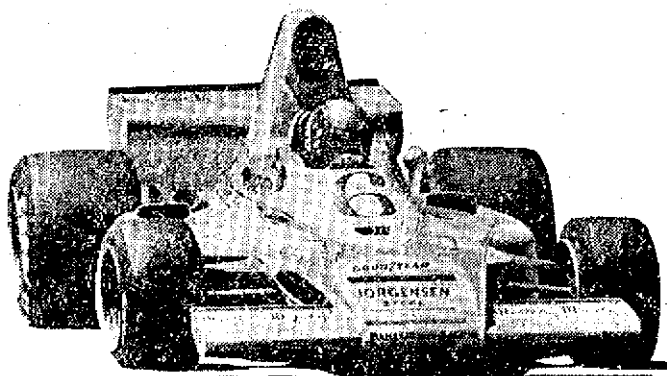

My friends smiled contentedly as my engine began slowly choking to death on Mobil's low-octane gas sipper supply. They will be even happier when I am without cigars, without wine, but, oh, so respectably re-automobiled.

PUTTING SOME MUSCLE into their digging, Rogers Junior High School students Kurt Strasmann 12, left, and Jeff Potts, 14, prepare to plant a Myoporum shrub in Rogers Mini-Park Saturday. The 1.2-acre park came about through the efforts of Rogers students, who decided three years ago that the vacant lot across from the school should be more than just an eyesore.

Graduation for park-builders

saw the project through, the park has become a reality."

Wilson High School senior Kytti Morgan led the campaign after the idea struck her in 1972 that the dusty, often trash-filled piece of land across from the junior high school would make a good park.

Pausing for an interview after planting one of several eucalyptus and albesia trees and myoporum shrubs in the new park, Ms. Morgan said she was a member of the Rogers student council when she first struck upon the park idea. She said she discovered that the property, then unimproved and used by the Park Department for equipment storage, was owned by the city.

A LETTER to Mrs. Simon began the long, bureaucratic process of turning the dirt into a picturesque island between the school and Marine Stadium.

"Mr. Hill (city parks director Chance Hill) was really enthused about the idea for the park," Ms. Morgan said. "I never found anybody who wanted to stop it," she said, "it just took time to get through various channels."

Ms. Morgan and Wilson sophomore Katy Nikas, who took over the project last year while a student at Rogers, said they always believed the area would one day become an expanse of green grass and shady trees, it was just a matter of time and time-consuming preparations.

BOTH SAID roadblocks included the fact that the city owned only about half of the property and had to purchase the rest; Hill had to make arrangements for a sprinkler system; the project was held up for six to eight weeks while awaiting approval from the regional coastal commission; and, since there was no money specifically budgeted for the park, students had to solicit donations from various civic and business groups.

"I always thought that it would come through," Ms. Morgan said. "But I was a little concerned that I would be graduated from high school and have gone to college by the time the land actually became a park."

ACCORDING to Hill, that will not happen. Though Ms. Morgan plans to go away to college next fall, the trees should be flourishing and the grass grown enough to need cutting by that time.

The students said contributions to the park have been in excess of $9,000, excluding labor. They added that they hope future Rogers students will consider the park a school project, planting flowers and providing benches.

For now, they added, the park is simply called the Rogers Mini-Park, but Mrs. Simon said a contest may be held among students to give it another name.

City to give tests for lifeguard jobs

Applications for full-time positions as marine safety officer — which is the official name for Long Beach lifeguards — will be accepted through next Friday at the Civil Service Office, Room 332, Municipal Utilities Building, 215 W. Broadway.

The office is open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The positions, which pay a salary range of $1,043 to $1,297 a month, are for the year-around Long Beach lifeguard crew, and do not involve seasonal guards hired during the summer.

Requirements include 12 or more months' experience as a beach lifeguard

during the past four years and the ability to swim one-quarter mile in less than seven minutes. A knowledge of Long Beach swimming areas is desirable, the notice said.

Examinations will be scheduled soon after the close of the filing period next Friday. They will include knowledge of the city's Marine Department operations manual, the state boating law, the city's municipal code, emergency care and transportation of sick and injured persons, and skin and scuba diving.

The quarter-mile swim against time will be a qualifying test only.

the females were in the 18-to-24 group.

About 75 per cent of the population was single, and half never had married.

Long hair and blue jeans are common attire, and when a Belmont Shore resident offers a smoke he may not be talking about tobacco.

Still there are goodly numbers of middle-aged couples and older folks living in Belmont Shore, and even among the "swinging" younger residents a large majority are taxpaying members of the work-day rat race.

Across Alamitos Bay to the east of the shore, Naples offers comfortable waterfront living to those who can (a) afford to live there, and (b) find a place to park.

The area isn't recommended for those who take poorly to salt air or close quarters. Comprising three man-made islands, it is practically covered with expensive apartments and more numerous — and more costly — single-family homes.

Homes on the islands, some with their own boat slips, can sell for well over $200,000, and the residents have occupations to match the real estate values.

Many of the leaders in the professional life of the Long Beach area, the doctors, lawyers and corporate executives, call Naples home.

Naples is a peaceful neighborhood. It's largely free of the youthful rowdiness sometimes found on summer nights in Belmont Shore.

In 1970 census takers found the Naples population centered in the 45-to-55 age bracket, and seven out of eight residents were adults.

Geography helps insulate Naples from the outside world, too. The neighborhood is surrounded by salt water. The Alamitos Peninsula, which could be considered part of the Naples area, is also situated where wayfarers would be unlikely to wander.

The only land approach to the peninsula is along a spit of land that carries Ocean Boulevard to its dead end.

Homes on the peninsula are on the average even more expensive than those in Naples, because nearly all are on or near Alamitos bay or the narrow beach.

A breakwater makes the Peninsula's surf less than spectacular, but waves are active enough to eat away at the beach, and occasional formation of sand dikes by bulldozers is necessary.

Boats are as common in Naples and the peninsula as horses are in Rolling Hills, with more than 2,500 cabin cruisers and sailboats moored in the Alamitos Bay-Long Beach Marina area.

Jubilee time

Festivals in full swing

Aromas of international food dishes, music from around the world and the chatter of people at play will fill the air in Long Beach and San Pedro again today as two, separate festivals continue their weekend runs.

In Long Beach, the 26th Anniversary Festival sponsored by the Greek Orthodox Church of Long Beach, San Pedro and vicinity continues from noon until 9 p.m. today at 1643 Pacific Ave.

A church spokesman said the festival includes authentic Greek food and sweets, games, a bazaar and Greek and American music.

Entertainment will be provided by The Phoenixians and the Olympic Youth Dance Group of Southern California, the spokesman added.

Across town in San Pedro, meanwhile, the Los Angeles Recreation and Parks Department is sponsoring the Fifth Annual International Jubilee.

A spokeswoman said the event, which began Saturday, will be open from 12:30 to 9 p.m. today at Peck Park, 560 N. Western Ave.

The jubilee includes stage shows, international foods and musical entertainment, the spokeswoman added.

She said paintings, clothing and arts from several countries will be displayed in the park's

Countries represented at the jubilee include Japan, Norway, Lithuania, China, Russia, Mexico, Germany, the Philippines, Italy and the U.S. territory of Guam.

Today's schedule of events includes a puppet show at 1 p.m., the Little Angel Choir at 1:45 p.m. and international dance groups throughout the afternoon, the spokeswoman said.

There is no charge for admission to the jubilee, but various prices will be charged for the international foods, she added.

College 'income' classes

A wide range of specialized courses designed to assist individuals in increasing their personal incomes will be offered this fall at Cerritos College by the college's Community Services Office.

Engineers-in-Training is a brief review of fundamentals for candidates for engineering examinations.

Topics to be discussed are math, fluid, mechanics, dynamics, heat transfer and other engineering concepts.

Topics to be covered will include sales techniques, suggestion selling, cash register use and sales techniques.

In the Real Estate area a class in Investment Properties is being offered to assist those interested in buying income property such as apartments, shopping centers, office or industrial properties.

For persons currently employed in accounting or the probate field, a course is being offered in the preparation of estate gift-tax forms.

It will enable income tax preparers to complete federal estate and gift tax returns and to distinguish the legal issues involved.

Also in the tax field is a short course, Average Depreciation Rate Systems, designed to acquaint the student with some of the speciality areas of the U.S. Tax Code.

A course also is being offered in Estate Building and Retirement Planning.

Lectures will begin by showing students how to establish their own insurance needs and retirement goals.

The vehicle to satisfy these goals will then be discussed including real estate, tax shelter plans, banks, savings and loan operations, stocks, mutual funds and life insurance.

At the completion of the class students should be able to establish a financial plan and know which types of investments and insurance will satisfy particular needs.

These classes all begin this month for varying lengths and at different locations in the college district. Particular information on any class is available by calling Cerritos College's Community Service Office. All classes are free.

PUTTING SOME MUSCLE into their digging, Rogers Junior High School students Kurt Strassmann 12, left, and Jeff Potts, 14, prepare to plant a Myoporum shrub in Rogers Mini-Park Saturday. The 1.2-acre park came about through the efforts of Rogers students, who decided three years ago that the vacant lot across from the school should be more than just an eyesore.

Students project pays off

saw the project through, the park has become a reality."

Wilson High School senior Kytti Morgan led the campaign after the idea struck her in 1972 that the dusty, often trash-filled piece of land across from the junior high school would make a good park.

Pausing for an interview after planting one of several eucalyptus and albesia trees and myoporum shrubs in the new park, Ms. Morgan said she was a member of the Rogers student council when she first struck upon the park idea. She said she discovered that the property, then unimproved and used by the Park Department for equipment storage, was owned by the city.

A LETTER to Mrs. Simon began the long, bureaucratic process of turning the dirt into a picturesque island between the school and Marine Stadium.

"Mr. Hill (city parks director

Chance Hill) was really enthused about the idea for the park," Ms. Morgan said. "I never found anybody who wanted to stop it," she said, "it just took time to get through various channels."

Ms. Morgan and Wilson sophomore Katy Nikas, who took over the project last year while a student at Rogers, said they always believed the area would one day become an expanse of green grass and shady trees, it was just a matter of time and time-consuming preparations.

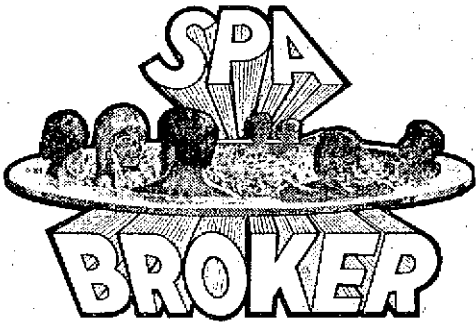

BOTH SAID roadblocks included the fact that the city owned only about half of the property and had to purchase the rest; Hill had to make arrangements for a sprinkler system; the project was held up for six to eight weeks while awaiting approval from the regional coastal commission; and, since there was no money specifically budgeted for the park, students had to solicit donations from various civic and business groups.

"I always thought that it would come through," Ms. Morgan said. "But I was a little concerned that I would be graduated from high school and have gone to college by the time the land actually became a park."

ACCORDING to Hill, that will not happen. Though Ms. Morgan plans to go away to college next fall, the trees should be flourishing and the grass grown enough to need cutting by that time.

The students said contributions to the park have been in excess of $9,000, excluding labor. They added that they hope future Rogers students will consider the park a school project, planting flowers and providing benches.

For now, they added, the park is simply called the Rogers Mini-Park, but Mrs. Simon said a contest may be held among students to give it another name.

City to give tests for lifeguard jobs

Applications for full-time positions as marine safety officer — which is the official name for Long Beach lifeguards — will be accepted through next Friday at the Civil Service Office, Room 332, Municipal Utilities Building, 215 W. Broadway.

The office is open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The positions, which pay a salary range of $1,049 to $1,297 a month, are for the year-around Long Beach lifeguard crew, and do not involve seasonal guards hired during the summer.

Requirements include 12 or more months' experience as a beach lifeguard

during the past four years and the ability to swim one-quarter mile in less than seven minutes. A knowledge of Long Beach swimming areas is desirable, the notice said.

Examinations will be scheduled soon after the close of the filing period next Friday. They will include knowledge of the city's Marine Department operations manual, the state boating law, the city's municipal code, emergency care and transportation of sick and injured persons, and skin and scuba diving.

The quarter-mile swim against time will be a qualifying test only.

the females were in the 18-to-24 group.

About 75 per cent of the population was single, and half never had married.

Long hair and blue jeans are common attire, and when a Belmont Shore resident offers a smoke he may not be talking about tobacco.

Still there are goodly numbers of middle-aged couples and older folks living in Belmont Shore, and even among the "swinging" younger residents a large majority are taxpaying members of the work-day rat race.

Across Alamitos Bay to the east of the shore, Naples offers comfortable waterfront living to those who can (a) afford to live there, and (b) find a place to park.

The area isn't recommended for those who take poorly to salt air or close quarters. Comprising three man-made islands, it is practically covered with expensive apartments and more numerous — and more costly — single-family homes.

Homes on the islands, some with their own boat slips, can sell for well over $200,000, and the residents have occupations to match the real estate values.

Many of the leaders in the professional life of the Long Beach area, the doctors, lawyers and corporate executives, call Naples home.

Naples is a peaceful neighborhood. It's largely free of the youthful rowdiness sometimes found on summer nights in Belmont Shore.

In 1970 census takers found the Naples population centered in the 45-to-55 age bracket, and seven out of eight residents were adults.

Geography helps insulate Naples from the outside world, too. The neighborhood is surrounded by salt water. The Alamitos Peninsula, which could be considered part of the Naples area, is also situated where wayfarers would be unlikely to wander.

The only land approach to the peninsula is along a spit of land that carries Ocean Boulevard to its dead end.

Homes on the peninsula are on the average even more expensive than those in Naples, because nearly all are on or near Alamitos bay or the narrow beach.

A breakwater makes the Peninsula's surf less than spectacular, but waves are active enough to eat away at the beach, and occasional formation of sand dikes by bulldozers is necessary.

Boats are as common in Naples and the peninsula as horses are in Rolling Hills, with more than 2,500 cabin cruisers and sailboats moored in the Alamitos Bay-Long Beach Marina area.

Jubilee time

Festivals in full swing

Aromas of international food dishes, music from around the world and the chatter of people at play will fill the air in Long Beach and San Pedro again today as two, separate festivals continue their weekend runs.

In Long Beach, the 26th Anniversary Festival sponsored by the Greek Orthodox Church of Long Beach, San Pedro and vicinity continues from noon until 9 p.m. today at 1643 Pacific Ave.

A church spokesman said the festival includes authentic Greek food and sweets, games, a bazaar and Greek and American music.

Entertainment will be provided by The Phoenix and the Olympic Youth Dance Group of Southern California, the spokesman added.

Across town in San Pedro, meanwhile, the Los Angeles Recreation and Parks Department is sponsoring the Fifth Annual International Jubilee.

A spokeswoman said the event, which began Saturday, will be open from 12:30 to 9 p.m. today at Peck Park, 560 N. Western Ave.

The jubilee includes stage shows, international foods and musical entertainment, the spokeswoman added.

She said paintings, clothing and arts from several countries will be displayed in the park's

Countries represented at the jubilee include Japan, Norway, Lithuania, China, Russia, Mexico, Germany, the Philippines, Italy and the U.S. territory of Guam.

Today's schedule of events includes a puppet show at 1 p.m., the Little Angel Choir at 1:45 p.m. and international dance groups throughout the afternoon, the spokeswoman said.

There is no charge for admission to the jubilee, but various prizes will be charged for the international foods, she added.

College 'income' classes

A wide range of specialized courses designed to assist individuals in increasing their personal incomes will be offered this fall at Cerritos College by the college's Community Services Office.

Engineers-in-Training is a brief review of fundamentals for candidates for engineering examinations. Topics to be discussed are math, fluid, mechanics, dynamics, heat transfer and other engineering concepts.

Pre-Christmas Sales Training is designed to prepare sales people for work during the Christmas holidays.

Topics to be covered will include sales techniques, suggestion selling, cash register use and sales techniques. In the Real Estate area a class in Investment Properties is being offered to assist those interested in buying income property such as apartments, shopping centers, office or industrial properties.

For persons currently employed in accounting or the probate field, a course is being offered in the preparation of estate gift tax forms.

It will enable income tax preparers to complete federal estate and gift tax returns and to distinguish the legal issues involved.

Also in the tax field is a short course, Average Depreciation Rate Systems, designed to acquaint the student with some of the specialty areas of the U.S. Tax Code.

A course also is being offered in Estate Building and Retirement Planning.

Lectures will begin by showing students how to establish their own insurance needs and retirement goals.

The vehicle to satisfy these goals will then be discussed including real estate, tax shelter plans, banks, savings and loan operations, stocks, mutual funds and life insurance.

At the completion of the class students should be able to establish a financial plan and know which types of investments and insurance will satisfy particular needs.

These classes all begin this month for varying lengths and at different locations in the college district. Particular information on any class is available by calling Cerritos College's Community Service Office. All classes are free.

Britain turns back clock with relics

By DON BRIGNOLO
Ridder News Service

SALISBURY, England — The countryside west of London is the ideal spot to get away from it all in autumn.

The tourists have retreated, the prices are reasonable, and you can spend seemingly endless hours of uninterrupted sightseeing of such historic spots as Stonehenge, Longleat House and the quaint 18th century town of Salisbury.

As I stepped off the train from London here, Salisbury Cathedral stood prominently above the patchwork of the town's tawny-red rooftops.

The cathedral dominates the entire valley which once acted as a focus for an important Roman road network.

APPROACHING the 404-foot stone spire, I paused to look at the sweep of green grass around the cathedral which was used for centuries as a burial ground.

The smell of fresh-fallen leaves, dampened by a midmorning shower, pervaded the air.

Inside the towering edifice are a 14th century clock of wrought iron, lancet windows and tombs of Crusaders and those who died at Agincourt.

The clock is said to be one of the oldest working clocks in England. It has no hands and simply strikes the hours.

Mexico now. The sun is up. The price is down.

Fall is a perfect time to see Mexico. It's sunny. (Pleasantly warm, not hot.) It's less crowded. And it's an even bigger bargain than usual. The 15% food and beverage tax is out. New low air fares for individual travelers are in. And so are "off-season" rates at many hotels.

On December 15 high season rates begin. So see your travel agent or call Mexicana today. And see Mexico this fall, while the sun is up and the price is down.

FLY MEXICANA
The airline most people fly to Mexico.

A guide pointed out the most remarkable aspect of the tower: It was begun in 1220 and was completed for consecration in 1258 — just under 40 years.

EIGHT MILES north of Salisbury is Stonehenge, a mysterious collection of boulders, systematically heaped upon one another by an ancient civilization, possibly dating back 4,000 years.

No one seems to know just how the weighty boulders were set in place but the British say the collection is the best example in the country of that group of ancient stone remainders known as Druids' circles. The stones are believed to be temples of a sun-worshipping civilization.

Lunch in a countryside pub was a welcome interlude. I entered a large oaken door and sat around a warm fire sipping sherry while the rain pattered on the roof. Lunch consisted of cold meats, a salad and, of course, more sherry.

About an hour later, I was on the road again, this time to nearby Longleat, an ancestral home of the Marquis of Bath, with a safari park on the grounds. The mansion is considered by some to be England's prize gem of Jacobean architecture.

THE STately building, begun in 1368, was finished during Elizabethan times.

Inside, the family tree dating from 1215 to the present is hung by the archway. Next to the grand staircase is the family state coach, built in 1750. It has been used at every coronation since that of George IV in 1821.

A leather-lined library houses one of the largest private collections in all of Europe. The "Red Library" contains some 30,000 volumes, including such rare books as a copy of Henry VIII's Great Bible of 1641.

The guide said that the bulk of the remaining books, housed on the top floor in a large library, are not on public view.

A costume museum displays wedding garments, among them robes worn at royal coronations.

Travel talks offered

Travel programs for clubs and social or civic groups are available through Trans World Airlines "Clipped Wings," or retired stewardesses.

The former inflight cabin crew members will provide 25 to 30-minute programs tailored to particular interests, with special film and slide presentations on request.

Fashion shows with old and new hostess uniforms are one of the popular programs with larger groups. There are films of almost every European country as well as of U.S. destinations.

The area Clipped Wings representative is Sandie Van Horn, 845 Stevely Ave., Long Beach 90815. Advance notice of at least two weeks is required to arrange a speaker.

Visit the inspiration for "South Pacific."

7 days, Tahiti, $834.

The price includes round trip individual excursion economy air fare from Los Angeles, first class hotel accommodations (double occupancy) with private bath at the Tahara'a in Papeete for 7 days, transportation between the airport and hotel, a tour around the island (including lunch), a lunch in Papeete and more. Ask your travel agent for "Carefree Tahiti," Pan Am Holiday #583. For a few extra dollars you can extend your Tahiti vacation for a few extra days. Your travel agent can tell you all about it.

Customs officials up on tricks, prices

Honolulu Airport

The Hong Kong jeweler said: "Listen, I'll write you a receipt that you only paid $50 U.S."

I'd just bought a Seiko watch for $100. We can bring home $100 free. Above that we pay U.S. duty. Does your receipt for $50 impress the Honolulu airport Customs man? No, it just irritates him.

A Customs man said: "Every tourist brings back the same things: Watches. Radios. Cameras made in Japan. Silks, jade and carved ivory. We see hundreds of them every day. Most people put on the honest value. So the chiseler stands out."

He said: "Why I could go to work in a Hong Kong department store today and never have to look at a price tag. I KNOW what things sell for."

SAME thing is true for European things clearing through New York, Chicago or Los Angeles. Customs in Miami knows exactly what you paid H. Stern in Rio de Janeiro for Brazilian emeralds.

The New Orleans mail knows the duty-free prices in every Caribbean island. (He could probably tell you what you got ripped off on.)

"Japan's making good watches," said the Customs man looking at my Seiko. "How much did you get it for? About $100?"

Customs will accept an honest discounted price. All over the world, tourist free port prices are usually marked 20 per cent higher. So the shop man can close the sale by saying: "For you, I'm going to take 20 per cent off."

HOMEBOUND from Honolulu you're also inspected by U. S. Agriculture. In the wonderful mango season, tourists stuff the golden fruit beneath their underwear.

Mango is something like spilled perfume. The longworth I bought in Hong Kong, Customs figured it around until I only paid something like $50.

"Isn't there a car ferry from La Paz in Baja California to Puerto Vallarta?"

No, the ferry runs from

Cabo San Lucas, the tip of the Baja peninsula. About stan

er you keep it closed, the more powerful the fruity odor.

"Any fruit, nuts or seeds?" says the inspector. When you say, "no" he says, "Open the suitcase please."

Suddenly the airport is flooded with the wonderful smell of mango. And there you stand with egg on your chin.

(No, they don't draw and quarter you. They just take the mango away.)

"Is there some way I can find out how much duty I will pay on things I buy in Europe?"

Customs puts out a little pamphlet of general information. It's free. You'll find them in a rack at the passport office. It's not really necessary.

The Customs man will add up the things carrying the highest duty and put that on your $100 free allowance. He'll charge you on the lowest duty items.

It's never as bad as you think it will be. On $400 three hours drive south of La Paz. The La Paz ferry goes to Mazatlan.

You clear Mexican immigration just south of Ensenada. If you're going across to the mainland, you MUST get an automobile permit. If you're only traveling in Baja, you don't need it.

For both you need a tourist card. But you can travel as far as Ensenada and back to the border without one.

TRAVEL TOPICS

by Howard Jones

Summer has past and our travel experts are already knee deep in scheduling fall, winter, spring and summer travel plans for the months ahead.

Christmas and New Year's cruises into the warm climates of the Caribbean and the Pacific are going very fast. If a 7 day or longer holiday cruise sounds interesting call us soon as space goes fast.

Air space and hotel space for Mexico and Hawaii is also much requested by those who desire more sunshine with their Yuletide spirit so give us a call.

Incidentally, we still have limited space on our Rams vs. Saints "Superdome Special" to New Orleans, Louisiana on December 5th to 7th priced at only $285.00 per person. It's a real bargain, so hurry!

Hawaii "As You Like It."

$478.97

With United's low price, you'll like it a lot.

Here's your opportunity to fashion your own Hawaii. You pick the hotels. You pick the options. And you save the money.

For instance, pick a 3-island/9-day combination. You'll have 4 days in Waikiki, 3 days in Maui, 2 days on the Big Island of Hawaii.

Enjoy simply beautiful beaches or extravagant sunsets. Visit a king's home, a whaling village or an active volcano. You and your Travel Agent can put together the kind of trip you like best. (IT-UA-AH-147, 149, 151.)

United puts it together with a terrific price that includes midweek round-trip air fare (slightly higher on weekends), airport transfers, and hotel accommodations, per person/2 to a room. (Meals and security charges not included. Prices subject to change without notice.)

There's a whole collection of tours you'll like. Just send in the coupon for the complete brochure.

And remember, you can charge all United vacations on your United Travel Card. It's the easy way to celebrate Hawaii in the spirit of friendship. See your Travel Agent, or call United at 639-6700.

GAL-IVANTING

Things have changed for Chinatown

The icy tinkle of glass bells, the pungent bursts of incense, the sing-song cadence of happy talk, it is all still there.

Sleazy "Chinese" dolls made in Japan are also still there, but with fashionable Mao jackets and some real jade carvings beginning to filter in from the People's Republic of China, things are looking up in San Francisco's Chinatown.

Whatever else they are, the Chinese here are merchants first, last and always. These years of substitutes have been hard on them.

As you move among the throngs crowding Chinatown's Grant Avenue today, it is hard to imagine that the migration began as recently as 1848 and stemmed from a nucleus of only seven Chinese.

One of these men made a rich strike during the goldrush. He and his friends sent home the happy news and by 1851, only three years later, 12,000 men and seven women had arrived from their native province of Kwangtung.

Unfortunately, they did not all enjoy success in the gold fields. Moreover, their ability to survive on next to nothing as well as work for minimal pay made them unpopular with other laborers. Soon a law was passed restricting Chinese immigration.

THIS FORCED those already here into a segregated area which, until after the great fire of 1906, was considered the wickedest in the nation. Opium dens and child prostitution were lorded over by Tong hatchmen who laid more corpses on the streets of Chinatown than Capone did on Chicago's.

Today, all this has changed. A Federal Immigration Law removed restrictions in 1965. Since then, Chinatown's population has swelled to over 65,000 officially (closer to 100,000 unofficially), but in spite of overcrowding, urban renewal projects have improved living conditions and Chinatown's lantern-hung streets are more appealing than ever.

Its newest development is the Chinese Cultural and Trade Center that houses the magnificent Empress of China restaurant on the sixth floor and a teeming marketplace resembling a Chinese discount store at ground level.

The landmark is linked between historic Portsmouth Square and Kearny Street by a distinctive pedestrian bridge with bas relief insets depicting Chinatown's history from its grim beginning to the present. Parking is underground.

I became addicted to dim sum in Hongkong, so was elated to discover that a number of tearooms here specialized in the assorted delicacies. All of their windows looked so appetizing that in a dilemma of choice, we asked a pretty jewelry clerk which one was her favorite.

"I don't eat things like that," she giggled, "I eat hamburgers." Her boss heard our query, however, and directed us to Yang-Sing at 671 Broadway.

IF YOU ARE not familiar with dim sum, sometimes spelled deem sum, it could be compared to French pastry in that the name applies to a selection of goodies rather than a single item. It is not a sweet, however.

Dim sum might include steamed pastry turnovers stuffed with chicken and mushrooms, deep fried cubes covered with sesame seed and filled with a yam-like root, or a snow flower shrimp concoction shaped into puffy balls of steamed dough.

As laden trays are presented, you make a selection and then pay only for what you eat. Our lunch for two at Yang-Sing's cost $3 and we ate far more than we should have.

When it comes to dinner in Chinatown, though, the Empress of China is one of the superb restaurants in this city so famed for them. Regular dinners here run from $6 up to a $12 gourmet adventure which includes barbecued baby quail and happiness dumplings for appetizers with both Manchurian beef and lobsters smothered in prawns and water chestnuts for an entree.

The pavilion in the garden court, copied from one in the Royal Park of Peking, was constructed in Taiwan and reassembled here, without the use of a single nail, by descendants of the original Peking palace craftsmen.

Antique chandeliers from old China are also exquisite, and so is the scenery. Han period panels and mandarin red brocade walls frame a tantalizing view of Coit Tower on top of Telegraph Hill, from where it once cast an ominous shadow over Chinatown.

But now all is well. A great scholar named Fong

Shew Louis solved the problem in the thirties when he warned the powerful Tong leaders that the then-new tower would interfere with the spirit of Chinatown if they failed to offset its vibrations with a tower on top of their own Six Companies Building.

travel

Today, faced with even greater disaster in the shadow of the Bank of America highrise, the Chinese have countered again. This time their new 27-story, 572-room hotel linked to the Chinese Cultural and Trade Center rises high enough on its own hill to guarantee a good fortune in all of Chinatown's cookies.

Toss in a feature that'll let you spend as long as two weeks or as little as two days in any or all four interesting Canadian cities.

Include a soupçon of accommodation at Grand Hotels in each city.

Add everybody who might be interested in discovering cities like Montréal. Where you can breakfast on fresh-baked croissants at one fabulous French restaurant, lunch on frog legs at another, and sup on Crêpes à la Reine at yet another, all on the same short block.

Ottawa. Whose marvelous museums you can meander through, and where you can skate alongside businessmen on their way to work on a frozen canal that wiggles right through the heart of the city.

Toronto. Where over 4,000 restaurants, countless nightclubs and an infinite number of discotheques beckon. And where Broadway shows hit before they hit Broadway.

Québec City. Where it's hard to say neighhh to a relaxing horse-drawn bell-jingling sleigh ride through the last walled city in North America.

With all those new vacationers heading north, who knows what might happen?

The world may shift on its axis. The level of the ocean may rise.

But one thing's for sure. A lot of people will be having a terrific winter vacation before it happens.

Secret Witness

A summary of selected cases, rewards

DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing in care of the special Secret Witness post office box.

Today's summaries follow:

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayers of George W. Harrison, 50-year-old chef at Peppy's Steak House in San Pedro, found stabbed to death in his home at 2817½ S. Pacific Ave. in San Pedro at about 7 p.m. on Aug. 22, 1975. Neighbors saw three black youths leave the house, one carrying a stereo set, and drive away in Harrison's car an hour earlier.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 42-year old Donna Rae Goodell, found beaten to death in her home at 12230 Briarwood St. in Stanton on April 21, 1975.

—Rewards totaling $2,500 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $500 pledged by Knights of Columbus Council 3448 — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Steven Robert Snedeker, 18-year-old clerk who was found shot to death after an apparent robbery at the H & O Liquor Store, 8069 Cherry Ave., on the night of Jan. 27, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 25-year-old John Richard "Sharpstick" Dekker of Bell Gardens, shot to death by an unknown assailant as he was sitting in the Chit-Chat Bar in Bell Gardens shortly after midnight on Oct. 4, 1972.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and arson-burglary conviction of the thieves responsible for the fire and burglary at a warehouse building at 2128 Atlantic Ave. early on May 22, 1975, causing an estimated $40,000 worth of damage to the building and contents, which included thousands of dollars worth of items stored for a City of Hope rummage sale scheduled for that day.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayers of Jose Ballesterio, 18, of Wilmington, stabbed to death by a group of young men who attacked him as he was walking to his nearby home from a bus stop on L-Street near Lakme Avenue at 10:45 p.m. on March 17, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Ashok N. Parekh, 27-year-old owner of Paul's Market, 755 Magnolia Ave., shot to death during a holdup attempt at his store on Sept. 19, 1974.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Douglas Rehphol, 32-year-old music teacher moonlighting as an Anaheim taxi driver, found stabbed to death near his cab in an apparent murder-robbery on Sun-kist Road south of Ball Road in the Anaheim area on the night of Oct. 12, 1974.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Andrea "Trecey" Logan, 5-year-old Long Beach girl found strangled near her home in an alley back of 136 Walnut St. on May 7, 1974.

—A $1,000 reward, including $500 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $500 pledged by store owner Thomas Young, is offered for information leading to the arrest and robbery conviction of the armed bandits who held up Tommy's Liquors, 522 E. Willow St., on Oct. 19, 1974, and fled with cash in excess of $100 plus a quantity of liquor and cigarets.

Chemical fire in L.A. battled

Associated Press

Thirteen companies of firemen were faced with chemical explosions while battling a $500,000 fire in a Los Angeles warehouse Saturday afternoon but put out the blaze within 45 minutes.

No injuries were reported.

The metal-shelled storage facility for International Medical Supplies on San Fernando Road near the Glendale city line was fully involved when firemen arrived. They were instructed to wait until the chemical could be identified.

When it was determined that the substance, acetaldehyde, was water-soluble and wouldn't give off toxic fumes, the firefighters moved in to pour on as much water as possible.

Sharing the warehouse was a camper construction firm that was also damaged when acetones and resins used in camper tops caught fire, firemen said.

2. Amount of cash you desire to invest
3. Special Requirements

WHEN YOU ARE THINKING OF A CAREER

If you are now licensed or enrolled in a Real Estate school you owe it to yourself to call (213) 437-1251. Ask for Bernie Jones. We have several choice openings and what's more important Hodges pays more, trains better, and sees you as a person. We believe Rex. L. Hodges is a great place to work.

Better still, stop in one of our offices and inquire as to how our associates feel — probably the best testimony.

Remember we have been growing since 1929, that's 46 years. Someone once said, "LITTLE THINGS MEAN A LOT." At Rex L. Hodges we are always concerned with the little things.

HAPPINESS IS WORKING FOR HODGES!

SANTA BARBARA MIRAMAR MOTOR LOG

Honda, car of the future?

Story and Photos
By BILL EMERY
Associate Auto Editor

A new "stretched" version of the Honda CVCC two and three door Civic sedan was recently introduced in the Southland as a 5-door station wagon.

We borrowed a new Honda 5-door wagon from Frank Curry, owner of Long Beach Honda Cars at 1760 Long Beach Blvd. in Long Beach and drove to the Miramar motor resort in Santa Barbara, 110 miles North of Long Beach.

Noted for its excellent recreational facilities, The Miramar is easily recognized by the blue roofs of its cottages covering 15 acres from the freeway to its own private beach on the Pacific Ocean.

Founded in 1875 as a farm operated by the Doulton family, the decision to take in paying guests was made two years later, and, with the coming of the railroad in the mid 1880's, affluent guests arrived by their own private railroad car... or their yacht.

Arriving 90 years later in a Honda station wagon with the rear seat folded down carrying luggage, golf clubs and beach equipment, the magic in the name "Miramar" seems even better than ever. The literal translation of the name is "Behold, the sea". Today, in addition to the sea, guests find themselves admiring two heated pools, superb golfing accommodations, tennis and a multitude of other nearby activities.

OVERALL LENGTH of the new Honda wagon is 159.45 inches, 12 inches longer than the Civic two and three-door sedans, and 10 inches longer in wheelbase.

Except for leaf springs in the rear, the Civic CVCC Wagon has all the features of the sedan models including front-wheel drive, dual diagonal braking with power assisted front disc brakes, rack and pinion steering and special options.

The additional length and more than 200 pounds weight give the wagon an edge over the sedans as a distance road car. With front-wheel-drive, the wagon is exceptionally stable on the freeway and has sports car handling in the corners.

It's somewhat less than amazing that a Japanese manufacturer, Mr. S. Honda, who, having confounded the "experts" in motorcycling by becoming the largest producer of motorcycles in the world, suddenly enters automotive manufacturing and in ten years becomes one of the most important producers of really functional automobiles, not only for the American market and the very fickle California market, but the world auto market.

Honda's CVCC engine is a little more than amazing in that it is the only gasoline engine that easily meets the California emissions standards without a catalytic converter. It burns regular gasoline or any other grade. It performs like a racing machine... and, best of all, it delivers around 39 miles per gallon fuel economy on the highway as rated by the E.P.A.

If this car were suddenly put into massive use replacing all other cars in the L. A. basin, most of our automotive-related problems would be solved overnight.

As a sub-compact, the Honda wagon solves the space problem... inside and out. It's absolutely miserly on fuel. Think of the nation's fuel shortage, and the savings the Hondas could effect.

Every inch of that Honda wagon is functional, yet there's no feeling of cramped space. Honda has come a long way toward pleasing the American compact car buyer since its introduction of the N360 in 1967 and even the 800 in 1970. The 5-door Honda Civic CVCC wagon with front-wheel drive will change the American motoring scene. It's an original masterpiece... soon to be copied and embellished upon by all.

Santa Barbara's Miramar by the sea is the largest resort hotel in the city with 200 rooms and 40 cottages spanning 15 acres on one of the most beautiful harbors on the Pacific Coast.

Set among giant trees and exotic shrubs with the Santa Ynez Mountains in the background, it is a delightful haven a little more than two hours' drive from Long Beach.

With 500 feet of private sandy beach and boardwalk, two heated swimming pools, tennis court and children's play area, the resort is centered in a highly recreational area.

Besides swimming and surfing, there is sailing, horseback riding, polo, golfing, fishing and a multitude of sightseeing... all close by.

One of the largest varieties of accommodations is offered by the Miramar as compared with other Southland resorts. Many rooms and suites have kitchenettes and parlors. Several have fireplaces. Some are offered on the oceanfront boardwalk, some in the newer lanai section with its own swimming pool, some in the motor hotel section just off the large pool, and some individual cottages.

The oceanfront rooms are as close as anyone could wish to be on the private sandy beach and scenic bay. Modern and comfortable, these units have sliding glass doors facing the ocean and private terraces or patios overlooking the beach.

A newly wed couple chose to anchor a few yards off shore in their Catamaran last weekend. Their first night will further be remembered by an elaborate display of fireworks off the boat late that night.

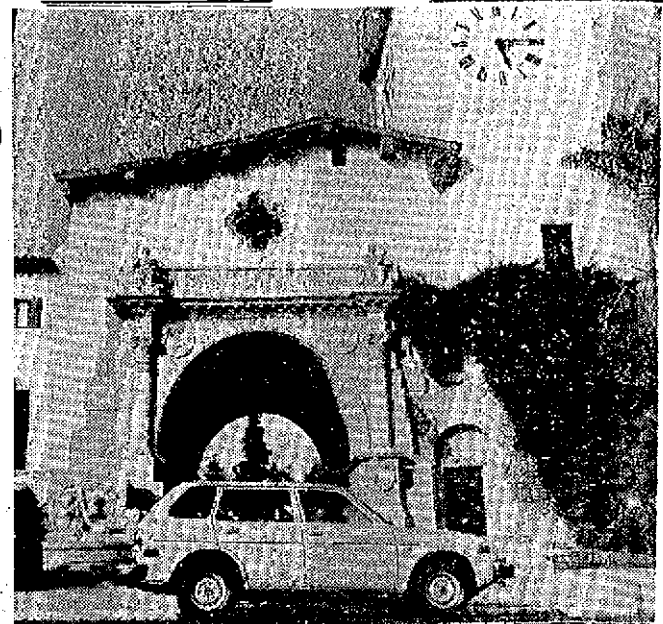

Santa Barbara prides itself as a cultural center. There are many happenings in the music and drama theatres, the museum of art shows classic films, and you can see anything from a rock group to a begonia show, or visit the bird refuge.

The Santa Barbara Mission is one of the more beautiful of the California missions and an interesting window into the past.

Santa Barbara's County Courthouse is the most beautiful public building in the nation and is open daily and Sunday for visiting.

To see and appreciate some of the many interesting buildings and structures in the downtown area of Santa Barbara, leave your car behind and take the Red Tile Tour... a five-block stroll in the heart of town.

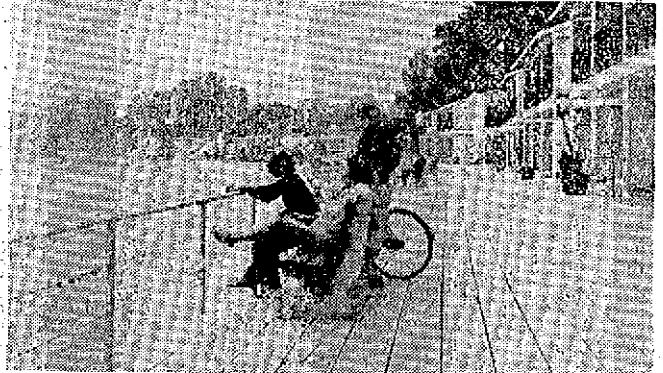

There's plenty to see and do in Santa Barbara and at the Miramar, or you can just relax at your own pace and enjoy the serenity... cruisin' in a Honda.

The nature of fashion for Fall '75---

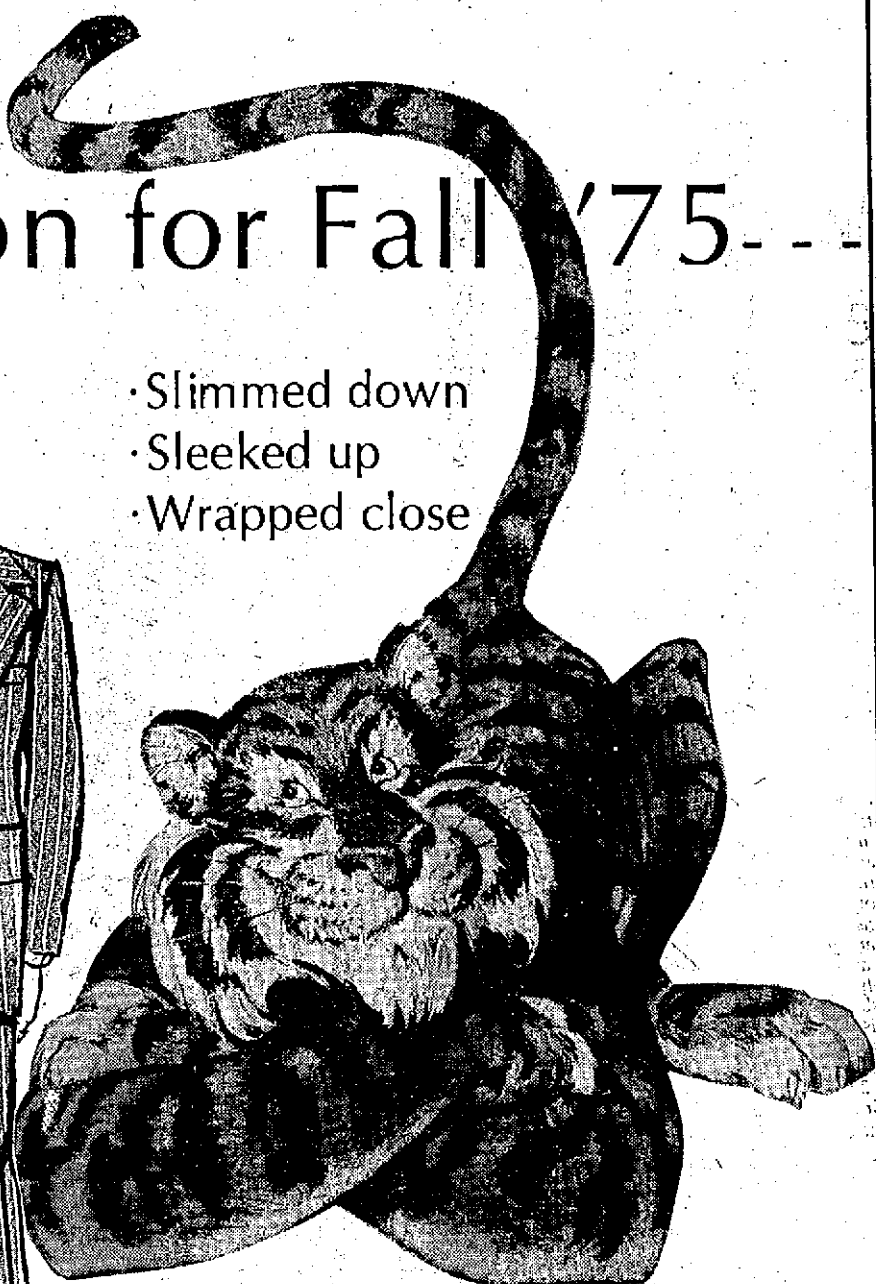

Natural land otter combined with leather panels down sides and front makes a wrap both cozy and elegant for any occasion. Shawl collar is of natural bobcat. At Philip Surfas & Sons Furriers, 829 Pine Ave. Model: Carol Hull.

It's back to the classics this fall — natural fabrics in natural colors. The tailored pantsuit in camel-colored wool is a smart addition to any wardrobe. Fashioned after a man's suit, but with its own feminine touches, jacket is popular new below-the-hip length with large patch pockets and wide lapels. Can be worn with or without the snappy matching vest. At Loehmann's Inc., 130 Laguna Ave., Fullerton. Model: Toni Stines.

- Slimmed down
- Sleeked up
- Wrapped close

Here's a suit with a distinctive international flavor: shaped body, wide-notched lapels, angled deep flap pockets, side vents. And detailed, pressed and finished by hand for a quality custom look. In exciting new colors and patterns by Marco. At Howard Amos Men's Wear, 120 E. Broadway.

The Velveteen Blazer

This well-tailored cotton velveteen blazer by Sir James will take you smartly through the day and on into the night. Casual elegance at any hour. Sizes 6-16. Black or Terra Cotta. $4.00

Pantsuits blazing the fashion trail

It's a pantsuit that's born free... free to dress up or down and always look smart. Jacket styled with button cuffs and flat pockets, pants just slightly flared. It's all polyester and available in a variety of colors. That Gatsby-look hairstyle is an Allura wig for easy care and easy wear. At Wigs by Anthony, 2037 E. Seventh St.
Model: Sandra Garr

Diamonds are a girl's best friend, they say. And these white, suede diamond patches, intricately knit into place, add just the right sparkle to the three piece, all wool pantsuit, available in powder blue. At Schick's, 701 Pine Ave.
Model: Norma Holmes

Be a fashion trail blazer in pantsuit of polyester whipcord. It's by Jones of New York and comes in khaki and slate. The squared off battle jacket zips smartly up the front and has both flap and zipper pockets for added styling. Print blouse from Pant-Her is all nylon and comes in coordinating colors. At Buffums', Pine Avenue at Broadway.

Year 'round swimsuits

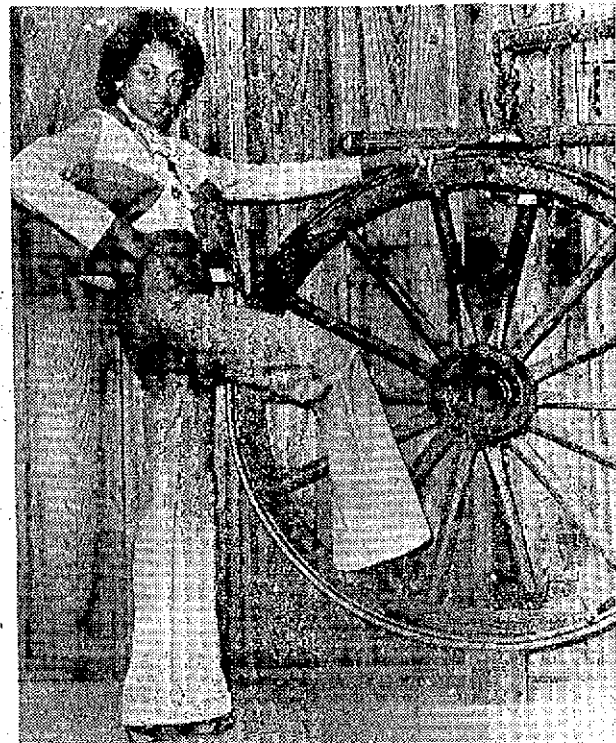

Swimwear is now being worn year round for those women who vacation in the winter as well as summer. In swimwear previews, California houses state that shape has absolutely not changed. The shaping is still very close to the body. They say, however, that radical change is coming in terms of color. Where the tone was once dark and sophisticated, now bright (almost loud) colors are coming to the forefront. Tank maillots for the junior market are available in more variety due to positive response the past season. Matching accessories are coming back in a strong way.

The best in the West is stylish for young and old

Ready to ride the wave of casual fashions in battle jacket and matching pants by Ditto (above). Jacket fades from waist up from brown to beige, while pants turn their fall colors on the descent. Knit top has scoop neck and adds brown and rust flowers. All in polyester and cotton. From Dooley's Hardware Country Store, 5075 Long Beach Blvd. Model: Beverly Wharton.

Tennis fashions on the ball

The tennis boom really has become an explosion. Men, women and children are taking to the courts. A 1974 Nielsen survey indicated that there are approximately 33,900,000 tennis players in the United States, 68 per cent increase over 1973. Now, more than 12 million men play the sport. High powered executives 35 and over accounted for an 88 per cent increase and the figure is still climbing. Because of the many physical and mental factors that go into making a good tennis player, a man must feel totally confident in the way his clothes look and feel to meet the demands of the game.

Acrylic warm-up suits are worn for warmth and also to ward off stiff muscles and cramps. Fall styling of warm-ups indicates extensive palette and pattern interest.

the big news for fall . . . our versatile scarf dress

Makeup:

Use color everywhere

The newest way to wear makeup this summer is to use color everywhere, but carefully, and never with too heavy a hand, says Pablo Manzoni, Elizabeth Arden's director and makeup artist.

He says it's color that makes a face interesting and attractive. Color is the most important aspect of beauty. How a woman handles color makes all the difference in the way she presents herself to the world.

Even in the summer when a tan can help bring color to the face, without the use of eye, cheek, and lip color, the face tends to flatten out and become boring. To bring it back into focus, Manzoni suggests colors like shy turquoise on the lid, soft teal in the crease. For added color impact in the eye area he tops the brow bone with a light lemon yellow then plays up cheeks with soft heathery pink that doesn't just stop at the temples. He recommends blending the cheek color ever so lightly over the bridge of the nose and on to forehead because it will add interesting planes and give the look of a healthy suntan.

Separates mix and match

The separates look is everywhere, in a masterful mix of textures and patterns. The look stays together in the same color family, closely related prints. The pragmatic philosophy: dressing in related component parts get the most looks and fashion for the money. Fabrics here are soft and touchable, yet sturdy, such as corduroys, pre-washed or brushed denim, fuzzy fabrics, tweeds.

Skirt shapes have slimmed down, but the soft look continues. There are still plenty of dirndls, wraps and half-circles. Also the yoked skirt and the button-down look. A very new skirt relationship from Paris is the slim hip skirt. It buttons up one side over pants or tights. Jumpers and aprons carry on over checked shirts.

Pants shape up in jumpsuits, culottes, both slim and full trousers.

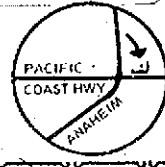

Some separates are so closely related that they're suits. Like the vest-blazer-skirt combinations everywhere. They follow lean classic lines, with blazers or Norfolk jackets trimmed close to the body over a slimmer skirt. Great in co-ordinated plaids.

Young men, boys are dressing up these days

The boys and young men of America may have rediscovered neatness and the novel feeling of dressing up, according to the Men's Fashion Association.

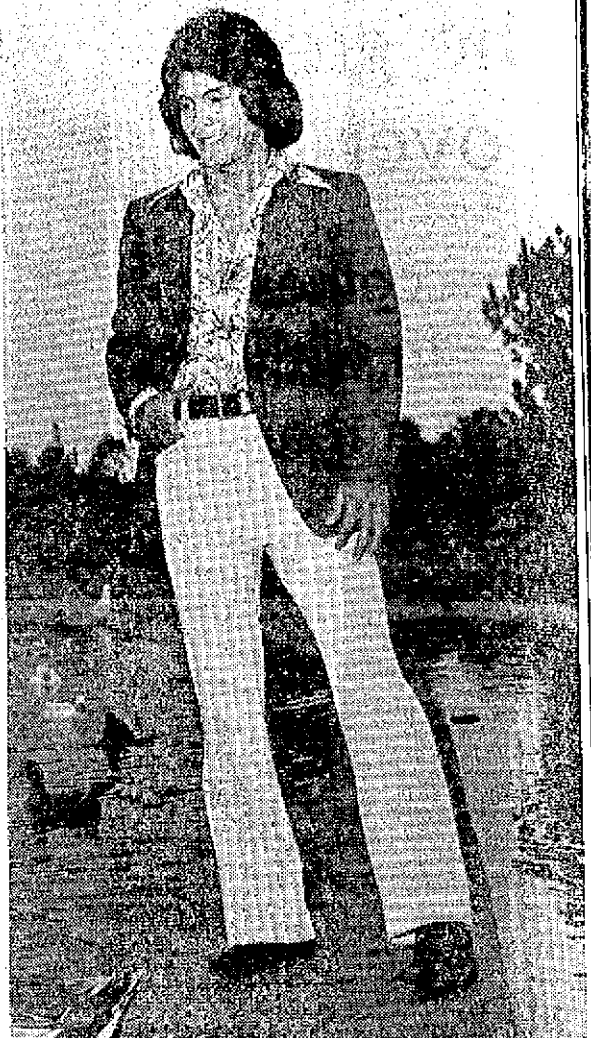

The country's leading retailers have reported that more boys' and young men's dress-up clothing was sold before, during and after this past Easter than during any similar period in the last five years.

There is a definite overlap in the fashions worn by boys and teenagers and those preferred by their fathers and older brothers, as evidenced by single-breasted vests, suits, in velvet, knit and in flannel in the postman blue color that is so popular for next season in men's clothing.

Dress-up leisure suits also emphasize the adult touches in such details as side cinch-taps and unconstructed tailoring.

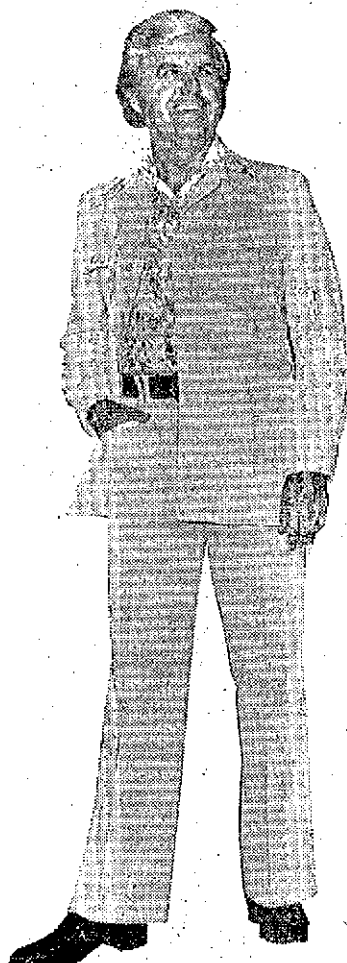

Dress outerwear for boys and young men is both handsome and practical, including interesting A-line coats in camel-colored brushed wool and wrap-around coats with dashing sash ties.

Mix 'n' match is the name of the game for men's fall fashions. Double knit leisure sport coat with large patch pockets and accent stitching coordinates with trousers of matching or contrasting colors. Fancy print leisure shirt is all polyester. Ensemble available in a variety of colors. At Sears, Downtown Long Beach and Los Cerritos Center. Model: Manuel Sotelo.

As easy and natural as all outdoors are the smart, comfortable leisure suits for men. They're available in warm earth tones for fall, and the texturized woven polyester guarantees good looks and easy care. At Dunn's Men's Shop, 4444 Atlantic Ave. Model: Gordon Ditts, owner.

It's the natural thing to do — leisure or sporty

Prints forecast for fall looks

Prints are forecasted for men's fall fashions from updated leisure looks to elegant evening clothes.

Printed sport shirts continue to provide fresh new ideas. Surrealistic scenes add fresh fuel to an already hot fashion item. Rotogravure or photographic effects show all the news fit to print on. Other important looks: airbrush, pointillism, engineered prints, florals, geometrics, scenes, animals, sports and ombres.

A new collection of African inspired prints from the Design Works of Bedford Stuyvesant are found in sport shirts, leisure fashions and umbrellas. The prints are designed by the residents of the Bedford Stuyvesant black community in Brooklyn, New York, from the artistic inception to the actual screen printing. The cotton fabric is printed in tribal geometrics and lyrical scenes of lions, zebras and giraffes.

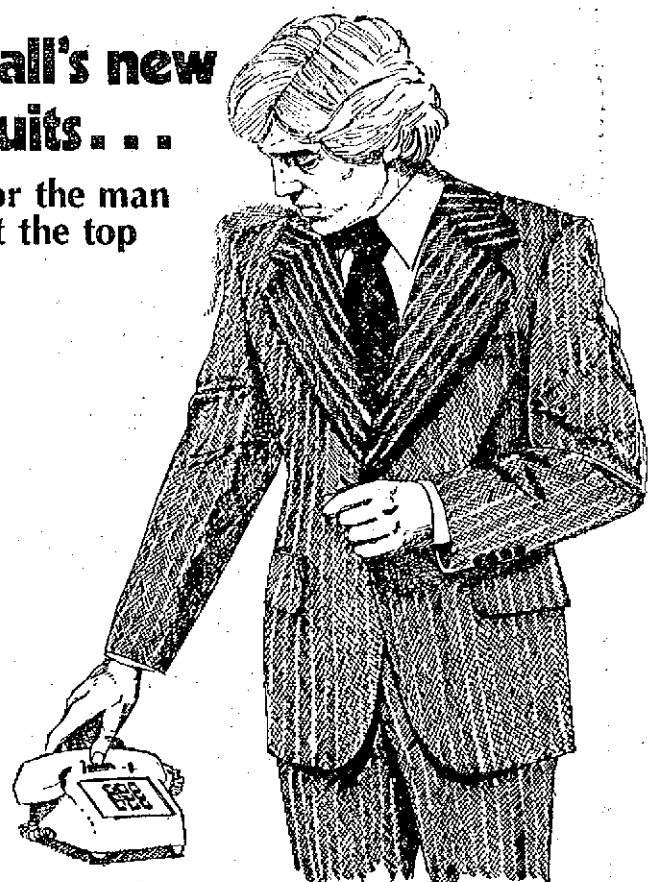

New shirt looks are important now. The big top vies for the spotlight from sportswear to boldly printed evening clothes. The sportive jacket in printed corduroy is a great new look over turtle neck sweaters. The popularity of western styling is updated with quilted printed yokes and cuffs and softly brushed flannels.

Dual purpose shirts, made to be worn with or without a tie, share the limelight with sport shirts. Subtle prints in small florals, paisleys, stripes and the new Americana motifs, offer a man versatility in shirt dressing that cuts down his clothing expenses.

Natural coiffures for '75

Today's woman is liberated from the controlled look of yesterday. She is a freewheeling, movable mop of soft curls and ringlets. All must have the super hair cut and soft permanent. Styled by Rose Marie Beauty Salons, 243 Pine Ave., 16537 Bellflower Blvd., Bellflower, 1350 El Prado, Torrance, and 6852 Edinger Ave., Huntington Beach.

Beautiful hair for '75 is sculptured into precision to enhance the natural shape of the head — width without bigness and curl without frizz. This natural, free look is created through tapering, contouring and textured perming. Styled by Fuller's World of Hair Fashions, 532 E. Willow St. Model: Regina Stevens.

Swinging into high gear for the fall holidays is the charming new China doll hair style. Hair is a happy-medium length, showing a slight bent for movement at the very end, and again at eye level, where a long and glossy band breaks into dramatic open-end curls. Styled by Magic Mirror Beauty Salons, 4492 Atlantic Ave.

Make yourself 'sew' fashionable

Textured and tweeded bulky country knits of Fortrel polyester will stitch up perfectly into favorite fall fashions. Sew a cape with Pattern 1010. A 770 Classic Shirt Blouse worn as a jacket. Sew a matching skirt with Pattern 425. The turtleneck is Pattern 625 of 100 per cent Orlon knit. All at Stretch & Sew, 6247 E. Spring St.

One stop shopping right in fashion

Whatever you're looking for, you'll find it fast at the Egyptian Pharmacy, 5128 E. Second St. In addition to filling prescriptions and selling birthday cards, it has been their business for more than 30 years to supply the largest selection of cosmetics in the area. No matter how obscure the scent or shade, chances are the Egyptian has it. You can daub your face with anything from special cream blends by Princess Marcella Borghese to good old Noxema Skin Cream.

The store specializes in the more exclusive lines of cosmetics such as Ultima, Borghese and Anita of Denmark. They also feature an impressive array of fragrances, boasting more than 80 perfume lines on their shelves. They start at the stop, of course with Givenchy, Chanel, Guerlain, Caron and Nina Ricci, and go right down to the more popular scents.

You also will find everything you need in cosmetic accessories — eye lashes, fingernails, lipstick brushes, powder puffs. Need a wallet? Just so happens the Egyptian Pharmacy carries the entire line of Princess Gardner products, from key cases to glasses cases.

Or perhaps you can't find just the right gift for that wealthy relative who already has everything. The store's elegant gift department has a large selection of beautifully carved Inlay stone jewel boxes and soap dishes.

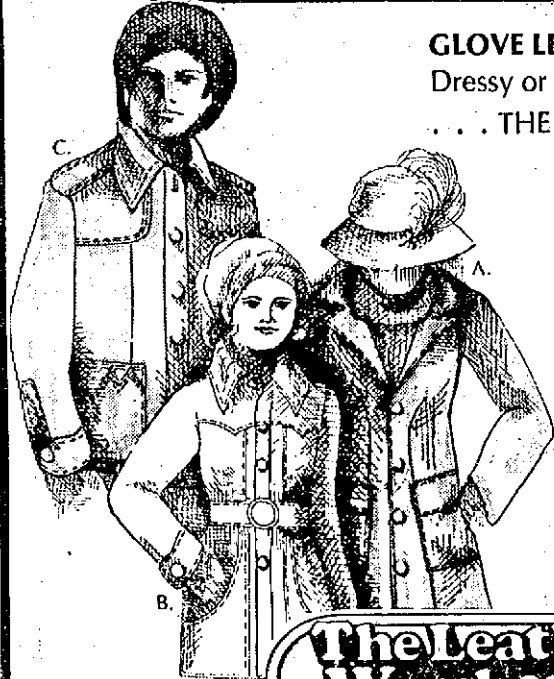

A new department recently opened features a different type of gift selection. Gourmet cooking accessories are offered here, as is a huge variety of brain teaser puzzles, sure to delight youngsters and executives alike.

But don't get the notion this is just an exclusive, gift boutique.

The Egyptian Pharmacy could be your answer to one-stop shopping.

SINCE 1876

The difference between a good product and a great one is oftentimes the painstaking care with which it is produced... the added attention and effort, not specified on any drawing board, just naturally performed by a dedicated craftsman. A distinctive touch rendered by him and him alone.

This commitment to quality is the cornerstone of every Whiting and Davis product... a tradition bred nearly a century ago under the watchful guidance of the company founders.

During the summer of 1876 a local group of New England businessmen pooled their limited resources to quietly form a small, specialty jewelry shop. They moved into the 2500 sq. ft. ground level of a Plainville manufacturing facility determined to produce the area's most elegant adornments.

Today, just a few feet from the 1876 birthplace stands our present factory and general offices, pictured above. Over 120,000 sq. ft. with 500 people dedicated to the creation of the world's finest mesh handbags and accessories... and the perpetuation of a proud heritage.

Coat shapes thinner

There are lots of terrific ways to keep warm this fall. Coat shapes are slimmer or appear less bulky in soft fabrics. Jackets have the newest shapes: Chinese quilted cottons with toggle closing, kimono jackets, pea jackets, stadium jackets and lumber jackets.

The slim coat is elegant in cardigan shapes, Mandarin looks, with fur trim, frog closings. The Tibetan coat buttons at the side with stitched tabs. Slim patterned knit sweatercoats come in many colors.

See the bigger shapes in leather coats, fake fur with real couture details - a luxury look at mini-prices for animal-lovers. Lots of hoods everywhere. Layered coats are another big look: a rain coat over a shinecoat partner. Big rain slickers are lined with plaid wool. Cape-coats are dashing warm-ups.

Scarves and shawls are used as warm-ups over suits, as capes, scarves, all bundled over light-weight layers.

Accessories make headlines for fall

Hats make headlines in brimmy felt fedoras, wool turbans, draped wool hoods. The classic beret goes everywhere, as do skinny stocking caps fitted tight to the head. The big tam, the cuffed hat, and the trapunto beret are also ahead. The coolie hat is an oriental whimsy, the fur toque an extravagance, the scarf hat omnipresent.

Handbags do their job in soft unconstructed leathers, in shirred suedes or pouchy ultrasuedes. The look is roomy and practical with less hardware. Soft new materials are used, such as screen-printed canvas, serape cloth, Chinese carpet cloth. New combinations of fabrics like leather and tweed, cane and leather, cut costs but not fashion. The snakeskin envelope, the patterned leather clutch, and the flat woven leather clutch are slim and capable. Plenty of classic shoulderbags. The new tote is a double-handle trapezoid shape.

Belts cinch the new soft looks with wide obisashes, passementerie, narrow strips of leather wrapping the waist. Scarf belts and fringed sashes are other waistlines to watch. The gold mesh belt for evening. The tailored classics for daytime suits.

LIFE/STYLE—L/S-1

Forbidden fare's fair for dieters

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

For dinner on Monday the dieter had antipasto and a generous serving of lasagna.

On Wednesday, she dined on chili and a green salad.

On Friday, she made the choice between tamale pizza and an equally fattening-sounding dish called Spanish Surprise Ole.

In between she munched cookies during her coffee breaks, treated herself to banana splits and gorged herself on chiffon cream pie, ice cream sandwiches and brownies.

At the end of the week she weighed herself.

She had lost close to four pounds.

Sandy (not her real name) is a chronic calorie counter who has made something of a second career out of keeping current with the latest in dieting facts and fads.

She pronounced her past week's eatery, the Slender Spoon #2, 100 per cent "legal" (a true dieter's term for foods and portions allowable on his or her weight loss program). She remarked that if she'd had any doubts before about the menu's "legality," the pounds she shed dispelled them.

"And I went off my diet one day," Sandy admitted, "and had French fries and a hamburger."

"But I still lost weight. So now I can say for sure the food is OK."

The Slender Spoon, which opened two weeks ago at Bixby Knolls Shopping Center, joins the ranks of the dozen or more diet specialty restaurants and dessert shops which have opened throughout Southern California over the past two years.

Names like Slim Magic, Skinny Haven and Thin's Inn describe their fare. All feature "forbidden" meals and dessert items prepared specially for the calorie conscious customer.

"I FEEL LIKE WE'RE meeting a need here," said Carol Schrier, co-owner of the Camelot-Diet Scene (soon to be known as Slender Spoon #1) in Torrance and the mastermind behind the specialty items served at both the Diet Scene and the Bixby Knolls Slender Spoon.

"I've lived with diets all my life so I know how difficult dieting is. I also know that dieters are always looking for something that's sweet and tasty and low in calories. We offer a way for people to eat some of the things they'd really like to eat without feeling guilty."

Mrs. Schrier, who with her husband, Gene, owned the Camelot, a restaurant which offered diet fare in addition to its regular menu, explained that her first dessert creation — a fruit cream pie — came as the result of a series of experiments with powdered skim milk and fruit.

Continued experimentation led to new discoveries — to a low-cal pumpkin bread and fruit Danish, to "pretty, realistic tasting" diet cookies, cheese cake, brownies and fudge and to a dozen lunch and dinner entrees with tantalizing names and a miniscule number of calories.

Chef Schrier, who termed her work a "labor of love," showed no reluctance in sharing some of the secrets of her success. Basically, she explained, she has removed from her recipes "most of the things that aren't good for us anyway" and replaced them with low-cal substitutes.

A LOW-CALORIE banana split? It's possible now at the Slender Spoon and other

"I never use sugar, of course. And I use low-fat margarine in place of butter, dry skim milk in place of milk or cream."

"We also use veal for many recipes which you might normally think have beef in them. The veal has less fat and fewer calories."

Liberal use of extracts and seasoning gives flavor to the fare. She also explained that she utilizes high-speed commercial equipment to fluff up the goodies and make it seem that there's more of something than there really is.

"There's no question that it's all an illusion, but it's an illusion that looks and tastes right. The important thing is that we're trying to do something that's good for people and that, for the first time in many people's lives, they're able to enjoy something that at least tastes like a goody without feeling bad about it."

AT THE SLENDER SPOON #2 in Long Beach, a refreshing lime green decor greets customers, most of whom owner Jo Ann Taylor says would not be considered overweight or even chubby. Mrs. Taylor admits to a lifetime of counting calories and it was her enthusiasm for what the Diet Scene was doing — not any prior experience in the restaurant business — that led her to open the chain's second restaurant.

"I'm not a sweets eater myself, but I know many dieters who really crave sweets, especially when they're dieting," Mrs. Taylor said. "That's why this food is so great. You can really think you're cheating on your diet yet you know you're not going to have to pay the penalty for it."

Food is brought in fresh twice each day from the central kitchen in Harbor City which also serves the Diet Scene. In addition to the Mexican and Italian dishes mentioned earlier, main courses include Bavarian stuffed cabbage, veal stew, knockwurst, turkey and chili relleno.

All items may be purchased to go. Prices for the See DESSERTS, Page L/S-10

All 'losers' — bigger the better

There was a time when dieting was a lonely pursuit — a matter of counting calories, watching the scales and suffering in hungry silence.

Now, if dieters need to suffer at all, they can do it with a sense of togetherness. The more the merrier, as the old saying goes, and where dieting is concerned the concept has really caught on.

Perhaps the best known of the "togetherness" dieting groups is Weight Watchers International, an eight-year-old organization which has eliminated counting calories altogether in favor of what it terms a "control portion" approach to dieting.

The approach is based on the organization's belief that most overweight people need more than a diet — that they need a radical alteration of their eating habits. Weight Watchers accomplishes this by spelling out for its members what they can eat, must eat and may eat and in what portions and with how much frequency.

Weight Watchers, like several other of the group weight loss groups, requires meeting attendance and weekly weigh-ins. Cost of participating in the organization is a $5 registration fee and $3 per meeting until the member's goal weight is reached.

SIMILAR TO Weight Watchers is The Diet Workshop, which proclaims itself as the second largest national chain of franchised group weight control programs. The Diet Workshop was founded in Boston in 1965. Its program combines a 1,200 caloric, measured portion, three-meal-a-day balanced diet with behavior modification techniques designed to help the dieter change his eating habits.

Cost of belonging to The Diet Workshop is $6 the first week and $2.50 per week thereafter or $25 for a 10-week commitment plan.

Take Off Pounds Sensibly (TOPS) is another organization which encourages meeting attendance and weekly weigh-ins. Unlike Weight Watchers or The Diet Workshop, however, TOPS has no single formula for weight loss or control and encourages its members to consult with their physicians to determine what kind of diet program is best suited to them.

"We're sort of a support group for dieters," said Wilma Anno, an area supervisor for TOPS.

Mrs. Anno added that the membership cost is $7 a year for the national organization and 25- to 50-cents a week to the local club.

A slightly different approach to dieting is found at meetings of Overeaters Anonymous. OA is patterned after Alcoholics Anonymous and bases its program on the belief that overeating — like alcoholism — is a compulsion which can be controlled but never really cured.

A RELATIVE NEWCOMER to the group dieting scene is a Pasadena-based firm called Personal Achievement Associates. Best described as a "consulting firm" to the overweight public, Personal Achievement Associates takes a behavioral science approach to dieting and bases its program on the belief that there is no one explanation and no "best" program for the person who is overweight and wishes to lose his excess poundage.

Personal Achievement Associates will be offering two eight-session courses through Long Beach State University beginning this fall. Fee for the course, which is being offered under the title Creative Weight Control Clinic, is $50. — By LINDA ZINK.

... Prices as hefty as clients

By GLENNA McWHIRTER
Knight News Service

Kitty Kelley is a pleasant woman of 33 with wide eyes, a warm smile, an acceptable figure and a curious nature.

"I kept wondering what it would feel like to go to one of those glamour spas and have cucumber paste spread all over my face, or be covered by warm mud," she said.

So, beginning in the fall of 1973 and for about six months thereafter, she found out.

With an advance from her publisher, Ms. Kelley bought a fistful of airplane tickets and booked herself in for a full week at each of America's 13 major fat farms — from the snobbish Maine Chance in Arizona, to the beguiling Greenhouse in Texas, to the rustic Rancho La Puerta in Baja, California.

She participated in all the exercise classes, calisthenics, massages, hydrotherapy and beauty lessons. She ate the often dreary, sometimes delicious food; skipped the casual sex and kinky medical treatments, and talked at length — tape recorder and notebook in hand — with the guests, the managers and the help.

The result is Ms. Kelley's first book, a paperback ("The Glamour Spas," Pocket Books $1.50).

THERE'S A LOT to learn here.

First, it costs from $1,000 to $2,000 a week, plus tips and incidentals, to visit the haute monde retreats such as Maine Chance, the Golden Door or the Greenhouse. But you can get thin and exhausted just as quickly for about $150 a week at Rancho La Puerta. In all, making the rich and near-rich feel better about themselves is a $1-billion-a-year business.

Second, sex, contraband high-calorie food and booze are available almost everywhere, at a price. The same maid who serves watercress canapes will happily smuggle in a dozen chocolate chip cookies or a bottle of your favorite bubbly. The tennis coach will romp with you in the satin sheets, for a smile and a dozen Italian silk shirts, or a check in the equivalent amount.

"So much attention to bodies and flesh just seems to lead naturally to sexual encounters," says Mrs. Kelley. "Especially after a few days when people are feeling healthier and more relaxed than maybe they've felt in months, or years."

The only truly sexless spas she found were Maine Chance and the Greenhouse, she said.

HERE IS TRENDY, popular La Costa, built "with Teamster money and Mafia know-how" on 8,000 acres of California desert.

Jewelry has a tendency to disappear at La Costa, unless it's swathed in plastic and hidden in the toilet tank. But Millie, the masseuse, will give you the lowdown on the jet setters and movie stars who favor the place: Ava Gardner has had her face lifted a dozen times, says Millie. Julie Andrews has a foul mouth. Barbra Streisand doesn't tip well. Henry Ford occasionally wears a girdle.

At Maine Chance we meet the dowagers and the daughters of America's wealthiest and most snobbish families. There are Mellons and Hellmanns and DuPonts and, of course, Joan Kennedy.

But Mrs. Jay, the hostess, confided to Ms. Kelley that Miss Arden (that's Elizabeth, the cosmetics czarina who founded Maine Chance and who has now gone to the big beauty spa in the sky) "never particularly cared for the Irish or for Catholics."

NEITHER DO MOST of the guests, who are almost uniformly WASP, Republican, wealthy and terribly cliquish.

Many are also drunks. "I met the most delightful alcoholics in the world there," says Ms. Kelley. They smuggle liquor into the limoges, sterling and Waterford crystal-appointed temple in plain brown pharmacy bottles. They are also prone to stealing the demi-tasse spoons and crystal bud vases. Maine Chance employees prefer to say the guests "forget to return" these small items.

The Italian chef at the Golden Door is a superstar who believes it is his duty to "service" as many women as possible between stints in the kitchen preparing turnips that taste like mashed potatoes and unbelievably delicious 35-calorie-per-serving chocolate mousse.

He has closets full of custom-tailored suits, shirts, Gucci shoes, jewelry trinkets — and memories — as his reward.

And so it goes.

Seeing through the high cost of window cleaners

By NORMAN H. STARK

If you've ever wondered what's in some of those fancy expensive bottles or cans of window spray you buy, wonder no more.

You'll be surprised at the least — and maybe downright mad — at what you've been paying for. Here's a way to make your own at a fraction of the store-bought price.

You'll need some ETHYLENE GLYCOL (this is a permanent anti-freeze that you get at your service station and use in your car radiator, and can be bought in small cans) and some plain TAP WATER. Measure out three cups of WATER and stir in two tablespoons of the ETHYLENE GLYCOL. Transfer to a plastic spray bottle, spray glass, and wipe off with a lint-free cloth.

The cost of making your own window cleaner spray is approximately one-quarter cent per ounce. To determine your savings, divide the cost of your store-bought brand by the number of ounces it contains. Then compare the per ounce cost.

Note: Material costs are based on the prices at retail outlets of national drug, grocery and hardware chains. These costs will vary, depending on the geographic area.

Like any product you make at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.

For a free information bulletin describing the sources of chemicals and the easiest methods of obtaining them, send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Formula Bulletin, P.O. Box 2218, Mission, Kan., 66201.

The instant it happened

Like twisting a violin screw, tighter, tighter, President Ngo Dinh Diem's militantly Roman Catholic regime had brought the Buddhists of South Vietnam — 80 percent of the divided country's populace — to the limit of their endurance. They demonstrated. Lines of monks and nuns chanted endless prayers in processions of protest from pagoda to pagoda.

Diem pretended not to see. They raised their religious flag. Diem had it ripped down. When, at length, Diem's police waded into a Buddhist demonstration and left eight of their number dead, the last string snapped.

The Xa Loi pagoda is not one of the more important ones in Saigon and the solemn gathering there of 350 monks and nuns at 8 a.m. on Tuesday, June 11, 1963, attracts little attention. A few lay women are there, dressed in white robes of mourning, weeping as they serve tea. This seems strange to Malcolm W. Browne, Associated Press correspondent, who also is there, for he knows of no recent death.

At 9 a.m., the mesmeric prayer chants cease. The monks and nuns, in ceremonial yellow robes, file out of the pagoda in silence, two by two, a pungent aroma of incense following them into the narrow streets. The procession winds slowly toward downtown Saigon, following a gray car in which five monks ride.

This, too, seems odd to Browne; none of the many previous processions had been led by a car.

At 9:17 a.m., the procession reaches the intersection of Phan Dinh Phung and Le Van Duyet streets and halts. The monks and nuns form a circle. Three monks step from the auto, one of them an aged man, by name Quang Duc. A brown cushion is placed on the hot pavement and Quang Duc lowers himself to it wordlessly, without emotion, and pulls his feet over his thighs in the Buddhists' traditional cross-legged position.

Quang Duc exchanges a few words with two younger assistants, bows his head slightly, and the two pour gasoline over him from a white plastic container. When Quang Duc's saffron robe is saturated the assistants step back.

At 9:22 a.m., with an almost imperceptible motion, Quang Duc strikes a match.

Through the lens of Correspondent Browne's camera the flames of Quang Duc's self-immolation leap the seas, and horrify the world, and neither Diem nor the government in Washington which supports him can pretend not to hear the wails of the old monk's mourners.

CPAs bid to lectures

A lecture series for Certified Public Accountants and Public Accountants will begin Saturday and continue for five weeks in the new Banning Carson School, 1527 Lakme Ave., Wilmington, sponsored by the American Society of Women Accountants and the Banning-Carson Community Adult School.

Each session will last from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and completion of the series carries 30 hours of credit toward meeting the State Board of Accountancy requirement for continuing education programs.

Mrs. Irene A. Lowrie, accounting instructor, is coordinating the series. Among topics to be covered are new pension law, taxes, bankruptcy, estate planning, contracts and EDP problems.

Everyone sees through this

An aptly named exhibit, "A View Through," opens Monday at Long Beach State University with a reception at 7 p.m. for the nine Southern California artists who worked in transparent and translucent materials from the middle 60's through the early 70's.

The exhibition is presented by the LBSU art galleries and the 1975 Museum Studies Program. It is a collection of recent works as well as works created especially for this exhibition by Peter Alexander, Larry Bell, Ron Cooper, Guy Dill, Laddie John Dill, Doug Edge, Robert Irwin, Eric Orr and Terry O'Shea.

EACH ARTIST has used transparent materials to capture, enhance, magnify, multiply and divide light in a variety of ways. Works dealing with transparency and new works which have evolved as a result of the concerns inherent in the transparent work will be presented together for the first time, thus enabling the viewer to examine a whole range of material related to early transparent concepts in the careers of each artist.

Pieces created especially for this exhibition include the Bell/Orr proposal for "Gold and Glass Mist Fountain"; the Cooper film, "Ball Drop and Bar Fall/Sheet Bend"; the sand, glass and neon installation by Laddie John Dill, and an installation designed by Irwin.

"A View Through" will continue through Oct. 19 in Galleries A and B Mondays through Fridays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and from 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays. It is the second annual exhibit organized by the Museum Studies Program and is the culmination of the second of a three-semester program which explores problems in conceiving, cataloging and presenting a major exhibition.

SIDNEY HARTH, associate conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, will conduct two of the youth programs this fall in the Music Center.

One night only

"An Evening with Jo Anne Worley and Billy Barnes" on Sept. 29 only reunites composer-lyricist-writer Barnes and former "Laugh-In" zany actress Worley in Mark Taper Forum of the Music Center. Barnes has written special comedy material for himself and Miss Worley. Each will perform solo acts. Several segments of the concert also will feature them together. Barnes was responsible for Miss Worley's first big show business break in his "Billy Barnes People." Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Special youth programs

Three concerts at the Music Center have been scheduled especially for young people between 8 and 15 years old by the Long Beach Symphony Juniors-Hollywood Bowl Association.

The R'Wanda Lewis Afro-American Dance Company will perform on the first program, Oct. 25, in a "Music for Minorities Day" program. Sidney Harth, associate conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, will conduct.

Calvin Simmons will conduct a "Young America" program on Jan. 31, and on March 6 Harth will again take the podium for "Story of Scheherazade" narrated by Rob Bowers.

Youngsters travel by bus with chaperones to Los Angeles and learn about the concert or program from

EXHIBITS NEAR AND FAR

Contemporary European show set in L.A.

By JEAN SANDERS for Visiting Elise Emery

First major American presentation of contemporary European paintings in almost two decades will open Oct. 1 in Frances and Armand Hammer wing of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. From international public and private collections have been gathered 65 paintings by 16 European artists.

Four senior figures will be represented — Joan Miro, Francis Bacon, Jean Dubuffet and Jean Helion — as well as 12 artists who, in most cases, are well established in their homelands, but in some cases not well known in the U.S.

These include Valerio Adami, Italy; Avigdor Arikha, an Israeli living in Paris; Eduardo Arroyo, a Spaniard who divides his time between Paris and Milan; Anton Heyboer, Holland, and Antonio Segui, an Argentinian residing in France.

Lesser known French realist Jean-Olivier Huclaux and Belgian-born Pierre Alechinsky also are included.

In addition to Bacon, British artists are strongly represented with works by Frank Auerbach, Peter Blake, Lucian Freud (grandson of Sigmund Freud), David Hockney and R. B. Kite), who was born in America but lives and works in England.

The exhibition will continue through Nov. 23.

DON MILES, known for his desert, village and harbor scenes, will give a painting demonstration Thursday when Lakewood Artist Guild meets at 7:30 p.m. in Mayfair Park, South Street and Clark Avenue.

Miles, who began painting in Long Beach in 1932, is a director of the American Institute of Fine Arts of Los Angeles.

The guild is offering two fall workshops. Sam Clayberger, whose emphasis is on contemporary design, instructs the second Monday of each month from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Simon Bolivar Park, Del Amo Boulevard and Downey Avenue.

B. J. Wilson, who uses modular color in her contemporary approach to oil paintings, instructs each Friday at the same park from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

IN THE Ahmanson Gallery of the County Museum are approximately 75 photographs by American master photographer Edward Weston (1896-1958). Both abstract and figurative works are shown, revealing Weston's characteristic photographic emphasis on deep focus, shape and strong value contrasts which transform everyday scenes and objects into aesthetically compelling images.

With Ansel Adams, Weston was one of the main spokesmen for an association of California photographers called Group f.64 which was highly instrumental some years ago in redefining photography for the 20th century.

THREE ARTISTS working with neon in a three dimensional sense are featured in a show to open Monday in El Camino College art gallery. "Color into Space: Three Neon Sculptors" features the work of Larry Albright, George Ketterl and John Uomoto.

Albright's small-scale, visually kinetic sculptures possess subtle textural qualities made possible by his knowledge of the chemistry of the illuminated effect. He sculpts his glass rather than using straight tubing.

Ketterl, head of the sculpture department at California State University, Bakersfield, works on a large scale, incorporating neon in constructions using other materials such as glass tubing, steel rod and wax paper.

Uomoto's works are large scale and are crystalline structures anchored with wire that change color every six inches.

FIRST EXHIBITION of paintings by Los Angeles area artist Connor Everts in more than a decade is on view through Oct. 12 in the USC art galleries, 823 Exposition Blvd. The nearly 40 paintings are predominantly abstract and non-referential. Currently Everts teaches painting, printmaking and drawing at University of California, Riverside.

HARD AT work these days on a 9x27 foot mural on canvas at Newport Harbor Art Museum is the Los Angeles Fine Arts Squad. Actually, the squad, originally composed of four members, is one artist now, Terry Schoenhoven.

Format of the massive painting is the interior of the Museum looking out through the glass door and window walls of the museum shop entrance to the beach and ocean.

The Museum is open from noon to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday and Friday nights from 6 to 9 p.m., and the public may view the "Squad" at work during those hours.

A completion party is scheduled Oct. 10, and the painting will remain on view through Oct. 19. Eventually, after it is shown at various locations in the country, it will become a part of the museum's permanent collection. The museum is located at 2211 W. Balboa Blvd., Newport Beach.

Why art museums are in trouble

By JOHN M. LEIGHTY

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The nation's art museums are on the verge of financial chaos, according to writer-critic Barbara Goldsmith.

"We are moving toward a terminal nightmare of beautiful museums that are closed," said Ms. Goldsmith, an insider to the art world.

A major reason, she contends, is that the "super rich" leave their art collections to museums, which then have to use taxpayer money to build new wings and maintain the paintings.

The Metropolitan Museum in New York, she said, is already closed two days a week because of fiscal difficulties.

"You can always find a man who will build a monument to himself," she said of the practice that millionaires have of leaving their collections for display in a special area bearing their name.

"The problem is we have to support it with taxpayer money."

MUSEUMS on the West Coast, she said, have the same policy of tax-supported special wings and maintenance of special collections, such as the Avery Brundage collection at San Francisco's Asian Art Museum in Golden Gate Park.

The Brundage gift, she said, did not include a maintenance fund.

"It's the people who are paying for it," she said. "That's my pet peeve."

Ms. Goldsmith, a journalist and former art critic, draws on her real life exposure to the golden wall protecting high class art manipulating in her novel, "The Straw Man" (Farrar, Straus and Giroux, $7.95).

Most people, she said, don't understand what goes on behind the directors' doors in the nation's museums and galleries, mostly because the rhetoric and explanations are made so complex.

SHE BELIEVES that most gifts would allow for building and maintenance money if museum directors would insist on such a condition.

In Ms. Goldsmith's book, the protagonist, the son of a millionaire who willed an art collection to a museum, decides to unravel some of the complications and by doing so gives an eye-opening education to the reader.

"Things can be explained. I really believe that," said Ms. Goldsmith.

Mexican parties IN thing

LET'S HAVE a little Mexican music, please...
For members and ladies of downtown Kiwanis club who enjoyed a "Mystery Mexican Cruise."

Party-goers were told to report to Long Beach Yacht Club where they would board boats — destination unknown. Kiwanis-type boat skippers were Norm Masterson with Iola, John Eastman with Ellie, Bill Steuber with Carolyn and Bob Ivey with Barbara (they turned out to be the host couple).

After a cocktail cruise and a fake pass in the vicinity of Juegry Jose's, boats docked at the canal-front home of the Iveys in Naples.

Mexicans for an evening were retiring President George McKeehan and Polly, Ted and Cleo Bowman, Bill and Norma Harris, Kenny and Dorris Martinson, Norm and Donella Rasmussen, Fred and Kathy Walker and Frank and Henrietta Tallant.

More were new member Larry Winchell and his wife, the Al Davises, Alan Johnsons, Week Morgans, Vince Rineharts and Bob Jerues.

THINGS SEEM to come in bunches. And so it was that the Iveys hosted back-to-back parties.

'Way back in 1962, Barbara was provisional training chairman (in 1962, it was still chairman) for Junior League provisional members.

Barbara and Dee Riedman thought a reunion would be a good idea and so they invited the '62 provisionals, husbands and assorted children for a family party which included attending the annual street dance on the Colonnade. Event traditionally la-ments the last summer concert in Naples of the Long Beach Municipal Band.

Dancers included Carl and Patty Newkirk, Bud and Joyce Lorbeer, Bill and Mary Klingensmith, Bob and Carol Senske and Harry and Barbara Wells.

Also John and Ruthie Pearce, John and Pat Vander Lans, Bob and Georgia Nichol and Terry and Dianne Barkis.

MEXICAN SEEMS to be the IN thing this week as Leone Marcum and Hazel Francis can tell you.

party at the Park Estates home of President Virginia Eagleson and husband, Judge Dave.

Other appropriate South of the Border foods were added such as Margaritas by the gallon. Mixologist was Alan Francis.

Reminds of a party I co-hosted some years ago with Joyce Ashcraft. We premixed gallons of Margaritas and they only needed a drop of "frothy," a jigger of tequila and a spin on the blender before serving.

It was the dullest party I had ever been to and everyone left early. My friend and I were at a loss to understand what had happened until we discovered that we had used less than two fifths of tequila for a two hour party for two dozen people. Too much "frothy" spoiled that batch.

Back to the Law Wives party which WAS a success, according to Elmer and Jeanette Hitt, Don and Joan Jorgensen, Gordon and Barbara Proctor, Clark and June Heggness and Betty Jo Spence.

Also Bob and Loraine Waestman, Judge Bob and Sue Wenke, Floyd and Claire Webster, Elizabeth Chel (sans Assemblyman Fred who was nursing a summer cold), Judge Mat and Joan Lucas (just back from a month in Boston) Judge Max and Norma Wisot and John and Flo Brooks (she was the founding president of Lawyer's Wives).

Topics of conversation ranged from motor-home trips — Jim and Judy Edson and Judge Sandy and Liz Lucas discovered that they had taken their families on the same Pacific Northwest-Canadian trip — to the news that the group has canceled its annual October fashion show.

In honor of the Bicentennial year, they have scheduled a fun and fund raising for next May. The Golden Sails will be the scene of a couples' dinner with entertainment including sketches of famous men in the judiciary.

NOTES FROM all over...

A picnic in Simon Bolivar Park, Lakewood, drew members of the Nieto clan from as far away as Kansas and Oregon.

Manuel Nieto was the organizer with an assist from cousins Rudy, Art and Al Nieto.

This first reunion drew 75 families for a total of 340 persons.

And from Claremont and Scripps College comes news that Jim and Jane Kresl are co-chairs of the Sponsors of Scripps College. Their daughter, Charlotte is a senior music student at the college.

...father knows best?

This tale might be titled Adventures of Bergmann in Babyland except that Bob's six children range from toddlers to high schoolers.

Mother of the brood, Pat, was summoned to Texas by a death in her family, leaving husband and father to cope with house and youngsters as well as his law practice.

Bob says he would not have Pat's job for $3,000 per month — especially the six loads of laundry per day. Bob tried to do it in three loads and the repair bill on the washing machine was astronomical.

It was a bad time for the older kids. They couldn't play pool for a week because Bob kept laundry stacked on the pool table.

Of the various furniture styles that fit into the category of American Traditional, so-called Early American remains the most popular. Simple in concept, sturdy and direct in design, it lends itself to the essentially informal pattern of today's living just as well as it did to the unsophisticated life of our ancestors.

It can be casual, rustic, functional; it can also be formal, frivolous, or far out. It blends naturally with all types of decor.

One of the most popular and versatile of these Early American creations is the quaint old-time dough box. It makes an ideal end and lamp table and, since the top is hinged, it provides a roomy storage for all sorts of miscellaneous items...a perfect place for knitting and sewing supplies.

Here is a project any novice can undertake with success. Furthermore, it's a project that can be completed without an elaborate set of tools. In fact, this is another of our patterns used by teachers and county agents in their demonstrations to women on the use of basic hand tools. You simply trace the full-size pattern parts on wood, then saw them out and assemble.

The legs may be purchased at your neighborhood lumber or hardware dealer. It's an inexpensive as well as an easy project.

To obtain the full-size dough box pattern No. 280, send $1.25 (includes postage and handling) by cash, check or money order to: Steve Ellingson, Long Beach Independent Press-Telegram, Pattern Dept., P. O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Ca. 91409.

ira corn on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

One lady in our group is continuously pointing out errors made by others. Unfortunately, she's a better player and is usually right. How do we get her to reduce the critiques?

Lecturing Lucy Long Beach

Answer: A good question and I'm sure that people other than bridge players would like a good answer. I regret that I know of no sure fire solution other than giving the remote control a few clicks downward.

Someone once said, "We are keenly aware of the faults of our friends, but if they like us enough, it doesn't matter."

Dear Mr. Corn:

I bid two hearts over an opposing one no trump opening with this hand:

AK10972
AJ7

My partner had a spade suit and we missed a spade game. Should I have bid spades?

Answer: If you had bid spades it would have been better on this deal. But what if your partner had held hearts?

The answer is that standard methods are not effective in these situations. Better to play one of the modern conventions which describe two suiters over opposing one no trump openings.

The Landy convention is one of them wherein an artificial two club overall promises length in both majors. In another version, an overall of two clubs shows minor and two diamonds shows majors.

Dear Mr. Corn:

I was defending and held the Q-10 of spades. The queen was high, but I wasn't sure of the ten. I led the queen and everyone showed out. I led the ten and dummy asked declarer about spades.

Declarer corrected the revoke and then won my spade ten with the jack. Did I have to lead the ten of spades or could I have switched?

Bad Spade Carmel, Ind.

Answer: No, you could have switched. A card once played may be withdrawn after an opponent's change of play, to substitute a card for one played.

FASCINATING FABRICS

Newest in lacy knits

A reader asks: "I've seen the word 'pointelle' in advertisements of sweaters. What does it mean?"

It means an openwork lacy knit design, which is made on a raschel knitting machine. And what's raschel? The machine is a fantastic piece of machinery that creates knit fabric with loops that run in the lengthwise direction. The lengthwise loops are connected with diagonal loops. Though lace-looking to the point of frothiness that looks like beaten eggwhite, raschel knits are so ingeniously created that they're runproof and snag resistant.

The more mundane articles knit by the raschel method are hairnets, upholstery fabric, curtains, men's underwear, dishcloths and power net foundation garments. Fibers used depend upon the final usage of the knit. Lacy sweaters, dresses and blouses principally use acrylic. But it's acrylic with a finer dimension, higher twist and a glint of brightness.

THE WORD "POINTELLE" itself is engineered. It's an adaptation of the French word "point" for the many stitches used in making real lace and the feminine "elle."

Designs for raschel-knit fashion fabric are created by artists to provide a dimensional effect with a basic motif and one or two sub-motifs. As most pointelle sweaters are solid color, the design provides the important visual interest.

According to the executive designer for the knitwear company which features the "pointelle" monicker, the lacy sweaters are "sophisticated, classic looks with a touch of fashion. They are meant to appeal to the mass market and not just young girls."

Raschel sweater knits are closely related to prevailing fashion. Designers and manufacturers discuss market direction with buyers and merchandisers long before they go all-out to produce their specialty.

A soft, lacy sweater with long lines is an item that coordinates with skirts that are gaining in popularity; that helps update existing wardrobes which include those ever-loved pants. And, updating, rather than buying, a whole new wardrobe appeals in the present economy.

IN ADDITION to being part of the lightweight fabric direction, visually interesting, and a wardrobe extender, raschels — pointelles — are in the medium-price range. The openwork design requires less yarn

than tightly knit fabric. Spun yarn is used, which costs less than textured filament yarn. Yarn represents half the cost of fabric, knit or woven.

Raschel sweaters are cut-and-sewn. There's nothing wrong with this, though you won't find the high styling of a full-fashioned sweater. Look for tape sewn into shoulder seams, which helps hold the shape, and, evenly stitched, overcast seams.

Most acrylic raschel knit sweaters are machine washable; may be tumble dried. Use water of medium temperature. It's just as easy and sometimes more convenient to simply dip the sweater up and down in a basin in "wool wash" suds, blot excess moisture by rolling the sweater in a bath towel. Then, shape and put on another dry towel. Stretch the seams as the sweater dries. Do not hang on a hanger while wet or wring the sweater.

Alamo's room addition customers also receive our special "Customer Discount Card" allowing them a full 25% discount on any furniture we have in the store. You may use this card for future purchases for other rooms in your home. This service alone will save you hundreds of dollars.

4. NOT TOO BIG—NOT TOO SMALL—Let's assume you want a family room large enough for a sofa, a pair of chairs, a TV set, and a game table. If you buy a room too large you have wasted several hundred dollars. If, on the other hand, you build it too small you no longer can use it for what you had intended. Probably have to give up your game table which was very important to you. Alamo specializes in designing exactly what you need.

5. VOLUME BUYING—Alamo Center is one of the largest remodelers in the country. We don't have to buy in small lots for one customer at a time. We can order in large quantities, obtaining savings that are passed on directly to you.

6. UNFINISHED JOBS—Yes, Alamo will build the shell and leave the inside work for you if you wish. This will save you many hundreds of dollars. In addition, we will sell you all the finish materials you need at "Contractors cost" thereby giving you extra savings.

MARGARET CHASE SMITH

A more leisurely pace

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

SKOWHEGAN, Me. (AP) — Her desk is less cluttered now, though mail still piles up like the logs jamming the Kennebec River which flows in back of her house.

Margaret Chase Smith, who for 32½ years represented Maine in Congress, worries that she no longer can help those who come to her with problems. The rose, her trademark, is gone from her lapel.

She misses the United States Senate. "The thing I miss most is not being able to do for people," she says. "I cannot pick up the phone and ask someone, 'What happened to this bill or application?' The Senate offers you a forum."

Congress had been the forum for this impressive lady since 1940 when her husband, Rep. Clyde H. Smith, died of a heart attack. Smith, who had been a congressman for 3½ years, appealed from his death bed for his constituents to elect his wife as his successor. They did, and Margaret Chase Smith served four and one-half terms in the House and four in the Senate. In 1972 she was defeated for a fifth Senate term by Rep. William D. Hathaway, a Democrat who was 48. Age was a campaign issue.

TODAY, AT 77, Mrs. Smith appears to be in fine health. Although she has had three hip operations in the last seven years, she walks without a trace of a limp.

At local restaurants and at local fairs, people still come up to shake her hand and tell her the problems in their part of the state. "At my age, you appreciate the recognition more."

She still rises at 6 a.m. and rarely goes to bed before 11 p.m. "There are morning people, and there are night people. I'm both."

An evening of conversation indicates that she has lost none of the independent views that bemused liberals and conservatives alike who tried to lure her into their ideological corners. She says she favored impeachment of former President Richard M. Nixon; President Ford is not showing enough leadership; Watergate eroded people's confidence in government, and Congress is drifting.

"I'm very unhappy about Congress, especially in the Senate," she said during an interview in the living room of her home in Skowhegan, the small town 50 miles west of Bangor where she grew up and to which she has returned. "The great lack of leadership is a problem. They seem to drift. I began seeing it toward the end of my service."

Her hazel eyes harden, and her jaw juts out a bit.

"I haven't been happy with Ford. I don't think he's showing the leadership we should be having. He represented his district well. He was a good minority leader, very partisan, which is what you need. But he hasn't grown into the job as I wish he would. Too few decisions have been made. But the blame can be divided between the Congress and the President.

"I think Ford was greatly handicapped by being named by a discredited president. And then for him to pardon that man who had not been found guilty of anything. I didn't agree with the timing of the pardon. I don't see why Nixon should be pardoned for something he hadn't been convicted of. I was for impeachment. I felt this would give Nixon a chance to come in and give his side of the story. It would clear the record. Nothing is clear yet."

ASKED IF SHE had been in touch with Nixon since he resigned a year ago, Mrs. Smith shook her head. "No reason why I should. Nixon and I never had anything in common. I was never comfortable with him. I always had the feeling he had never forgotten the days when we had been on opposite sides of the McCarthy issue."

It was in 1950, Nixon was cashing in on his fame as a Communist hunter by running for the Senate. Margaret Chase Smith rose on the Senate floor to deliver what became known as her "declaration of conscience," a repudiation of the "smear tactics" of the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy who was then at the height of his campaign against supposed Communists in government.

"The nation sorely needs a Republican victory," Mrs. Smith declared, "but I don't want to see the Republican party rise to victory on the four horses of calumny — fear, ignorance, bigotry and smear."

She smiles at the memory, and the lines of her face soften. "I've had quite a career, haven't I? Sometimes I don't realize it."

The evidence surrounds her. A hall closet is filled with the academic hoods she wore in picking up 80 honorary degrees. Before marriage, Mrs. Smith worked in a dime store, as a telephone operator and as a country teacher. She never attended college.

A visitor being escorted through her ranch-style house can see tall pines, firs and spruce trees lining the river bank through giant picture windows. Portraits of Mrs. Smith hang in several rooms. Her book, "A Declaration of Conscience," sits on an antique end table in the guest room.

In her garage, a bed sheet is draped over 40 bound volumes of her records — "Every word I've uttered publicly." When these are catalogued and enough money has been raised, they will be part of a Margaret Chase Smith Library. She insists she has never considered herself a feminist. "I was treated fairly in the Senate not because of equal rights, but because of seniority." But she has accumulated an impressive list of "firsts" for a female politician.

She was the first woman elected to the Senate without prior appointment to fill a vacancy; the first Republican woman senator; the first woman to serve in both houses, and the first whose name was placed in nomination for the presidency by a major party.

THE PERSON WHO has perhaps been closest to Mrs. Smith throughout her political career is William C. Lewis Jr., a lawyer who joined her staff after managing her first senatorial campaign in 1948.

A thin, graying man of 62, a bachelor, Lewis has been described as Mrs. Smith's strategist and credited with her success. By her own account, Lewis is "the man behind the woman."

During the years in Congress, they shared a house together in Silver Spring, Md. They both own houses on the Maine coast. They left Congress together. They have since shared a Woodrow Wilson teaching fellowship. And they are together this summer.

"We live together," Mrs. Smith says matter-of-factly. "I don't make any apologies. I value his friendship. He takes care of my legal problems, and he has helped me to deal with other people's problems. But there is no romance between us. Yet, I'm no different than anyone else. I like little attentions."

He pulls her chair out at dinner. She knows he likes his breakfast toast warm, not crispy. And they prompt each other into telling political stories each has heard countless times before.

"Ours is a very close working relationship," Mrs. Smith says. "I don't know what I would have done without him. He has devoted his life to me. I've been very fortunate. People think of us as a team."

Lewis says he is amused when people link them romantically. "It's an honor." But he, too, denies that a romance exists.

There have been times since her husband died when she has considered remarrying, Mrs. Smith said. I've had many men friends. But I could never see where I could marry and do what I was doing. I don't know if any man would put up with my hours."

SHE CONSIDERED taking her maiden name back after her husband's death, she says. "My name was Chase. It's a good New England name. I liked it. But legally, I was Smith." To this day, when she telephones acquaintances and identifies herself as "Margaret Smith," they often don't recognize her until she says, "Margaret Chase Smith."

"Why didn't you say so the first time," one man gruffed in embarrassment.

Though she thrives on politics, she never did get used to being criticized publicly. "You never do. When you go into public life, you go in with your eyes wide open. You're a target. I sometimes seem hard-boiled. But I'm not. I have feelings."

IN THE LIBRARY of her home at Skowhegan, Me., former Republican Senator Margaret Chase Smith leafs through a copy of her book, "A Declaration of Conscience." Behind her are shelves filled with the records of her long political life. The house eventually will be open as the Margaret Chase Smith Library.

Women are asking...

"I like the fun and decorating that go with giving a party, but I hate to cook. Any ideas?"

If you want to give a party, yet avoid most of the hassle, you might enjoy double duty decorating and do-it-yourself cooking. One idea that is gathering momentum is bread sculpture for dining and decorating.

As designer Wayne Andrade explained, "I use a large basket as a base, and fill it with rolls, bagels, breadsticks, plus round, braided and yardstick French and Italian breads." You can let guests pluck a roll and make their own sandwich, or, if you want a lasting arty prop, wait till the rolls dry out, and then spray the arrangement with sealer. Still on the "bread line" theme is a scoop filled with cat-tails and fall foliage. For a fun touch, hot dog buns were wrapped around the cat-tails to simulate weenies.

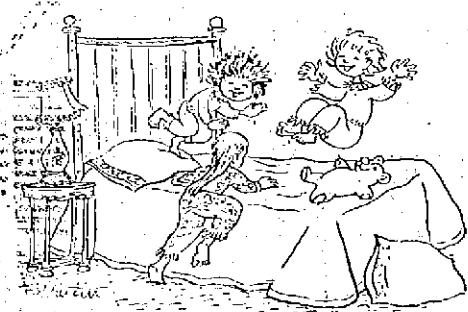

Also instead of plates as serving dishes, multi-sized baskets were used to hold real frankfurters, mustard and chips. It's a do-it-yourself get-together with you lining up the food, and guests "building" their own dinner. Everything from conventional buns to submarine sandwiches are possible if the imagination and food hold out.

P.S. Like to wear a size smaller this fall? Check the four-day diet on which the average, healthy person usually loses four pounds in four days. For a copy, send 35 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Reba & Bonnie Churchill, "4-Day Diet for Figure Trimmers," Independent Press-Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Ca. 90046.

THE NEW ETIQUETTE

Survival tips for tots' slumber parties

When my son Michael asked me if his friend Joe could "sleep over," he caught me in a moment of weakness. "Sure," I said.

"I want to have a friend over, too," said Mary, who is five. "Can Susie come, too?" "Sure," I said.

It all sounded like a lot of fun for the kids. Now that I look back on it, I'm not so sure.

Joe and Susie were coming for dinner, so I planned what I thought was a kid-style meal. That was my second mistake. Joe had asthma, and he was allergic to the grilled cheese sandwich and the milk shake.

Susie can't eat peanuts, so that took care of the homemade peanut butter cookies. What was left of my meal was four stuffed olives and some crinkle-cut french fries (Joe wanted them cooked medium-rare).

Then the fun began. The first thing I yelled after I packed the kids off to bed was "Don't jump on the beds." Then it was "Don't hang out of the window." Then "Turn the radio down." And "Get your finger out of the air conditioner."

AT 10 P.M. Michael yells "Joe poked me in the eye with his big toe."

10:05: Susie says "The blanket is picky."

10:15: Mary yells "Susie snores."

10:45: Joe says "Michael is bothering me."

10:46: Joe says "I want the light back on."

11:00: Mary says "I can't sleep."

11:15: Joe says he's scared and wants to go home. I call his mother and she comes to pick him up. Michael is furious because he doesn't have a friend "sleeping over" and Mary does.

12:00: Mary falls out of bed.

2:00: Susie wakes up crying. She claims she has an earache, and since she has been coughing, I fear an infection. I take my pillow and blanket and sleep next to her on the floor. The floor is wood. The next morning when Susie gets up at five — all kids who "sleep over" get up at five — she's fine. I have a stiff neck.

I'VE LEARNED a lot since that first sleeping over. Here's some advice:

— If a child has never slept over before, make sure maureen reardon

his parents will be home throughout the night. Kids often change their minds and want to go home.

— Check ahead to see what the kids don't eat. Pizza is generally a good bet, although each kid likes it piled with something different.

— Don't have the kid arrive too early in the day. Too much togetherness often ends in a fight.

— Have the child bring along some favorite toys.

— If the child wants to go home in the middle of the night, or is sick, call his parents. Don't be a martyr.

— Don't be offended if the child says, "We don't do it that way at home." Sleeping over is a learning experience.

— Set a definite time in the morning when his parents will pick him up or you will deliver him. Otherwise you may find that you've adopted him.

One final piece of advice: If you have invited a kid under five to sleep over, consult your psychiatrist.

Q. I OFTEN have business dealings with members of the Roman Catholic clergy. My etiquette book says that I should close a letter to an archbishop by writing, "I have the honor to remain, Your obedient servant," followed by my signature. I can't bring myself to do it.

A. Etiquette books are full of pages of dumb charts which tell you how to close letters to various dignitaries. The purpose of these closings seems to be to prove how humble and inferior the letter writer is. I think that "Sincerely yours," or "Sincerely" is an adequate closing for any business letter. "Cordially yours" or "Cordially" is an adequate closing for any social (not personal) letter.

(If you have questions about the new etiquette, or want to share your comments and ideas, write to Ms. Reardon, care of the Independent Press-Telegram. Questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns.)

"The lasagna is made with spinach instead of pasta. I know it sounds awful but it's really delicious."

The menu, which lists about 35 items, is geared for people on special diets which either restrict intake of certain foods or require the consumption of others. According to the menu, the chifon cream pie, for example, has 40 calories and is equal to four ounces of milk. The pumpkin bread supreme (one of Mrs. Taylor's favorites) has 165 calories and is equal to two ounces of milk, four ounces of pumpkin, 1/2 slice of bread and one egg.

Other goodies, their cost, calories and equivalents:

- Chocolate fudge, 75 cents, 90 calories, 1/2 fruit, four ounces of milk.
- Brownie, 85 cents, 90 calories, eight ounces of milk, 1/2 slice bread.
- Six cookies, 60 cents, 80 calories, two ounces milk, 1/2 bread, 1/2 egg.

Both the Diet Scene and the Slender Spoon sell ice cream dishes as well as bakery products. Mrs. Taylor said that legal technicalities prevented her from listing the caloric value of the ice cream but she explained that it was the low butter fat, soft-freeze variety. The small sundae, she said, is equal to four ounces of milk and 1/2 ounce milk topping. A banana split, which sells for $1.25, is equal to eight ounces of milk and one fruit. The large soft freeze supreme dish, which is by some standards, at least, a huge amount of ice cream, is equal to eight ounces of milk.

THE THINNERY, another chain of diet specialty shops in Southern California, specializes in bakery products only. Dessert items include blueberry muffins, carrot cake and carrot loaf, apple torte, creme puffs and a pineapple rum cake.

The Thinner's founder and president is Helen Benton. Like others involved with the diet specialty restaurant movement, Mrs. Benton is a self-proclaimed "chronic dieter" who says she has a "terrible" sweet tooth.

"For a dieter there's a tremendous psychological difference between eating a piece of pie and having a peach and a glass of skim milk. But that's what a piece of our pie is equivalent to."

Mrs. Benton, who was in the catering business, opened the first Thinner in the San Fernando Valley two and a half years ago and is now in the process of opening her seventh shop.

She said she has had little need for advertising. Calorie counters seem to keep up on this sort of thing, she noted, and dieters spread the news word of mouth.

"I guess I just got into the business at the right time...when there was such a tremendous need," Mrs. Benton said. "Anyway, all our stores are doing just fine."

Mrs. Benton uses many of the same "secrets" that Mrs. Schrier had revealed, including using high-speed equipment. She explained that the important thing, however, was a solid knowledge of low-fat foods.

"A lot of it is just trial and error," Mrs. Benton said. "We try to keep things as close to the real thing as possible. Sometimes we do have to use extracts...right now we're stuck with chocolate extract for chocolate, for example. But whenever we can we try to use the real thing."

ASIDE FROM the profit potential of the diet specialty houses, owners cite certain altruistic motivations which have kept them enthusiastic about their work.

Mrs. Schrier, Mrs. Benton and Mrs. Taylor all remarked on how good it made them feel to be doing something that helped other people.

"I continue to be amazed that people will drive from as far away as Bakersfield or San Diego to buy something from my shop," said the Diet Scene's Mrs. Schrier. "But people tell me, 'Listen, I'm not eating when I'm driving and when I get here I stock up on stuff for a week.'"

Employees also seem to have a special incentive in addition to their weekly pay check. A waitress at the Silver Spoon said that she'd lost eight pounds in the 11 days the restaurant had been open just by eating the restaurant's food. The night waitress, she said, had lost 10 pounds.

"I expect to lose 30 pounds in three months. That's why I came to work here."

AT WIT'S END

Better than a swift kick in control knob

I overheard Mother talking recently and poked my head into the living room where she was watching TV.

She was alone.

"Do you mind if I talk to you about...diarrhea?" asked the nervous little man on the screen.

"You bet your sweet bird I mind," said Mother. "I told you the last time to knock it off with the smutty stuff."

"Just two words," he insisted, ignoring her.

"No!" said Mother, flipping the knob to another channel.

On seeing me staring at her she said, "Served the turkey right. He doesn't know me that well," and sat back to watch a drain unclog.

"How long have you been talking to the TV set, Mother?"

"A couple of years now," she said. "I guess I started when Mr. Whipple began to squeeze the Charmin. I told him then, 'Whipple, you keep that up and they're going to put you in a home.' Besides, I don't talk to the TV set. I only talk back to commercial. You should try it sometime. Gets rid of all your hostilities. Like this one."

I WATCHED a full-grown woman submerge a loaf of bread in six quarts of cooking oil. Mother cupped her hands around her mouth and yelled,

erma bombeck

"Five per cent of Americans are on welfare, fathead, and you waste a whole loaf of bread to see how much grease you use."

"It looks fun," I admitted, "but I'd feel like a fool talking to a TV tube."

A commercial came on of a girl who weighed about 58 pounds saying, "I need girdle support here (over her stomach), here (on her hips) and here (pointing to her backside)." I went in for a closer look. She would have to have a fat transplant to keep breathing.

"You want to see a stomach?" I shouted at the tube. "I'll show you a stomach that's beyond a girdle. It needs a vise."

I SAT BACK rather pleased with myself.

"You see," said Mother, "doesn't that make you feel better?"

I had to admit she was right. In the weeks to come I released my hostilities on one commercial after the other. Then, one day I was on the phone and had just finished saying, "You're boring and don't hang up on me! You have never had an original thought in your life and don't worry...I won't call you any more at the office!"

"Who was that?" asked Mother.

"The time of day recording."

"That's a relief," she sighed. "I thought you were talking to yourself."

JAMES HARDEN

CHEF OF THE WEEK

He's tuned in to kitchen duty

Concentration in the kitchen is transmitted to his profession as well. Today's chef of the week, James (Jim) Harden, is president of Harden Broadcasting and general manager of KNAC, Stereo FM/105.5.

He has devoted 23 years of his life to producing news, highlights of which include covering three manned space shots at Cape Kennedy and national elections from coast to coast. Harden Broadcasting Corporation has been based in Long Beach since 1989.

Born and raised in Chicago, Harden studied journalism in high school with concentration on radio and TV. He received his B.S. and M.S. degrees in radio and television from Northwestern University School of Journalism at Evanston, Ill.

His first position was with WBBM Radio and TV in Chicago in 1953. Since then he has devoted his time to writing, reporting and news production. He spent seven years with NBC in Chicago and was transferred to the Burbank-Los Angeles area in 1966 as producer, West Coast, Huntley-Brinkley Report. Harden also has served as west coast manager of news for the CBS Radio and Television network.

THE BROADCASTING profession isn't confined solely to the man-of-the-house. His wife, Claudia, is assistant program director. They have three children, Richard, 17, Pamela, 13, and Jana Elizabeth, 4.

A member of Downtown Lions Club since 1969, Harden currently serves as first vice president.

Claudia comments, "His hands can work as fast as his brain when they come in contact with a typewriter. He can type faster and more accurately than any secretary he's ever had." She calls that a "real bummer!"

But when it comes to being handy around the house, she says "he couldn't, and wouldn't even try." They love animals and she contends, "If we didn't

own a radio station, we'd probably be running some kind of 'Orphans of the Storm' for animals. We have four cats, two dogs and a hamster. We're also redoing part of the planter in the backyard to make a home for a racoon."

Today, he's producing Harden's Hawaiian Skewers. While you enjoy them, tune in on FM/105.5.

HARDEN'S HAWAIIAN SKEWERS

- 2 pounds top sirloin steak cut into 16 pieces
- 8 small onions

- 1 large green pepper cut into 8 chunks
- 8 large mushrooms
- Fresh pineapple cut into 8 bite-size chunks
- 8 cherry tomatoes
- 1 bottle Hawaiian dressing
- 1 teaspoon soy sauce
- 1/4 cup cold water
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 4 skewers

Pierce meat with fork and marinate in Hawaiian dressing mixed with 1 teaspoon soy sauce, at least 6 hours.

Approximately 1 hour before serving, assemble other ingredients. Drain and reserve marinade. Thread skewers alternately with meat, onions, green pepper chunks, mushrooms, pineapple chunks and cherry tomatoes. Each skewer should contain 4 pieces of meat and 2 of everything else. Brush each skewer generously with marinade and barbecue or broil until meat is done to your liking.

While meat is cooking, prepare sauce. Put reserved marinade in skillet over medium heat. Mix cornstarch with water, add to marinade and stir until it just comes to a boil and thickens.

Serve kabobs over rice with sauce, either on the side or poured over before serving. Serves two very hungry people or four not-so-hungry people.

DEAR ABBY

Keeping 'nosey' in-the-know gnaws at neighbor

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor I'll call "Mrs. Busybody" who phones me almost every day to ask, "What did you do last night?" And if I tell her I attended a party, she asks, "Who all was there?"

Last week, my husband and I attended a small dinner party at the home of a woman who is also a friend of Mrs. Busybody, and the hostess made me promise not to mention the party to our mutual friend.

Sure enough, Mrs. Busybody phoned the morning you don't want to answer just because someone has had the nerve to ask.

DEAR ABBY: I am employed as a housekeeper for a rich lady. When things don't go to suit her, she never tells me to my face. Instead, she writes it on a piece of paper and puts it where I will find it, making sure she is never around when I read it.

Abby, I can understand English, and she can speak it, so why doesn't she tell me what's on her mind instead of sending me these notes all the time?

Don't tell me to ask her. She is a very touchy lady. — IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: Why don't you write her a note and ask her? If you can stand one more note, that is, because that's probably how she'll reply.

DEAR ABBY: Should a young person be able to question a rule that is set down by his (or her) parents? My parents often allude to the times when children accepted their parents' rules without question.

I think that's wrong. I want to know the reasoning behind the rules. I also think I should be able to question decisions that are supposedly for my own good.

I'm 17 and old enough to be able to take part in some of the decisions that will affect my life. And I don't think a person my age should have to accept rules he doesn't understand or agree with.

My parents think I'm showing disrespect, but all I am doing is asking for a little more respect from them. Am I out of line? — A YOUNG READER

DEAR READER: No. A 17-year-old should be able to question a rule applied to him (or her) by a parent. The wise and patient parent will explain it. But the ultimate decision rests with the parent until the child is of legal age.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, Los Angeles, Ca. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Ca. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20 cent) envelope.

after the party asking, "What did you do last night?" Naturally, I had to tell her. (How could I have gotten out of it?)

Now my hostess is angry with me because Mrs. Busybody let her know immediately that I had told her about the party.

How can a person avoid getting in the middle like I did? — TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: First, you don't have to promise not to tell anybody anything. (Say, "I won't volunteer any information, but if I'm asked, I won't lie.")

And you aren't compelled to answer any questions

A wild one; Bruins, 34-28

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

Defense took a holiday Saturday.

Calling UCLA's 34-28 victory over Tennessee anything less than an offensive orgy would be a gross understatement.

How else can one describe what took place before 33,356 sun-splashed Coliseum witnesses and a near-nationwide television audience?

The Bruins and Volunteers converted the turf into a giant pinball game, ringing up nearly 1,000 yards on 147 offensive plays. The humpers in this game turned out to be papier mache defenses. Somebody should have screamed "Tili!"

It was one of those once-a-season affairs where the last team having possession usually wins — and Tennessee nearly did. Its defense stopped UCLA on fourth down at the Vol 38 inside the final minute and its offense jelted to the Bruin 29 via a Randy Wallace to Larry Seivers pass one play later.

An incompletion, tackle Pete Pele's sack of Wallace back to the 39 and defensive player of the game Pat Schmidt's interception as the gun sounded gave Dick Vermeil his second victory of the young season and virtually assured UCLA of replacing the Vols in this week's Top 10.

In the Bruin dressing room, the head coach was drenched with sweat from the scorching sun and nervous perspiration from the narrow decision. He looked like someone emerging from a sauna.

"That was a classic game, a great game," he said. "I've always had a great respect for the way Tennessee plays football and this game hasn't changed my feeling."

"I told (Tennessee coach) Bill Battle after the game that he had an excellent team and I was tickled to death to win. I'm just exhausted but it's a great feeling to get a win like this."

Vermeil was probably more tickled with his offense, which did an about-face from last week's lackluster, 37-21 decision over Iowa State. He promised all week his Bruins would open up because Tennessee's defense would force them to unveil more of their arsenal.

"I didn't think either team would score as much as it did," he said. "I thought we would score around 21 but I believe our offense can move the ball on any team in the country this year and we could have scored more—make that should have scored more—today."

Vermeil said he still believes Tennessee is one of the three best defensive teams his club will meet this season (Ohio State and USC being the others).

ONE WEAPON the Vols were quite familiar with was John Sciarra. The senior quarterback did nothing to tarnish his Heisman Trophy candidacy with a 211-yard output, earning offensive player honors for the second week.

He gobbled up 71 yards rushing on 19 carries and added 140 more on 10 completions in 17 passing attempts. He did have a pair intercepted, but neither led to Tennessee points.

Sciarra startled the visitors with a quarterback counter play, something he didn't run in last year's 17-17 tie in Knoxville or against Iowa State.

With it he was able to take a handoff to one side, catch the Volunteer linebackers sprinting toward the flow of play and cut back in the opposite

49ers run crazy in 32-6 triumph

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

Moments after Long Beach State had completed the most lopsided triumph in his two years as head coach, Wayne Howard couldn't decide who he was less impressed with, himself or his team.

After his gladiators had pounded host Cal State Fullerton into submission, 32-6, Howard criticized himself first.

"I was way too conservative," he said. "I'm back to my old conservative self and I've got to get away from that."

Two weeks ago in a 22-17 loss to Southwest

Louisiana Howard's team threw 44 passes. Last week in a 24-7 win over Northern Illinois the 49ers passed 12 times, once in the second half.

"I'm being facetious, but how many times did we throw today, five?" Howard asked after the 49ers had opened their Pacific Coast Athletic Association season before 3,100 sunny Santa Ana Bowl observers.

Actually the 49ers threw 11 times and completed five in recording their second victory in three outings, handing Fullerton its sixth consecutive defeat over two years and its first-ever opening home game loss.

It was difficult to remember the 49ers throwing 11 times.

"We were way too conservative," Howard continued. "They were giving us some things in their secondary but we were afraid to challenge them."

"I've got to get my head together and get back to throwing 20, 22, 24 times a game, win, lose or draw, or teams are going to start jamming us and then, when we have to, it will be that much tougher to throw."

The 49ers did more than a little jamming of their own Saturday, sending an assortment of running backs at the Fullerton defense.

Led by tailback Herb Lusk, who amassed a 49er career high 130 yards, and fullback Mark Bailey, who scored three touchdowns for the second game in a row, the 49ers accumulated 312 rushing yards on 67 attempts.

Meyer fires record 64 in QM Open

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

A course record 64 by Dennie Meyer and two hot rounds by touring pros put the heat on hometown heroes Beau Baugh and Mike Krantz Saturday and set up a potentially thrilling wrap-up today in the $22,500 Long Beach Queen Mary Open Golf Championship.

Meyer, a 31-year-old club pro from Quail Lake, blistered the 6,675-yard El Dorado course in 33-31 despite a bogey on the final hole, a mean 228-yard par-3 which should be a great finishing hole today.

Meyer's sensational round elevated him into a three-way tie for the lead with Baugh, who bogied two of the last five holes for a 71, and Krantz, who posted a 70. The three stand at 10-under-par 210.

But lurking just off the pace are two veteran touring pros, Jack Ewing and Curtis Sifford, who may be able to stand the pressure more than the men in front of them. Ewing shot 68 for 208, Sifford 67 for 209.

Sun comes up short again

By RICH ROBERTS

SHREVEPORT, La. — If Pat Haden's luck holds, he'll fall down a manhole at the gates to Oxford this week.

"I sure would have liked to go out with a win," the Sun's departing quarterback said after coming up short for the second week in a row in Saturday night's 38-29 loss to the Steamer.

Last week he was kayored by Charlotte on the one-yard line. This week he was buried on the two by Shreveport after fumbling the snap from center. The Steamer recovered to foil the Sun's comeback.

With 18,777 moon-crazed Louisianans going berserk the outdoor echo chamber known as State Fair Stadium, Haden complained, "They were yelling so loud we couldn't hear the snap count. I'd already held up the play two or three times, so I had to go ahead this time."

He dropped the snap from center Art Kuehn, then dove into a pileup after it.

"I think I have a little integrity," the Rhodes scholar from USC said. "I fumbled, all right, but I recovered the fumble. I wouldn't lie to you, I was on the bottom of the pile with the ball for a good two seconds after the whistle. Then some big lineman (245-pound defensive end Bob Barber) took it away from me."

Haden, stepping out of character, argued vehemently with referee Dave Barzell.

Stanford ties up Michigan

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Mike Langford kicked a 33-yard field goal with nine seconds remaining Saturday to climax a phenomenal see-saw fourth quarter which lifted Stanford to a stunning 19-19 tie with second-ranked Michigan.

The deadlock thwarted Michigan coach Bo Schembechler's bid to gain his 100th collegiate victory, but it extended the Wolverines' home unbeaten streak to 36 games. Stanford quarterback Mike Cordova continually burned the young Wolverine secondary with pinpoint passes to bring the Cardinals into scoring points in the fourth quarter, six on field goals by Langford in the last 3:41. Stanford, 0-1-1, trailed at the half 7-6 after Michigan wingback Jim Smith caught a desperation 48-yard touchdown pass from freshman quarterback Rick Leach on the final play before intermission and Wood converted.

Wood then booted field goals of 27 and 29 yards in the third period to give Michigan, 1-0-1, a 13-6 lead at the end of three periods. Todd Anderson caught a deflected Cordova pass for a five-yard Cardinal touchdown in the opening minutes of the final period. That tied the game at 13-13 and Wood and Langford traded field goals up to the final gun.

Anderson's score came on an over-the-middle quick pass by Cordova. It was batted by a Michigan lineman and the 6-foot-5, 250-pound Anderson caught it just over the goal line.

Stanford was loaded with heroes Saturday, a

W. Virginia thumps Cal

BERKELEY (AP) — West Virginia fullback Heywood Smith ran through the middle of California's defense for 146 yards and two touchdowns Saturday, leading the 20th-ranked Mountaineers to a 28-10 victory over the Bears.

Smith's second one-yard touchdown run, midway in the fourth period gave West Virginia a 21-10 lead.

PAC-8

and teammate Artie Owens, scored on a four-yard run on the final play of the game to increase the winning margin.

Chuck Muncie, Cal's versatile running back, rushed for 107 yards, caught several passes and also completed a pass for a 50-yard gain which moved the ball deep into West Virginia territory early in the final quarter, but did not lead to a score.

The score was 7-7 at halftime, with Smith scoring for the Mountaineers in the first quarter and Tom Newton plunging one yard for a Cal touchdown in the second.

Ron Lee, of West Virginia, broke the tie with another one-yard touchdown run early in the third period before Jimmy Breech kicked a 28-yard field goal for Cal.

Owens, star of West Virginia's opening victory over Temple, gained 118 yards against Cal which played without its regular defensive middle guard, Paul Von der Mehden, who has a knee injury.

Owens ran 52 yards, West Virginia's longest gain of the game, on a play off right tackle in the final touchdown drive, which came after Cal was stopped at the Mountaineers 25-yard line.

The Bears' Fred Rivera, leading receiver in the Pacific-8 last season, caught two passes on the final California drive, but dropped a well thrown pass by Fred Besana at the 10 to kill his team's last chance for a score.

Muncie's 50-yard pass went to Wes Walker, who was stopped at the West Virginia 16. After moving to the 12, Cal attempted a pass off a fake field goal play but Chuck Braswell intercepted the throw by Joe Roth to protect West Virginia's 14-10 lead at that point.

FORT WORTH (UPI) — Fred Mortensen, who spent most of the night throwing long against TCU's porous defense, hit John Jefferson with a 95-yard touchdown throw late in the third period Saturday night that broke open the game and sent Arizona State to a 33-10 victory.

The loss was the 12th in a row for TCU, equalling the longest losing streak in Southwest Conference history.

Arizona State had stunned the Horned Frogs with a 17-point opening quarter — Ronnie Bonner scoring on a two-yard run, Mike Haynes returning a punt 55 yards for a touchdown and Dan Cush kicking a 28-yard field goal.

The victory was the 16th-ranked Sun Devils' second without a loss this season.

Anderson punted four times for a 49 yard average, including one punt that traveled 62 yards in the air.

Arizona's running game worked well most of the night, with Baker gaining 140 yards on 14 carries and Randolph 107 yards on 21 carries.

Texas dumps pesky Huskies

SEATTLE (AP) — Sophomore Earl Campbell scored three touchdowns and rushed for 198 yards to lead eighth-ranked Texas to a 28-10 victory over Washington Saturday.

Campbell, a 225-pound fullback, scored on runs of 61, 1 and 2 yards.

The Longhorns, 17-point favorites, failed to pick up a first down in the opening quarter and trailed 3-0 before exploding for two touchdowns early in the second period.

Washington pulled close, 14-10, with less than four minutes gone in the second half when reserve quarterback Chris Rowland threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to tight end Nelse Petermann off a fake field goal attempt.

But the Longhorns responded with time-consuming drives, Campbell capping each with short bursts for the scores.

With Campbell's running inside and swift senior quarterback Marty Akins running outside, the Washington defense was kept off balance after the first quarter when Texas managed to run only five offensive plays.

Akins finished with 140 yards on the ground.

The Huskies took the lead with 21 seconds remaining in the opening quarter on Steve Robbins' 30-yard field goal. He earlier missed a 38-yard attempt when the ball struck the upright.

Washington pulled close, 14-10, with less than four minutes gone in the second half when reserve quarterback Chris Rowland threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to tight end Nelse Petermann off a fake field goal attempt.

GAME OF THE DAY

Rams 17, Dallas 7

Dallas has not lost an opener in 10 years but that skin will come to an end today. The Rams' defensive unit yielded only one touchdown in entire six-game preseason schedule and seems to have the upper hand on offense also. James Harris will be throwing to Ron Jessie and Harold Jackson and handing off to a whole stable of hard-running backs led by all-Pro Lawrence McCutcheon. Cowboy defense seems to be coming around. It was impressive against Pittsburgh in final exhibition game. Offensively, however, Dallas has found no one thus far to step into the shoes of the departed Calvin Hill. The Rams lead the regular season series, 5-3, and defeated the Cowboys, 35-7, in a preseason game this year.

The rest of the schedule:

TODAY

CHICAGO 16-Baltimore 13—Neither team looks good enuf to win. Bearcats' defense won't be able to contain potent Colts' offense. Colts haven't got it together yet, so give Bears a hometown decision. 1974 Reg. Season: Baltimore 21-20 at Baltimore. SR-Baltimore 19-13.

CINCINNATI 27-Cleveland 17—Cincy broke "State bragging rights" hex year ago. Brilliant passing game has tipped better than Browns, although admittedly Cleveland seldom gets pushed around. 1974 Reg. Season: Cincinnati 30-17 at Cincy. SR-Cincy 6-4.

DENVER 23-Kansas City 13—Denver hasn't forgotten TV embarrassment year ago. Doubt Chiefs' last pair of preseason wins has really motivated the Chiefs. 1974 Reg. Season: Denver 17-14 at K.C.; K.C. 42-24 at Denver. SR-K.C. 26-4.

GREEN BAY 16-Detroit 14—5 of last 6 meetings decided by 3 points or less (includes 2 ties). Neither one looks like it is going anywhere. 1974 Reg. Season: G. Bay 21-19 (Minn.); Det. 19-17 at Det. SR-G. Bay 44-39-6.

MINNESOTA 20-San Francisco 16—49er situation appears to be on upswing, but how good can it be with Speed as field general. Club is very healthy now. With Tarkenton at the controls, Vikings pressed to handle competitive foe. 1973 Reg. Season: Minn. 17-13 at S.F. SR-EVEN 9-9-1.

NEW ENGLAND 20-Houston 17—Difficult game to figure. First, question remains how striking Pats will operate with Giffel at controls. Both employ 3-man defense, so no adjustments needed. Flipping of a coin will decide. 1973 Reg. Season: N. Eng. 22-0 at Houston. SR-N. Eng. 12-9-1.

N.Y. Giants 24-PHILADELPHIA 20—Each has some assets but probably more liabilities. Morton gives Giants more stability at QB than either Goyia or Gabriel. Up for grabs. 1974 Reg. Season: N.Y. 35-10 at Phila.; Phila. 20-7 at N.Y. SR-N.Y. 40-32-2.

N.Y. Jets 24-BUFFALO 16—Lot of inconsiderates here. Jet rushers not in top health, but condition of Bills even worse. Andy's virtual basket case & loss of ace WR Rashad combined with inconsistent QBing leaves Buffalo's playoff hopes more than doubtful. Namath picking up where he left off. 1974 Reg. Season: Buff. 16-12 at Buff.; N.Y. 20-10 at N.Y. SR-Buff. 16-14.

Pittsburgh 16-SAN DIEGO 13—Prothro delirious adversary when prepping for big game, & this is big one for Chargers. Steeler defense will try to play intensely to make for extra & downright lousy QBing. 1973 Reg. Season: Pittsburgh 38-21 at Pittsburgh. SR-Pittsburgh 3-0.

ST. LOUIS 20-Atlanta 13—Surprisingly, it is the Gerd defense that has been carrying the club. Opportunistic St. Louis could take advantage of mistakes on Falcons, who have to be raised? on offense. 1973 Reg. Season: St. Louis 20-12 at Atlanta. SR-St. Louis 2-1.

WASHINGTON 24-New Orleans 10—Check Manning, since chance he will return here, but his scrambling would be inhibited in any case. Skins too experienced, & too poised to let an expected win slip away here. 1973 Reg. Season: N. Orleans 18-3 at N. Orleans. SR-Washington 4-3.

MONDAY

Oakland 20-MIAMI 13—Something ought to snap here. Miami hasn't lost in Orange Bowl since 1971 (31 straight), & Oakland has lost last 5 straight openers. But this ain't the same Dolphin team that compiled the streak, & the powerful Raiders are stronger than ever now. Miami hurting for a deep threat & Gionka's inside-power game, will have to rely on its defense (hurt by losses of Buoniconti & Anderson); & that won't be enuf against the versatile & explosive visitors. 1974 AFC Championship: Oakland 28-26 at Oakland. SR-Oakland 8-2-1.

Strike a ball for Cowboys' Nye

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer
IRVING, Tex. — Blaine Nye recalls telling Jack Youngblood, one player rep to another, "Jack, you ought to strike. Then we'd be 1-0."

The Dallas Cowboys' Pro Bowl guard might be the only player rep in the National Football League who enjoyed the past week's turmoil.

"I enjoyed the hell out of it," Nye says. "I've enjoyed being involved, seeing what the problems are and trying to resolve something. It's been a lot of fun. I found it stimulating."

Part of the reason may be that Nye never doubted that the Cowboys would be playing the Rams in Texas Stadium today (Channel 2, 1 p.m.).

points and knew we'd have a proposal on the table—in spite of the other teams striking and all—I really couldn't see anybody causing the NFL to miss its games this week over what remained."

Nye admits, though, that when the New England Patriots walked out a week ago "it shocked me."

"I didn't see a strike at

NFL KICKS OFF SEASON TODAY

United Press International

The National Football League, with the threat of a players strike lifted at least temporarily, opens regular season play today with six new coaches, several wide open races and a new ruling which will keep some of the game's top stars out for the entire season.

In openers today, defending champion Pittsburgh is at San Diego, the Jets at Buffalo, Houston at New England, Atlanta at St. Louis, San Francisco at Minnesota, Cleveland at Cincinnati, Kansas City at Denver, Baltimore at Chicago, New Orleans at Washington, the Giants at Philadelphia and Detroit plays Green Bay in Milwaukee. Oakland is at Miami Monday night.

The six new coaches are Ted Marchibroda at Baltimore, Paul Wiggins at Kansas City, Forrest Gregg in Cleveland and Bum Phillips in Houston in the American Conference and Jack Pardee at Chicago and Bart Starr at Green Bay in the National Conference.

The new ruling which will deprive fans of seeing many of the top players in the game this season was instituted to keep clubs from amassing players on injured lists. Basically, it stipulates that an injured player must either be that point accomplishing anything because I still knew some things we could get done. But I guess it was effective in achieving a solution."

Nye is an eight-year pro who holds two master's degrees; one in business administration from Stanford, another in physics from the University of Washington. Clearly, the Cowboys went for brains when they picked Nye to succeed Jean Fugett as player rep a month ago.

"The third day I was player rep we had the meeting in Chicago," Nye recalls. "I guess I could see something happening then. We decided to put the owners' proposal on the table."

ROBERTS' ROUSER:

Rams 24, Cowboys 13

The next one is due Monday and is expected to include "meaningful" points assured by Ram owner Carroll Rosenbloom and other influential NFL executives, including Dallas' Tex Schramm.

"The only reason I could see to strike," Nye says, "was if the owners hadn't let New England return. I went to Tex and said, 'Tex, I'm trying to rally support for calling off the strike.' He reassured me the same way that Rosenbloom reassured Youngblood."

Pressure on the Management Council's executive committee from other owners like Rosenbloom brought the concessions that allowed the players to accept a truce.

"It was face-saving," Nye says.

There are three main points Nye thinks will have to be resolved in Monday's proposals:

• An agreement to open the league's books to the players. The other proposals, he says, "didn't give labor any way of determining what its share of the pie should be; and, on the other hand, we ask for the world and we don't know if the owners have it to give."

• A scale of "consistent salaries throughout the league" based on players' skills and positions. "Otherwise," Nye says, "a player is at the mercy of his own negotiating ability and how tight the general manager might be. Nye indicated that the players will seek a salary arbitration similar to baseball's."

• Significant modification of the Rozelle Rule.

"There have been three or four ideas put forth," Nye says, "but they all have their faults as well as their good points."

It is interesting that while most observers consider the Rozelle Rule to be the major blockade to an agreement, Nye tends to minimize its importance.

"There aren't that many players who play out their options," he says. "I've never even thought about it."

RAMBLING: The Cowboys, like the Rams, are opening the season with only two quarterbacks—Roger Staubach and Clint Longley. No. 3 Jim Zorn, a free agent from Cal Poly Pomona, was waived in favor of running back Preston Pearson. They were down to only three healthy RBs. Zorn is a Gahr High and Cerritos College graduate. The viewers in Long Beach might spot a familiar face on the Dallas sideline. Ben Agajanian has been working with the Cowboys' kickers the last few days. Just in case nobody has heard the big stat on this game, the Cowboys have won 10 in a row. The Rams are working on a string of three. The Rams' last appearance in Texas Stadium was the '73 playoff, which they lost 27-16. When these teams opened exhibition play six weeks ago, the Rams won 35-7. The Rams were 5-1 in pre-season; Dallas 2-4.

Cadets breeze, 54-32

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — Sophomore quarterback Leamon Hall and halfback Tony Pyne scored two touchdowns each and accounted for a combined total of 294 yards Saturday to lead Army to its second successive one-sided victory, a 54-32 triumph over Lehigh.

The Cadets converted eight of 12 possessions into scores, piled up over 400 yards in the first half alone and had a total offense of 643 yards. Hall passed for 184 yards, completing 14 of 19, while Pyne rushed for 117 yards in 21 attempts. The big ground gainer for Army was Brad Dodrill, who rushed 13 times for 153 yards.

BYU fumble leads to 21-17 defeat

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — Colorado State fullback Jim McKenzie scored from one yard out with five minutes remaining Saturday to give the Rams a 21-17 win over defending Western Athletic Conference champion Brigham Young.

McKenzie's winning touchdown followed safety Keith King's recovery of a fumble by BYU's halfback Jeff Blanc on the Cougar 20 yard line.

CSU linebacker Steve Krum intercepted a BYU pass and returned it 28 yards for another touchdown and halfback Gene Butler scored on a two-yard run.

BYU opened scoring in the first quarter when defensive end Stan Varner intercepted a Mark Driscoll pass at the CSU 12 yard line and returned it to the five. One play later, Blanc went over left left tackle and scored.

BYU also scored on a 22-yard field goal by Mark Uselman in the second period and a five-yard scoring toss from quarterback Mark Giles to tight end Bryan Billick in the third quarter.

Air Force falls to Iowa St.

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — Running backs Mike Williams and Jim Wingender both rushed for more than 100 yards Saturday to power Iowa State to a 17-12 victory over Air Force despite an NCAA record 62-yard field goal by the Falcons' Mike Lawson.

The previous record was 61 yards by Ray Guy of Southern Mississippi in 1972.

Lawson later added a 37-yard field goal, leaving him only two short of tying the NCAA career record of 42.

A wind which gusted at time to 35 miles per hour aided Lawson's record-breaking kick, which hit the crossbar and bounced over with one second left in the first half.

Williams rushed for 118 yards in 29 carries and scored on a one-yard run, while Wingender added 101 yards in 17 carries.

49er poloists post overtime victory, 6-5

Long Beach State broke a 5-5 tie in overtime and earned a 6-5 victory over UC Davis Saturday for its first victory in the UC Irvine Water Polo tournament at Newport Harbor High.

The Buffs moved 72 yards in 13 plays the first time they had the ball enroute to a three-yard scoring run by Kunz and came back early in the second period to take a 14-0 lead by going 69 yards in 11 plays with Reed scoring.

Today Long Beach is scheduled for two games, against UC Santa Barbara at 9 a.m. and against Stanford at 12:30 p.m.

All-Weather 78

Goodyear's "All-Weather 78" tire is built with polyester cord that's tempered in an exclusive process for optimum strength and resilience. The wide 78-series tread is "reverse molded" - a technique borrowed from race tire production. In reverse molding, the contour of the tread surface is slightly concave as it comes from the mold - so that when the tire is inflated, the tread makes full, flat contact with the road. The rib tread is well grooved, providing plenty of traction edges for decisive grip. In every detail, the "All-Weather 78" gives you honest quality, at a price that's in step with the time.

Neff's 'lights' turned off

By Dennis Brosterhous

The performance of the La Mirada Stadium lights on the north side of the field Friday night provided a clue to the characteristic of the Neff High offense—off and on, but mostly off.

The lights failed just after the National Anthem, were restored 20 minutes later and disappeared again before the end of the first half.

For 44 minutes of playing time, Neff's offense was equally "in the dark" and La Mirada was able to withstand a late Trojan rally and win 14-13.

It wouldn't have been that close except for some loose ball handling by the Matadores in the late going. Leading 14-0 and the game seemingly tucked away, La Mirada quarterback Terry Haggerty fumbled the ball and Neff recovered at the Matadore 36.

The Trojans converted a fourth-and-10 situation and scored to cut the lead in half with less than two minutes to play.

La Mirada was unable to handle the ensuing onside kick and Neff had control of the ball once again on the La Mirada 48. A pair of key third down, long yardage passes by Neff's Bill Silvey, the second scoring strike of 15 yards to Joe Novak, brought the Trojans to within one point.

But Silvey's magic ran out as the two-point conversion attempted pass was intercepted.

La Mirada tallied late in the third quarter after recovering a Neff fumble on the Trojan 21. Fullback Kevin Bramer carried the ball three times, the final time diving over from the three for the first points of the contest.

The Matadores scored the winning touchdown after knocking the ball loose from the Neff offense again. La Mirada ground out 48 yards in 12 plays with Bramer again doing the scoring honors from one yard out.

Meanwhile, the "short-circuited" Neff offense struggled to attain 92 yards, six first downs and no points in the first 44 minutes; however, the offense came to life and added 80 more yards, four more first downs and its 13 points.

Cerritos all (W)right after whipping Cal

Cerritos' new head coach Tom Wright had a happy debut Friday night. His Dons scored three times in the second half to beat California 20-7. Cerritos was 1-8 last year.

Phil Wilson and Cliff Lewis led the Cerritos attack. Wilson passed for 107 yards and a score, and ran for another TD. Lewis gained 87 yards in 16 carries and tallied once.

Lynwood also utilized a second half explosion to beat Rolling Hills 20-13 with 20-second half points.

Tom Gasper threw scoring passes of 15 and six yards to lead Lynwood.

Mayfair rolled up a three-touchdown lead and coasted to a 20-6 win over Rancho Alamitos. Rich Quesada and Steve Basinger each scored on short runs to pace the Monsoon attack.

Arthur Torosian threw two touchdown passes to lead Canyon past Paramount 21-13. He tossed scoring strikes of 16 and seven yards, totaling 179 yards in the air.

Canyon also employed a 63-yard TD interception return by Bob Pauley, and an 89-yard evening from running back Mike Uye-matsu in the win.

Tom Mandron, completing 8-of-12 passes for 151 yards and a score, led the Pirate offense. It was his first start at the position after laboring as a defensive lineman last season.

Billy Willard scored twice to lead Bell Gardens over Downey, 18-12. Willard ran for a four-yard score, and caught a 70-yard bomb from Rick Frick, who also ran for a 15-yard TD.

Chris Doukakis hooked up with Rick Snow on touchdown passes of 69 and 25 yards as El Segundo whipped Excelsior 12-6.

Norwalk turned back Artesia 20-6 with the running of David Burns and the versatile work of quarterback Mark Allen.

Burns scored on runs of three and five yards, and Allen had 135 yards total offense and a touchdown to his credit.

Mark Rogers scored on runs of 49 and 10 yards to lead La Habra past Sierra 23-0. Tustin and Lennox each won 8-0 squeakers, against University and Valley Christian, respectively and Bishop Amat pounded Edgewood 33-18.

Wishbone brings luck to Western Cypress got a taste of Western's new wishbone offense Friday and wound up on the "bitter" end of a 27-14 score.

Western, which switched to the run-oriented offense following a 2-7 record last year, scored on drives of 88, 27 and 46 yards to build a 20-0 half-time advantage.

Mike Charles and Mark Schultz scored on a short run for Cypress in the third and fourth quarters.

Westminster made a 14-0 halftime lead stand up with the aid of a blocked extra point attempt to defeat Anaheim, 14-13.

With 3:33 remaining, Mike Caldwell stifled Anaheim's chance to tie and the Lions ran out the clock to preserve the win.

The Westminster scores were on one-yard runs.

A field goal by Ray Rodriguez with seven seconds remaining lifted Pius X to a 16-13 victory over visiting Notre Dame. Pius trailed in the contest until the two-minute mark, when a one-yard run evened the score at 13.

Mark Jenkins accounted for the first Notre Dame touchdown with a 100-yard kickoff return.

Warren received a pair of short TD runs from Rick Wilmoth and a long scoring pass from Mark Jerovich to Chris Comely to down Huntington Beach, 28-21.

Wilmoth scored from four and six yards and Jerovich threw 53 yards to Comely to counteract the passing of Huntington Beach quarterback Bill Holst. Holst hit 11 of 21 passes for 238 yards.

Heckman loses debut

Santa Fe High spoiled the debut of St. John Bosco coach Bob Heckman Friday night, halting a furious fourth quarter rally at the goal line to edge the Braves, 21-20.

SJB trailed 21-6 with 8:20 remaining when defensive end Lee Carusa blocked a Santa Fe punt out of the end zone for a safety. Chris Schember raced in for a touchdown, cutting the Santa Fe lead to 21-14.

Five minutes later, at 1:40, the Braves pulled within 21-20 when Mikka Farrell caught a seven-yard TD pass from quarterback Steve Chambers. St. John Bosco went for the two-point conversion, sending Schember up the middle. One game official signaled a score, but conflicting calls and a delay of game penalty squelched SJB's remaining victory hopes.

+ $50 1st Prize + $25 2nd Prize

CONTEST RULES

- For each game, check one box for the team you think will win.
- Check both boxes if you think a game will end in a tie score.
- Write in the final and half-time scores for both teams of the Tie-Breaker game.
- Contests may only order one ballot for each week's contest. Multiple entries will be automatically disqualified. Entries must be on official entry blanks or reasonable facsimile (handwritten or typed). Mechanically reproduced entry blanks such as Xerox copies or mimeos cannot be accepted.
- The winning entry shall be the ballot with the highest number of correct game outcomes indicated. In case of a tie, the ballot closest to the final score of the Tie-Breaker Game shall receive the cash prize. The half-time score serves as a second tie-breaker.
- Prize money will be allotted as follows: First Prize $100, Second Prize $25. Daily home delivery subscribers to the Independent Press-Telegram will receive an extra cash bonus of $50 for First Prize and $25 for Second Prize. Total cash prizes to be given away each week: up to $200. To qualify for bonus prize money, entrants must be subscribers as of Friday of each week's contest.
- Goal Line Gold is open to everyone except Independent Press-Telegram employees and their families. The decisions of the judges will be final and all entry ballots become the property of these newspapers.
- Ballots must be received by these newspapers before 5 p.m. Friday. Entries received by mail or personal delivery after 5 p.m. Friday will be discarded from this week's competition. So mailed ballots should be sent early.

U.S. all but clinches Ryder Cup golf win

LIGONIER, Pa. (UPI)—The United States all but clinched another Ryder Cup triumph at Laurel Valley Golf Club Saturday, outscoring the British, 6-2, to take an overwhelming 12½ to 3½ point lead.

The Americans need only four points in the 16 singles matches today to assure their 17th victory in the 21-year international series.

Great Britain's only victory on a sudden day came in the alternate-shot matches in the afternoon.

Scotch Foursomes
Jackie Brian Huggett, Great Britain, beat Trevino-Bob Murphy, United States, 3 and 2.
Tom Weiskopf-Johnny Miller, United States, beat John O'Leary-Christy O'Connor Jr., Great Britain, 5 and 3.
Casper-Hale Irwin, United States, beat Oosterhuis-Maurice Bembridge, Great Britain, 3 and 2.
Geigerger and Graham, United States, beat Hunt-Darcy, Great Britain, 3 and 2.

when Brian Huggett, making his first appearance, teamed with Tony Jacklin for a 3 and 2 decision over Lee Trevino and Bob Murphy.

The other matches went as expected, including a third victory for Tom Weiskopf. He paired with Johnny Miller for a 5 and 3 triumph over Christy O'Connor Jr. and John O'Leary.

Hale Irwin and Billy Casper won, 3 and 2, over Peter Oosterhuis and Maurice Bembridge, and Al Geigerger and Lou Graham defeated Guy Hunt and Eamonn Darcy, 3 and 2.

Darcy and Hunt tied

Geigerger and Ray Floyd and Oosterhuis and Jacklin tied Casper and Miller for Britain's only points in the morning better-ball matches. Jack Nicklaus and J. C. Sneed defeated Tommy Horton and Norman Wood, 4 and 2, and Gene Littler and Graham Dokka (70) bogied the final two holes Saturday. Sifford bogied the last hole just like Meyer. The 17th, a par-5, can be a birdie hole but there is water left of the green and a player must gamble on his second shot if he hopes to reach safe ground.

Meyer, who shot a 64 to lead the Hartford Open, a PGA tour event, two months ago, wasn't too excited about his scorching round. In fact, when he finished he took his daughter to a lake at El Dorado Park to catch tadpoles before returning to discuss his great shotmaking.

"I played well," he announced in an understatement. "I had only 28 putts and that's good for me."

"He had no putts on the 407-yard 14th hole. He stroked a 7-iron 475 yards into the cup for an eagle-2."

The Redlands native began routinely with six pars, then birdied the next three holes on 12, 5 and 6-footers to turn in 33. He also birdied the 11th and 13th on short putts before going 7-under with his eagle.

Another birdie of five feet followed on the 16th and he holed a four-footer on the 17th. Not a long hitter, he didn't attempt to reach that green in two.

Meyer thought he hit a perfect shot on 18 but caught it caught the left bunker. He blasted to within 15 feet and two-putted.

Baugh and Krantz, former teammates at Long Beach State, failed to play the last five holes in par. Baugh bogied 14th and 17th, the latter when he three-putted, and Krantz bogied the 14th.

Winrow hits it a mile

Tom Winrow, 6-foot-5, 250-pounder from Ocala, Fla., uncorked a drive of 319 yards, 2 feet Saturday to win a long-driving contest held in conjunction with the Long Beach Queen Mary Open at El Dorado.

Winrow was the 14th man up in a 15-man field and was trying to overtake another heavyweight, Jeff Van Wagenen, who had knocked one out 308 yards.

Winrow's first drive was 301 and his second 312 but it was just out on the 11-40-yard fairway. After hitting 293 on his third attempt, the big man wound up and blistered his fourth and final drive into a fairway trap.

An official standing by said the trap cost Winrow at least another 10 to 15 yards.

Van Wagenen settled for second, followed by Charlie Gibson of Phoenix at 307 yards and 2 feet. Dave Sheff was fourth and out of the money at 306 and Frank Snow was fifth at 303-2. How they hit 'em:

Mike Austin, out, 291, out, 288; Mike Rodney 290-2, out, out; Tony Ferrara out, out, 294-2, topped; Russ Frizer out on all 4; Charlie Gibson out 317-2, 291, 302-3; Dan Haddarson out on 312-4; Jim Lynch 293, 279, 293-2, topped; Dale McNeal out, 255, 286, 284; Chris Woody out, out, 263, 273; Jerry Preuss 289, 293, out (316 yards, 6 inches out), out; Dave Sheff 293-2, 278, 36, out; Frank Snow out, out, out, 303-2; Jeff Van Wagenen 308, 297, 299, 294; Tom Winrow 301, out (312), 293, 319-2; Jim Wright out, 293, 291, out.

49 cars primed for Grand Prix

By ALLEN WOLFE
Staff Writer

At one time or another, everyone has played the parlor game "musical chairs."

However, drivers and teams entered in the Long Beach Grand Prix Formula 500 race have adopted their own version of the game. It's called "musical cars."

In the nine days since race director Phil Hill announced an entry field of 47 cars, there have been four withdrawals and six additions, pushing the official count to 49 cars for the $102,000 event through the downtown streets of Long Beach, a week from today.

Among the six new entries—all of whom had to pay a post-entry deadline fee of $400 — are two veteran Formula 5,000 drivers who could figure prominently in the outcome of the race.

Brett Linger, a winner of three Formula 5,000 races and a regular campaigner on the Rothmann's Formula 5,000 circuit in Europe, will drive a Lola T-332 Chevrolet sponsored by Chris Oates of Nottingham, England. The 29-year-old Linger is the son of Lady Jane Dupont of the Wilmington, Del., industrial family.

The other prominent late entry is John Cannon, a former officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force and the 1970 Continental Grand Prix champion, forerunner of the Formula 5,000 series. The 39-year-old driver from Battle, Sussex, England, will drive a March 73-A.

Other late entries have been received from Steve Durst of Cherry Hill, N.J., driving a Talon MR-1; Michael Brockman of Orlando, Fla., driving an Eagle; Eddie O'Brien of San Diego, driving a Lola T-400; and Harry Bokker of San Diego, driving a Lola T-192.

Drivers withdrawing from the race were Gary Mathews of Fresno, Tom Jones of Cleveland and Dan Gardner of Vacaville.

There have also been two major changes in driver assignments. James Hunt, this year's Dutch Grand Prix champion, originally scheduled to drive a Lola T-332 for Theodore Racing of Hong Kong, has been replaced by Britisher Tony Brise.

Three months ago, Brise was elevated to the No. 1 position on the Embassy Lola Formula 1 team when two-time world driving champion Graham Hill retired. Hill, coincidentally, will be a co-Grand Marshal of the Long Beach Grand Prix along with Bobby Unser.

The other driver change involves the two-car UOP Shadow team. Formula 1 driver Tom Pryce of Wales takes over the second team car originally assigned to Jean-Pierre Jarier of France. Pryce, a Grand Prix rookie this season, won the non-championship Race of Champions at Brands Hatch, England, this spring and then captured the pole position for the British Grand Prix at Silverstone.

Thirty-one of the 49 cars entered carry the marquee of Eric Broadley and Lola Cars Ltd. of England, the leading manufacturer of Formula 5,000 cars. Chassis design of the remaining 18 entries: five Eagles, five Talons, two UOP Shadows, two Marchs, two Chevrolets, one Berta Argentina and one Lance Smith LSR-1.

Construction and modification of the course, including related safety barriers and debris fencing, is expected to be completed late Wednesday. The following day Jean-Pierre Beltoise, Denny Hulme, Dan Gurney, Dr. Giuseppe Baccagallupi and Teddy Mayer, representing the safety and circuits committee of the Commission Sportive Internationale, competition wing of the FIA, will conduct their final inspection tour of the facility. They are expected to give their approval for the United States Grand Prix West March 28.

Pre-race activity begins Thursday when all drivers, crew chiefs and mechanics gather in the shipside parking lot next to the Queen Mary for technical inspection of cars from 10:30 to 4:30. Driver registration will take place at the same time on the promenade deck of the Queen Mary.

Friday morning, there will be a mandatory drivers meeting, at which chief steward Tom Binford will address the participants in a no-holds-barred session. The context of his speech is not known, but it's a good bet he will caution the drivers about the unusual aspects of the city circuit and to "take it easy" while learning to drive the course.

Friday the course will be available for practice for the first time. Two sessions will be held—from 10 to 11:40 a.m. and again from 1:30 to 3:10. Qualifying time trials Saturday start at 1 p.m. and are not expected to end until 6. Lap times Saturday will be used to determine the starting order for two 12-lap, 26-mile qualifying heat races Sunday at 1 and 1:45 p.m. The Long Beach Grand Prix Formula 5,000 race, a 50-lap, 110-mile dash, will start Sunday at 3:45. Twenty-eight cars will start the final.

New Shadow Run development opening today

Warmington Development is opening a new unit of 55 single-family homes today in the popular Shadow Run series in La Palma/Cerritos. The spacious Shadow Run homes offer from 1,497 to 2,264 square feet of living area at prices ranging from $54,490 to $64,490.

Quality construction of the new residences includes a full complement of luxury features, the builder said.

Shadow Run's choice residential location is within easy commuting distance of Los Angeles and Orange County employment and metropolitan centers and within walking distance of schools at every grade level.

The development is minutes from a variety of recreation, entertainment and shopping, including the new Los Cerritos Mall, and offers easy access to Freeway 91.

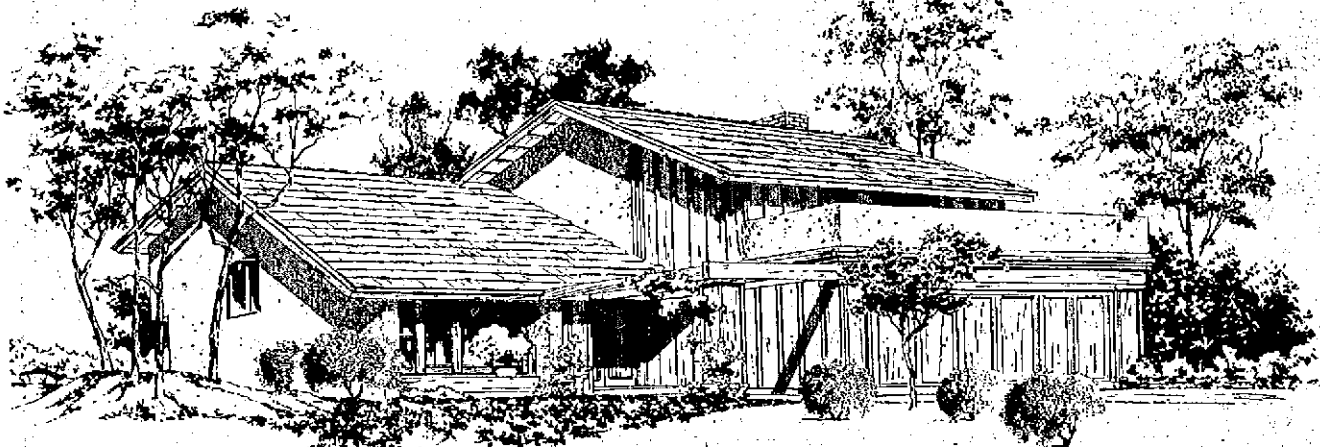

The current phase of Shadow Run is now in the close-out stage and only 10 homes remain to be sold. A choice of one and two-story plans with three or four bedrooms and two or 2½ baths is available in 12 different exterior stylings. Many of the residences qualify for the 5 per cent federal income tax credit.

The functional, family-oriented floor plans follow the builder's concept "Three-Homes-In-One" except which features distinct family, formal and private sectors.

Various plans have huge bonus rooms, wet bars, extra-large pantry areas and walk-in closets. All have large kitchen/family room areas, formal living and dining rooms and secluded bedroom/bath areas.

There are dramatic open staircases, vaulted ceiling, massive fireplace and an abundance of glass. Deluxe Shadow Run kitchens are fully built-in and have ceramic tile counter tops. Double enclosed garages, block-fenced yards and wall-to-wall shag carpeting are more price-included luxury features.

Decorator furnished model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. at the sales complex at 7012 Somerset Circle in La Palma. The development may be reached by taking Freeway 91 to the Carmentia off-ramp, then south on Carmentia to Orangethorpe (South Street) and left one block to Shadow Run in La Palma.

Queen's Surf: sand, sea, view

Nearing completion, ready for occupancy, the finishing touches on the 17-story, 195-unit beachfront, ocean-view Queen's Surf condominiums are under way with the king-sized swimming pool, Jacuzzi, sauna and clubhouse-recreation room, complete with billiard tables, exercise room, card tables and other facilities.

The shrinking earth has drummed home to its subjects the fact that there is only so much clean, white, sandy beach in the world, of which such metropolitan areas as Los Angeles, Long Beach and environs have limited supply per capita in ratio to their population. It becomes increasingly clear that when the last remaining beachfront property is snapped up, it spells ruin to all those with aspirations of one day living in such close proximity to the surf and ocean.

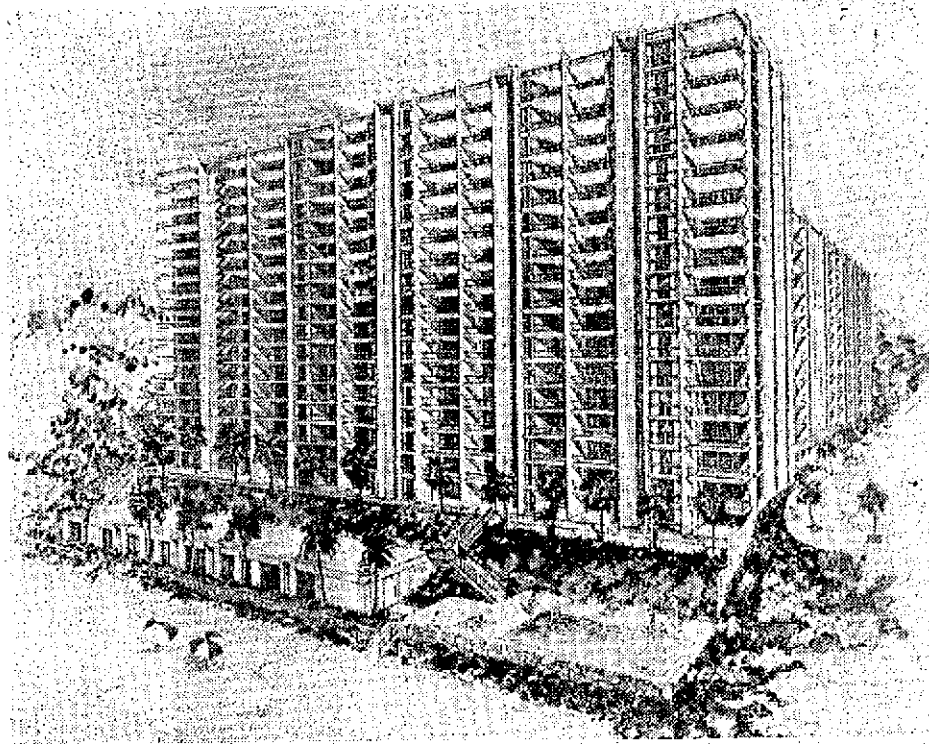

Present populous with a medium of vision have an opportunity at Queen's Surf to spend their days lolling or jogging on the beach directly in front of their own condominium without having to travel miles and miles, bumper-to-bumper, to the elbow-to-elbow on the beach, weekends and holidays.

The 17-story Queen's Surf, referred to as the highest cement block structure in the world, sold more than one-third of its condominiums within the first month after opening the sales office and furnished models.

THERE ARE PRESENTLY offered, one and two-bedroom condominiums virtually all with sweeping Pacific Ocean beach views overlooking the Queen Mary, the harbor and city lights with prices ranging between $39,750 and $85,950, 1750 E. Ocean Blvd., Long Beach.

The condos come complete with central air conditioning, dishwasher, stove, garbage disposal and carpeting. Some units have their own washer and dryer facilities and each floor has its own laundry room and trash shoot. The Queen's Surf is in reality three separate buildings, each independent of the other with a small "breathing" space between, which makes the Queen's Surf earthquake proof. One building as seven levels of security parking by card key only.

The diminishing availability of seashore property makes any beach-front residence an investment with unlimited growth potential, says owner Bill Evans, who also owns the Bahia and Catamaran hotels in Mission Bay.

FINISHING TOUCHES BEING PUT ON QUEEN'S SURF CONDOMINIUMS

La Mirada Landmark $3,000 saving for homebuyers

FOUR FLOOR PLANS are offered at La Mirada Landmark, with prices ranging from $35,950 to $47,950.

Included are central air conditioning, shag carpeting, individual utility rooms within each unit with an installed washer-dryer, deluxe-equipped kitchens, and pantries, walk-in closets are available in two of the four plans. The complete privacy and security of all residents is assured by a wall which surrounds the community and the 24-hour-a-day security guard at the entrance to the project.

The concept of leisure living is provided with exterior maintenance, landscaping and care of the extensive greenbelt areas and recreational facilities performed for residents by a professional firm.

The entry is off Santa Gertrudes Street, between Imperial Highway and Roscerans Avenue. It may be conveniently reached from the Santa Ana Freeway by taking the Imperial Highway exit east to Santa Gertrudes and turning south.

La Mirada Landmark is a project of Glenwood Properties, Inc., which is owned by Signal Landmark Properties Inc. and Chevron Land Co. Project designer is R.J. Marvick & Associates.

The sales office and model complex are open daily from 10 a.m. For information phone (714) 521-2440 or (213) 947-2505.

Purchasers at La Mirada Landmark can realize savings of more than $3,000, according to sales director Frank Randak.

This is possible, he said, because of the $1,000 customizing allowance now in effect, plus the $2,000 (5 per cent) tax credit still effective to homebuyers until Dec. 31.

"Therefore," Randak added, "in addition to buying a quality home in a preferred, close-in location, substantial savings are possible at the La Mirada site." He also reminded visitors that interest rates still as low as 8½ per cent, mean additional savings are realized when you compare them with other area home rates.

"Now," he continued, "is the perfect time to purchase at La Mirada Landmark, where a tremendous selection of units within the community is still available."

The $1,000 allowance offered may be used to upgrade carpeting, add draperies, wardrobe mirrors, or may be applied toward the closing cost requirement. Complete details on this special program are available at the sales center.

In addition to a close-in, energy-saving location, visitors are attracted to the all-adult community because of its fantastic recreation facilities, Randak added.

THE $1.5-MILLION recreation complex includes a beautiful clubhouse with kitchen, lounge, game rooms, and huge billiard room. A separate building features a wood shop, ceramic and art room, lapidary, sewing room, photo lab and multi-purpose gym.

Outdoor attractions include two regulation-size tennis courts, a paddle tennis court, putting green, large swimming pool, hotwater whirlpool bath, gas barbecues, gas fire ring, gazebo and spacious main patio.

The recreation center is just one of the many attractions of the La Mirada Landmark community, which is directly across the street from the La Mirada Park and Golf Course.

Randak explained the all-adult nature of the community. "All residents must be at least 40 years of age, except that one spouse of a married couple may be under 40 if the other is over 40."

Details of the age requirements are contained in the Declaration of Covenants, Conditions and Restrictions for the community, available at the sales center.

Major shopping complexes such as Whittwood, the new La Mirada Mall, and Fashion Square, health and medical centers, churches of all denominations, and numerous other employment and recreational opportunities are all within a few minutes' drive.

This convenience helps La Mirada Landmark residents save gas by reducing travel time. The City of La Mirada also provides a unique energy saving service now being studied by other cities around the country. This is the Dial-a-Ride minibus service which picks riders up at their doors and takes them anywhere in the city.

LANDMARK OFFERS SAVINGS, CONVENIENCE AND RECREATION

Early sellout predicted at Stonegate Townhomes

"Almost 80 per cent sold in only eight months."

This announcement was made jointly by Robert H. Glick, president of the Robert H. Glick Construction Co. of Los Angeles, the builders of Stonegate Townhomes, and John Suttle, president of Trendsetter Sales, the exclusive sales representatives of this fast-moving condominium community.

Both predicted an early sellout of the remaining units... all in top locations within the complex. They're attributed their sales forecasts on the homebuyer oriented desirability of the Stonegate Townhome community and its many amenities in addition to the finely designed floorplans and the quality of the units being offered.

Cited by new residents as reasons for selecting Stonegate as their new home were rapid access to three major freeways, convenience of location near major shopping centers, schools, churches, beaches and popular Southland entertainment and dining spots.

The exterior features that appealed greatly to the recent buyers were those that closely correlated with Stonegate's recreation theme... facilities that create a resort atmosphere for the stay-at-home owner such as a heated pool, tennis courts, jacuzzi, sauna and a large luxurious clubhouse.

Designed by Reed and Reed of Los Angeles, these distinctive townhomes offer five uniquely different floor plans to potential homeowners in both single-story and two-floor units.

An air conditioned two-story, two-bedroom and two-bath model with a family room or den is ideal for young marrieds as well as active retired couples. It also features a patio that provides a private retreat at the times you want to party or enjoy quiet seclusion.

All Models are open for viewing daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Special appointments for previewing these homes may be made by calling Trendsetter Sales at (714) 892-3488.

Ranging in price from $39,995 and qualifying for the new tax credit, Stonegate's Townhomes, recipients of the Concern Award, are at 12155 Stonegate Lane, one-half block west of the intersection of Valley View Street and Chapman Avenue in Garden Grove.

In Huntington Beach Beachwalk provides variety of activities

The luxury townhomes of Beachwalk in Huntington Beach are now available in the choice center section of the A.J. Hall Corp. community. The beautiful, quiet neighborhood is in the newly-opened second phase of Unit 5 at Beachwalk.

The ocean-close residential community is in the exclusive Huntington Seacrest area of Huntington Beach, just 1,500 yards from the beach and across from the 18-hole golf course of Huntington Seacrest Country Club and a $300,000 private tennis club.

Next door to Beachwalk are 12 night-lighted tennis courts and a marina, parks and other recreation surround the development. Shopping, schools, community services and major freeways are all convenient to the homes.

A wide variety of resident activities are available within the Beachwalk community itself. The extensive, landscaped greenbelt areas include a junior-size Olympic swimming pool, cabana building with saunas, outdoor therapy pool, volleyball court and two clubhouses.

When complete, the Beachwalk community will have seven swimming pools. All of the facilities, grounds and exteriors of the townhomes are professionally maintained by the homeowners association, giving residents more leisure time to enjoy the amenities.

Beachwalk offers a choice of five distinctive floor plans priced from $52,000 to $70,000. One and two-story designs feature two, three or four bedrooms.

The spacious townhomes feature dramatic living rooms with vaulted ceilings and fireplaces with ceramic tile hearths, large family rooms and optional wet bars.

Furnished model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. at Beachwalk with representatives of Donald Dird Realty, exclusive sales agent, on the premises. A select number of the townhomes qualify for the $2,000 tax credit, the sales agent noted.

Beachwalk may be reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to Golden West Street, then drive south on Golden West three miles to Beachwalk in Huntington Beach.

HERITAGE VILLAGE FEATURES SPACIOUS ROOMS LUMINOUS CEILINGS

Heritage Village Townhomes freeway-close

The Heritage Village Townhome community of one and two-story, two and three-bedroom homes on Stewart and Gray Road in Downey provide current homeowners and those still to move in, with quick freeway access to the employment centers of Los Angeles, Long Beach and Lakewood, because the Long Beach Freeway is only about a five-minute drive from the new homes. Almost 60 per cent of the available land in the new community is devoted to landscaped greenbelt areas, recreational facilities, streets and lighted walkways for residents. It adjoins Los Amigos Golf Club on the north and is in a neighborhood of $100,000 homes. The full price — starting from $88,950 — includes such value-increasing amenities as central air conditioning and heating with thermostatic control, fireplace, carpeting in all major areas including all bedrooms, attached two car garages, vaulted ceilings in some plans, kitchens with all built-ins, double sinks, luminous ceilings, pantry and icemaker stubout, master suites with private bath and dressing area, rear yard patios with concrete slab and leisure time facilities that include a community clubhouse, heated pool, jacuzzi and pulling green.

The builder/developer, D & H Construction Co., Inc., of Downey, has two similar projects in La Habra and Anaheim.

FEATURES and floor plans at the other Heritage Village Townhome communities are different than those found in Downey; the features varying but slightly.

The newest Heritage Village in La Habra is located on Beach Boulevard, about one mile north of Imperial Highway. The six floor plans offered are priced from $38,450. Exit the Santa Ana or Artesia freeways at Beach Boulevard and turn north to the project.

Heritage Village in Anaheim is on Nutwood Street, two blocks north of Katella Avenue, between Euclid and Brookhurst streets. Katella is Disneyland's southern entrance. The townhomes, in an excellent residential neighborhood and in the Loara School District, are priced from $34,950.

Model homes are open daily from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. at all three Heritage Village communities.

MAME sales competition entries being accepted

Sales and Marketing Council of the Building Industry Association is now accepting entries for its annual MAME competition for major achievements in merchandising excellence.

MAME presents awards for outstanding achievement in the areas of new residential housing, merchandising and promotion. According to Pete Mayer, founder of the MAME Event, new categories have been added to this year's competition. Included in the categories are best brochure for a community with an average selling price under $50,000; best brochure for a community with an average selling price of $50,000 or above; best single ad, black and white; best single ad, color; best graphics; best sales office display for an area under 600 square feet; best sales office display for an area of 600 square feet or more; best interior design for a community with an average selling price under $50,000; best interior design for a community with an average selling price of $50,000 or above; best total campaign; best landscape design; and the Grand Award.

For information regarding entering the 1975 MAME competition, contact Claudia Roxburgh at the Homebuyer's Office, (714) 675-7330. The MAME awards presentation will be held in conjunction with the Sales and Marketing Council's annual installation dinner and dance, in the Grand Ballroom of the Disneyland Hotel, Nov. 8.

Cameron Park showing

Brisk presales are reported by Beard Development Co. at Cameron Park, a new townhome community on Cameron Drive, just off Beach Boulevard, near the exclusive Bellchurst area of Buena Park.

Preview showings have just begun at the recreation-oriented development of 106 luxury townhomes, next to Smith-Murphy Park with six acres of rolling lawns, play and picnic areas.

A swimming pool and clubhouse are among the recreational amenities available within Cameron Park for residents' exclusive enjoyment. Within blocks of the development is the private 27-hole golf course of Los Coyotes Country Club.

Cameron Park offers a choice of five distinctive townhome plans priced from $36,900 with excellent conventional financing. One and two-story designs feature two, three or four bedrooms with 1½ and two baths.

All of the homes have private patios and oversized double garages with abundant storage. Attractive exteriors of the townhome buildings are extensively detailed with wood and shingle siding and wood shake roofs.

Among the custom-quality interior appointments of the Cameron Park homes are dramatic stairways with wrought-iron railings, cathedral ceilings and fireplaces in some plans.

The Cameron Park sales office is open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 5400 Cameron Drive and the development may be reached by taking the Santa Ana Freeway to Beach Boulevard in Buena Park.

Drive north on Beach Boulevard to Cameron Drive, just beyond Malvern Avenue, and turn east to the new Beard Development Co. community.

At Village San Juan Some home prices cut

Prices for some Country Court Homes at Village San Juan have been reduced to make them eligible for the government's tax credit program, according to Donald G. Zellner, president of Zellner Communities, Inc. of Newport Beach, project developer.

Fifty per cent of the six unit of homes has already been sold. Conventional financing is available with as little as five per cent down, and interest rates as low as 7.75 per cent can be arranged at the popular residential community, according to the developer.

Zellner credits the brisk sales activity to excellent financing, low maintenance, and the attraction of the established Village San Juan recreation-oriented community.

Homebuyers may choose among five Country Court Homes, ranging in size from the two-bedroom plus den, one-bath Plan "302" to the four-bedroom, two-bath Plan "404." Homes are currently priced from $38,500 to $41,900.

Village San Juan first opened to the public in the summer of 1972. Since then, the 120-acre community has grown to include more than 400 families that enjoy the swimming pool areas, exercise on the basketball and volleyball courts and sail on the private 3.5-acre lake, stocked with channel catfish and bluegill.

COUNTRY COURT HOMES in the sixth phase are near the third swimming complex at Village San Juan and adjacent to park land. Common areas throughout the community are maintained by the Homeowners' Association.

Country Court Homes follow an innovative design concept: two separately owned, attached homes share one common, double-construction wall. This design creates one large usable courtyard along one side of the home that is ideal for outdoor entertaining or just relaxing.

Country Court Homes include a number of features in the base price, including carpeting in most rooms, Deluxe General Electric range and oven, enclosed garage with automatic garage door opener, concrete driveways, fencing, cedar shingle roof, vaulted ceilings in some plans, underground utilities, decorator selected vinyl asbestos tile in kitchen, family room, baths and secondary bedrooms.

The sixth unit of homes is ready for occupancy.

Both the living room and the dining room have vaulted ceilings and access to the Country Courtyard in Zellner's Plan "302." Also included is a den, which easily converts to a bedroom or gameroom, two bedrooms with walk-in closets and a full bath.

The three-bedroom Plan "303" has the added convenience of a family room for entertaining. The living room has a sloped ceiling and sliding glass door access to the courtyard.

Plan "304" adds a second level to please the large, on-the-go family. The master suite, including its own private bath, is situated on the lower level for privacy. Three other bedrooms and another bath are located upstairs. A living room and formal dining room, plus a family room with a soaring cathedral ceiling add sophistication to this popular plan.

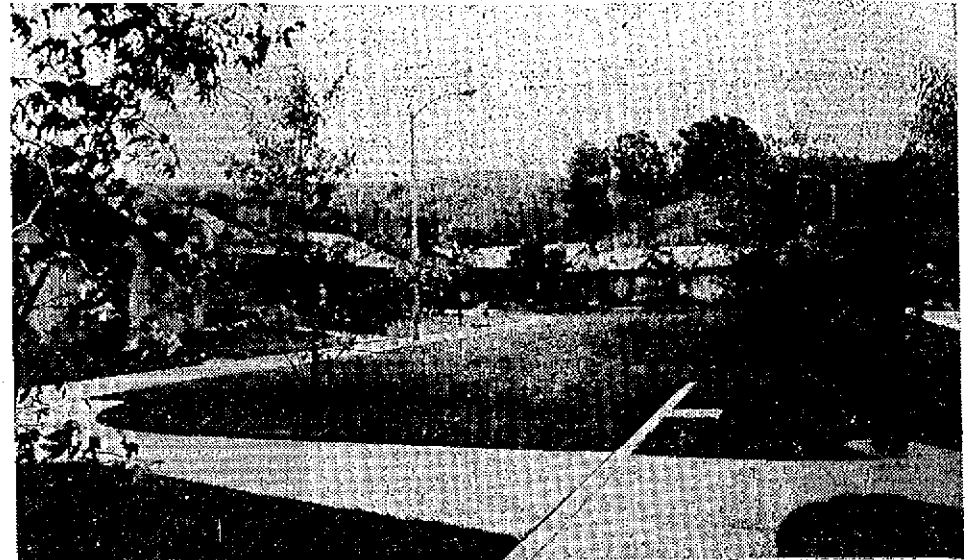

THE ENTRY in the three-bedroom Plan "403" opens to a formal living room that is set off from the activity areas of the house. The large family room has sliding glass doors that open onto the Country Courtyard. The master suite has its own full bath and dressing area, while the auxiliary bedrooms share the second bath.

Plan "404," the largest single-story Country Court Home offered, includes four bedrooms and two baths within its floorplan. A sloped ceiling, available in some elevations, sets the living room apart from the rest of the house. The large family room has a sliding glass door entrance to the courtyard. The master suite has a private bath.

Two other complementary home styles are also available at Village San Juan: Village Townhomes, available from $35,990, and Patio Homes, priced from $39,990.

Furnished models of Country Court Homes, designed by Saddleback Interiors of Irvine, are open daily from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.

To reach the community, take the San Diego Freeway to the Junipero Serra Road exit in San Juan Capistrano, drive east, then turn left into the Village San Juan entrance.

COUNTRY COURT PRICES REDUCED TO MAKE THEM ELIGIBLE FOR TAX CREDIT

Crestview prices reduced

Prices of the remaining Crestview Estates Townhomes at Canyon Crest Drive and Central Avenue in Riverside, have been reduced for rapid sellout, announced Steve Albers, project coordinator of Founders Mortgage Co., Inc., owners.

"We're anxious to get Crestview 100 per cent sold out so we can proceed with plans on future phases in the Canyon Crest area of Riverside," Albers said.

The two and three-bedroom, two and three-bath homes, located in the Canyon Crest Country Club area, are priced starting at $27,900.

Living area encompasses from 1,180 to 1,780 square feet in one and two-story models. All of the four available floorplans offer courtyards, patios, sun decks and/or balconies. Every room, except the baths in one of the three-bedroom models, faces onto one of two private courtyards. Another model is entered either through a main gate or from the two-car garage, into a private courtyard which is overlooked by all three bedrooms and the formal dining area. The spacious family eating area and living room open onto yet another courtyard.

Other features of Crestview's remaining units are cathedral ceilings, wood-burning fireplaces with gas log-lighters, Nylon carpeting, safety glass in all sliding glass doors, luminous ceilings in kitchens and baths, custom plumbing fixtures and break-proof shower doors.

Kitchens feature range and oven with continuous-cleaning feature, deluxe dishwashers, disposals, color-coordinated formica counter tops, custom hardwood cabinets and handy pantries.

To take advantage of the new low prices at Crestview Estates, visit the four professionally furnished models, open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk. Exit the Riverside Freeway at Arlington Avenue, turn right on Country Club Drive and left on Canyon Crest Drive to the development.

Realtors add two convention speakers

Two additional speakers have been named for the 71st annual convention of the California Association of Realtors to be held Oct. 1-4 at the Disneyland Hotel in Anaheim, according to Robert Hostetter of Anaheim, convention chairman.

They are California State Sen. Alfred H. Song of Monterey Park, who represents the 26th Senatorial District, and Dr. Anthony Downs of Chicago, chairman of the Real Estate Research Corp.

Song will address a 12:15 p.m. legislative luncheon meeting on Oct. 1.

Downs, returning for his sixth year as a CAR speaker, will talk on "The 1975-1976 Real Estate Outlook" at 9:15 a.m. Oct. 4, during the general session.

Other convention speakers will include U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston, Mrs. Helen I. Hirt of Indianapolis, president of the Women's Council of the National Association of Realtors, and Ron Bentz of Stayton, Oregon, president of the Oregon Association of Realtors.

Mesa firm designer of project

Developing an affordable 160-unit apartment project was the key to success for Wakefield II in Atlanta, Ga., designed by Richardson Nagy Martin, the Costa Mesa architectural and planning firm.

"The prime consideration was to create for the developer, the Brand Development Corp. of Atlanta, affordable housing during a period of skyrocketing building costs," states Huba Nagy, principal in charge of design for Richardson Nagy Martin. "Costs had to be limited so rents would not be exorbitant."

"The basic solution was to build the complex in four- and eight-unit composites," said Nagy. "Material costs were economized by using brick, plywood, and asphalt shingle exterior surfaces."

LIGHTING CAN MAKE ALL THE DIFFERENCE

Lighting is important factor in home design

By EMILY MALINO

Proper lighting is one of our biggest problems in design. An important reason for this is that the typical house or apartment builder just closes his eyes when lighting is mentioned.

Of course he lights the kitchen and the bath-rooms, often in the least expensive and consequently least effective way, to be sure.

But when it comes to general room lighting, he simply installs baseboard receptacles at the intervals required by the local building code and calls it a day.

OCCASIONALLY, as a sop to his conscience, he installs a ceiling outlet in the center of the dining area.

Another big reason, let's face it, is that most folks are simply ignorant about the range and potential of lighting fixtures. They don't realize that light is the source of all color, that variables in lighting can be decorative in themselves and that most lighting is portable enough to suit even the skimpiest arrangement of baseboard receptacles.

There are so many excellent and versatile lighting fixtures and lamps available today, from crystal imported from Italy or Czechoslovakia or Scandinavia to the fabulous and versatile track-lighting we are manufacturing here in the U.S., from lamps that are constructed of fragile Japanese lanterns to swivel spots that stand on the floor and plug in when you need them.

TAKE AN AVERAGE room I worked on recently. It was a family room, pleasantly rusticated, with beams and a wood floor, wicker and wood furniture and lots of plants and flowers and art. Its problem was common to all rooms: there was no general source of illumination.

With the beams running handily across the length of the ceiling dimension, I used a simple device: I bought a thick bamboo rod, about eight feet long, a hank of heavy ship's rope, two elegant Japanese lanterns and the necessary white vinylized wire, wire switches and plugs to accommodate the whole plan.

I wrapped the rope around the rod in two places with a loop and then used the same rope to hang the rod from the beams.

(If you don't have beams, cheer up. You can always hang the rod directly from the ceiling.)

THE LANTERNS are hung from their own wire, which is looped over the rod in the same way and then over to the nearest intersection of wall and ceiling, then dropping to a baseboard receptacle.

The nicest part of this arrangement is that while it provides gentle, overall illumination for the table and chairs, the lights could easily be shifted, raised or lowered by re-doing the loops, or just moving the entire rod.

More light where you want it is provided by a floor lamp for happy reading or sewing, instantly portable and very handsome.

ILLUMINATION for a beautiful, highly textured rug hung from the wall, on the same kind of bamboo rod comes from a portable wall-washer. This is a cylinder, white like the walls, and unobtrusive, which accommodates a floodlight, is plugged into the nearby baseboard and adds zip and texture to the rug, creating a focal color point for this family room where portable lighting makes all the necessary difference between day and night.

29 condos remaining at La Costa project

The luxury condominiums of Orleans East at Rancho La Costa are now being offered at price reductions totalling $195,000 for the 29 remaining homes, announces the builder, Sullivan Enterprises.

The new low prices represent savings of as much as $7,000 on some of the homes and all of the condominiums qualify for the 5 per cent tax credit of up to $2,000.

Prices of the resort homes begin at $39,950 with conventional financing at 7 3/4 per cent interest (8 1/4 per cent annual percentage rate) available. All of the condominiums are ready for immediate occupancy.

This group of Orleans East residences includes a selection of seven distinctive floor plans with up to 1,750 square feet of living area and one or two bedrooms.

The builders have re-created the atmosphere and architecture of New Orleans throughout the project and the homes feature such elegant appointments as wrought-iron balconies, roofs of tile, casement windows and sunken living rooms and baths.

Vaulted and 10-foot-high ceilings add to the feelings of spaciousness in various multilevel floor plans. Standard features include wet bars, two balconies, and kitchens with deluxe appliances and marble counter tops.

The lavish sunken baths feature double-width, cast iron enamel tubs and pullmans of marble. Double, sound-deadening division walls between units add to the privacy and comfort of the condominium homes.

Lush landscaping, a swimming pool and lighted terraces are featured in the development's large, center outdoor area. Unusual brickwork of the walks and interior courtyards sets off the beauty of the unique residential project.

IN ADDITION to the courtyard area there is a large recreation room with television area, sauna, exercise room and wet bar for residents' enjoyment.

The development has been designed for the carefree, resort lifestyle with maintenance of the grounds, facilities and exteriors provided through the condominium owners association for a nominal monthly fee.

A number of the Orleans East units face the fairways of the 27-hole La Costa Golf Course. Memberships in the La Costa Country Club are available to buyers who wish to join this club offering 25 tennis courts, swimming pools, a world-famous spa, equestrian center and luxurious clubhouse.

The Orleans East sales office is open daily from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 2630 Pirineos Way in Rancho La Costa or by appointment with resident broker Norma Schwab. The homes may be reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to La Costa Avenue, then east to Vieja Castilla, left to Pirineos Way and right to Orleans East.

Taste treat at Chateau

A "Cheeses of the World" and "Vintage Wine" tasting party is planned today from noon until 6 p.m. at The Chateau in Seal Beach. Everyone is invited to attend this affair at the furnished models at 12400 Montecito Road, adjacent to the Rossmoor Business and Shopping Plaza.

According to sales counselors at the Chateau in the condominium community it is now more than half sold out.

"Interest rates, as low as 8½ per cent, our excellent location, a 10-per-cent-down plan, this rebate program, and quality product are the reasons cited by most viewers as their reasons for buying," counselors said.

The development is less than five minutes from the Old Ranch Golf and Tennis Club. Houses of worship, health care facilities, major shopping, and expanding employment complexes are reportedly within minutes of the project. The San Diego, (Garden Grove) Freeway is less than one mile to the south of the Chateau.

PRICES RANGE from $46,950 to $59,950 and viewers are reminded that the $46,950 price purchases a spacious, full-size two-bedroom, two-bath luxury unit. A "guaranteed sale program" has helped area homeowners sell their homes and thereby allow them to purchase in the Chateau.

Recreational amenities include a heated swimming pool, sauna, and therapeutic whirlpool bath, a fully-equipped gymnasium and outdoor barbecues.

A security system of lobby television scanners has attracted particular attention to the unique security building features at the Chateau.

The condominium concept of carefree, leisure living is made possible through the homeowners association, whereby exterior maintenance landscaping, and care of the recreational facilities is performed for residents by a professional firm. No permanent residents under 16 years of age may reside at the Chateau.

INTERIOR APPOINTMENTS include a selection of nylon carpeting, central air conditioning, and luminous kitchen ceilings. Kitchens are all-electric and feature range, oven, disposal, dishwasher, cast iron terraced sinks and copper plumbing.

Common balconies and courtyard areas are elegantly carpeted with "astro turf" type carpeting. Garden-view patios, or view balconies are offered. Fireplaces are included in all plans as are convenient kitchen pantries. Four of the plans feature roomy walk-in closets in the master bedroom. A complete, installed combination washer-dryer is included within each unit. Two conveniently located elevators serve the building, as does a separate laundry room area.

A $2,000 rebate/allowance program is also in effect at the homesite.

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF SEGOVIA VILLAGE IN LEISURE WORLD

At Leisure World, Laguna Hills

Planned village opens

Rossmoor Leisure World, Laguna Hills, has opened Segovia Village, according to the adult community development's Vice President-Marketing Elmo Weingarten.

The opening of Segovia Village represents the first time that Rossmoor Leisure World has presented a totally planned village, offering magnificent views, new architecture and a choice of one, two and three-story buildings, with villas priced from $40,900 to $74,900.

There are three models of the single-story residences, including five two-bedroom, two-bath Villa Fuentes, eight two-bedroom, two-bath Casa Rosas and 11 three-bedroom, two-bath Cabrillos. All are fully carpeted, and feature General Electric dishwashers, disposers, refrigerators and double-oven ranges.

Segovia Village also includes seven two-story buildings called LaQuintas, with a total of 42 units, all two-bedroom and two-bath. The end units all feature full fireplaces. Access to the upper level of the LaQuintas is by graded ramps, eliminating the necessity for any stairways. Individual street-level closed-door garages are included with these models. An enclosed, fully-landscaped courtyard is situated in front of each LaQuinta.

The Casa Dorado section of Segovia Village includes 48 villas in two separate buildings. Each building contains three floors with eight residences per floor. Each building also includes an elevator.

The Casa Dorados feature underground parking facilities, a furnished all-purpose recreation room with a luxurious kitchen facility and spacious entry lobbies. An open-sky atrium runs the full length of the Casa Dorados.

'EACH DWELLING has an individual patio, is fully carpeted, and features a dishwasher, disposer, refrigerator and double-oven range.

All models in the new Segovia Village feature condominium ownership.

Weingarten also pointed out that the residents of Segovia Village will join the other 18,000 52-years-and-up Leisure World dwellers in utilization of five major clubhouses, 27 holes of golf, a riding stable, tennis courts, more than 160 clubs and associations and many more amenities.

"Segovia Village," Weingarten says, "typifies the concept pioneered by Ross Cortese and Leisure World 16 years ago — that adult living is not 'retirement living,' but a varied lifestyle for active, involved people who wish to broaden their horizons and explore the universe of activities and experiences available to them."

Leisure World Laguna Hills, is at the El Toro Road off-ramp of the San Diego Freeway, approximately 65 minutes south of Los Angeles.

Retirement at its Best.

If you want to be independent, yet are concerned about daily chores that must be done if you live alone, the rising cost of medical care and the effect of inflation on your retirement income, this may be the time to make a decision about Casa Dorinda.

Casa Dorinda is a delightful, new community for those 62 or older, offering the services and the security you look for in your retirement years. Built on one of the great private estates in California, 48 acres in beautiful Montecito, it centers about the 85-room Bliss mansion, restored so its grand salons can be enjoyed by all residents.

It offers luxury housing in private apartments or cottages, three meals a day served in a resort-style dining room and a far reaching medical program — only possible in a continuing-care retirement community with its own Skilled Nursing Facility — which covers (with minor exceptions) all physicians' surgeons' and hospitalization costs and all nursing, convalescent and rehabilitation care. A 47-bed medical center is on the premises.

Housekeeping services, utilities, local phone service, transportation and a full program of activities are all included.

In all, only 250 apartments and cottages surround the Main House and a dozen magnificent apartments are on the second and third floors of the Mansion. The rest of the grounds is preserved in gardens, meadows and wooded glens.

At Casa Dorinda, you do not buy real estate — you pre-pay services through an Entry Fee based on your age and the size of the apartment you choose and Monthly Fees based on operational costs at the time. These pay for the entire cost of the program — for life. The rest of your estate is not affected.

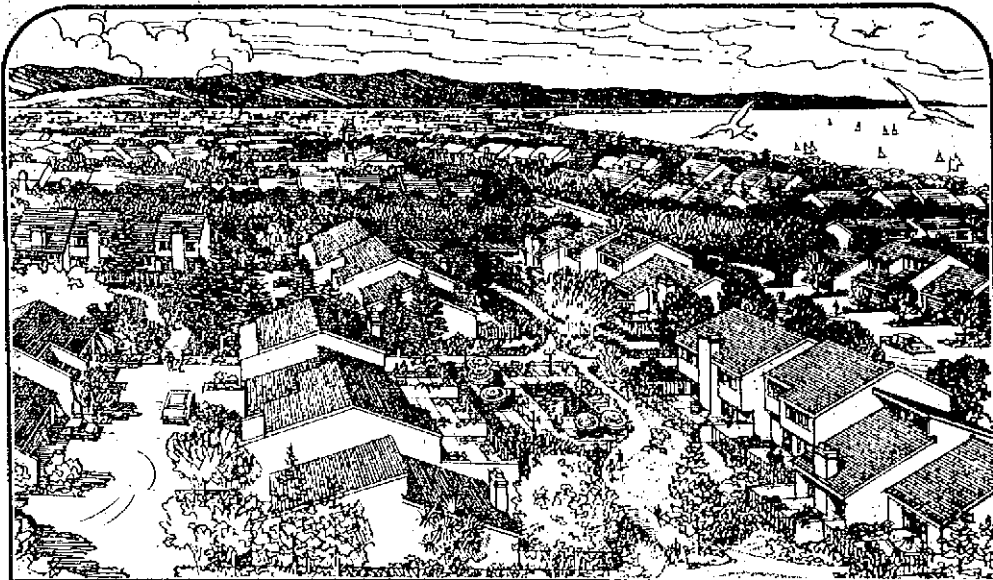

The plan is so soundly conceived that even if a resident were to lose his or her source of income through economic disaster, he would still live at Casa Dorinda with all the benefits.

How is that possible? Casa Dorinda is licensed by the State of California Department of Health, operated by the nonprofit Montecito Retirement Association, and managed by National Retirement Residence. Its state approved financial plan calls for substantial reserves, created from the Entry Fees, to protect each resident. You'll be glad to know that Casa Dorinda is the fifth such California community created within a decade by Retirement Residence, Inc., who, with Stolte Inc., developed the project.

COSTS: A typical Entry Fee for a single person, age 75, is $24,500 for a Studio Apartment, or $40,500 for a one-bedroom unit with Monthly Fees from $405 to $520. There is a reduced rate for couples. Fees cover the entire program.

TO LEARN MORE: The Information Center is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call (805) 969-3251 to arrange a tour of the community, or write us for a packet of descriptive material. To reach Casa Dorinda, take 101 to the Olive Mill Road exit just south of Santa Barbara and drive east to the intersection of Hot Springs Road.

What's your question?

'Condo resort' fine for some

By DON G. CAMPBELL

A nice cabin in the mountains ... a luxury apartment on a sun-drenched beach ... a beautifully appointed apartment flanking its own tennis court/golf course complex?

Sounds great, doesn't it? But for week after week after week — on and on for years?

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

We are a couple in our 60s and my business pressures have eased up enough so that we can now take more time for play than we could in the past.

The past couple of years we've been spending about a month in Florida because I love to play golf, and we have toyed with the idea of maybe buying a condominium down there.

The thing that stops us, though, is that we don't want to live there all the time. I've still got business interests in the north, and there are other things we like to do.

It's been suggested to me that we might buy a condominium in Florida so that we could stay there about one month a year and rent it out the rest of the time. But one thing bothers me: how could you do this without putting it on a lease arrangement, and if you do that, when could WE use it? Is there any other solution to this that I've overlooked? — W.F.H. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: It's a common problem: one month of golf is a lot of fun. Twelve months of it and you're climbing the wall.

I'd suggest that you look into the "condominium resort" idea. It's been kicking around a few years, but it's only been in the last year or two that it has attracted a whole lot of attention, and there are now quite a few development companies going this way.

The resort condominium works this way: an entire resort is built with the usual pleasures of the flesh included in the deal — golf, tennis, skiing, nightclubs, restaurants, swimming pools, convention facilities and what-have-you. The units will range all the way from single-room apartments to lavish townhouses, and they are sold to the public in the same way that any condominium project is — an established price for the unit itself, and a monthly fee to cover the common facilities.

But when you buy a unit in a resort condominium, you also agree not to occupy it for more than a few weeks out of each year (rarely more than a month).

What kind of nonsense is this? You lay out anywhere from $25,000 to $100,000 for a condominium that you can't use?

Well, that's the gimmick. As an owner you pay the usual membership fee and maintenance costs, but the developing corporation retains actual ownership of the public areas and — in your absence — runs the whole schmear as an outright resort with your unit as a part of the rental pool which it rents out to all comers. You get 49 per cent of the income.

The advantages should be fairly obvious since they hinge primarily on the tax situation created:

1. Interest on the mortgage and real estate and personal property taxes are deductible (as they are in the case of any type of home ownership).

2. You can depreciate the condominium and its furnishings and add this to the maintenance and management fees in proportion to the time that the unit is available for rental.

3. The owners of some resort condominium units also deduct the cost of an annual inspection visit to their investment property as well as related expenses of lodging there (although you'll have to check this out with your tax attorney since it gets into an Internal Revenue Service "gray area.")

The developers of most resort condominiums stop a bit short of promising you a nice income from your rental, of course, because — since they are in resort areas — the business tends to be seasonal and your rental income could, quite conceivably, be counterbalanced by other expenses.

The idea is, however, tailor-made for your situation and it would be well worth investigating.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

In a recent column you had a letter from a gentleman who stated that, relative to security deposits, the law "requires that interest be paid." Will you kindly check to see if the foregoing is true for Delaware? I have had a security deposit of several hundred dollars with my landlord for several years and have never received interest. Nor do I know of anyone else in my apartment building who has received interest. — F.W.R. (Wilmington, Del.)

ANSWER: This trend toward the requirement of interest payments on surety deposits has been creeping along on little cat's feet, state by state, but unfortunately, the list of states that I have where this has become law isn't going to do us much good. It wasn't a complete list to begin with, and the passage of time has made it even more suspect. Delaware isn't on it, but I don't consider that very conclusive.

I suggest that you look in your Yellow Pages under "Associations," and call the Delaware Apartment Association which should be able to bring you up to date.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

About 35 years ago I purchased 1½ acres in a small California town. I have received some offers to sell it, but I feel that the land will be valuable some day so I am holding on. I paid very little for the land and it is now worth much more. What do you know about this area? — Mrs. A. E. (Los Angeles)

ANSWER: What I know about this area you could freeze-dry in an ant's hip pocket. I'm sorry, but I've never heard of it. My gut reaction, though, is that you should go ahead and sell it. No one ever went broke taking a profit, and it seems to me that 35 years is a fair amount of time to devote to such an investment. Let's not be greedy.

(Campbell welcomes your letters and comments, but can answer only representative questions of general interest. Write him in care of this paper.)

Investing series set

Richard S. Gibson, president, Brighton Development Center, Beverly Hills, will present a six-week series this fall through UCLA Extension, Real Estate Investment Opportunities: Risks and Rewards.

The program, open to the public, will provide techniques to analyze the forces which create value in property and to plan capital structuring to maximize secure financial returns.

The series will examine investors' goals, alternate investments, usual types of income properties, legal aspects of income property and types of common ownerships.

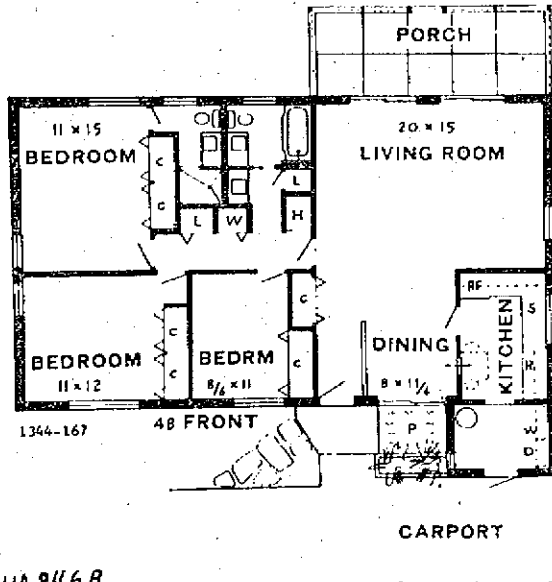

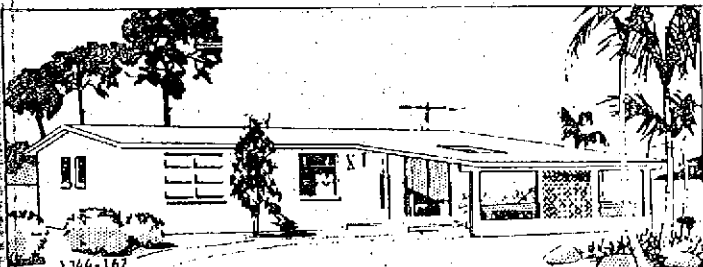

The program will meet Tuesdays, Sept. 30 to Nov. 4, from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in 5200 Math Sciences Building, UCLA. The fee is $60.

Further information is available by calling UCLA Extension.

Dobson no Namath but he's a strong arm of the law

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

Ten years ago, Kevin Dobson tried out for quarterback with the New York Jets pro football team. Also on hand were a couple of much more famous newcomers to the squad, quarterbacks Joe Namath from the University of Alabama and John Huarte from Notre Dame.

Kevin didn't make the team.

"I lasted about a week," the 6-foot, 170-pounder recalled the other day. "I hadn't even been to college, but I played in the Army and I had a pretty good passing arm. I figured I might as well give it a try."

Dobson, now 32, has few if any regrets about his failure to become a professional football player. For he's a member of a very successful team of another kind — the "Kojak" team on television.

The popular CBS police series is in its third season, and Kevin has been with it from the start. He plays Detective Bobby Crocker, one of the guys who takes orders from Lt. Theo Kojak (series star Telly Savalas).

LANDING THE part was the biggest break he has had as an actor. His face is familiar now to millions of viewers in this country — and to TV fans in many nations around the world. Several months ago he went to London to accept a British award given to the series, and he couldn't walk down a street without having "Kojak" buffs come up to talk with him.

He admits it beats the heck out of being pounded to the ground by 300-pound football linemen.

Let Joe Namath worry about knee injuries!

There have been plenty of times in the past 10 years, though, when Kevin could have used some of Namath's money. He says he was flat broke when, in the summer of 1973, he was signed to a seven-year contract with Universal Studios and cast in the role of Crocker.

The night before he was told he'd gotten the part, Kevin's car ran out of gas. "I had 45 cents to my name," he recalled. "A gallon of gas cost 46 cents, but the gas station attendant let me forget the missing penny."

NOW HE FEELS much more secure financially. He and his wife of nine years, Susan, recently bought their own home in Studio City. It's nothing spectacular, but it's a nice middle-class residence.

They invited me over for lunch when I arranged an interview with Kevin. Mrs. Dobson greeted me at the door, invited me in, and said Kevin was in the bedroom with the baby — their only child, Mariah Shannon Dobson, not quite nine months old. Soon the actor joined us in the living room, proudly holding his blonde daughter.

And, visiting the Dobsons that day was one of Kevin's sisters, Mary, whose husband works as a stand-in on "Kojak."

I was introduced, also, to the Dobsons' pet boxer, named — what else? — Crocker.

Kevin and Susan are in the midst of refurbishing their home. When we went into the dining room for lunch, I immediately noticed large handwriting on all four walls. Standing out most conspicuously were the words "Happy Birthday," followed by a man's name.

"We had a party the other night," Kevin explained, "and since we're going to be redoing this room soon we got to writing a story on the walls. It's so unusual, some people think we ought to leave it this way."

DOBSON GREW UP in a large family in the New York metropolitan area — in Jackson Heights, N.Y. — and was an outstanding athlete, loving, in particular, football, baseball and hockey.

"From the time I was 15 I was followed by professional baseball scouts," he said, "and I played a lot of semipro ball as a third baseman and shortstop. I was offered a pro contract with a San Francisco Giants farm team, but I went into the Army instead."

The TV cop was a military policeman in the Army, stationed at bases in the South.

After his stint in the Army, Kevin went to work as a trainman (ticket puncher) on the Long Island Railroad for two and a half years or so. At the same time, prodded by one of his two sisters, Jane, and his bride-to-be, Susan, he started looking for and getting some work on TV commercials in nonspeaking parts. Then one day an agent sent him to audition for a part in a play, "The Impossible Years."

"I'd never had any training in drama and I'd never read for a play in my life," he recalled. "I ended up reading with Tom Ewell and, when we were finished, he gave the director a wink and I got the part. I'll never forget that look."

He had to rush from the audition to

KEVIN DOBSON ... Detective Crocker on 'Kojak'

Penn Station for his job on the commuter train. But soon he quit that job to tour with Ewell in the play through 44 states.

LATER, DOBSON did get some dramatic training, studying at New York's Neighborhood Playhouse under the direction of Sandy Meisner. He worked as a cab driver, waiter and bartender while studying and getting parts in off-Broadway plays.

He landed small parts in six movies done in New York — "Love Story" (as a hockey player), "Klute" (as a pimp), "The French Connection" (as a cop), "Bananas," "Carnal Knowledge" and "The Anderson Tapes."

In 1971, Kevin decided to try his luck in Hollywood. He played the part of a heavy in one episode of "Mod Squad," but acting jobs were scarce.

"I had a great agent," the brown-haired, blue-eyed actor pointed out. "When I couldn't find acting work, he took me around to restaurants to audition as a waiter."

Kevin even went back to railroading, hooking on with the Santa Fe Railway in Los Angeles as an apprentice engineer. Then he gave up the train for a streetcar — he understudied Jon Voight in a Los Angeles production of "A Streetcar Named Desire," but never got to appear on stage.

It's full speed ahead for the young actor now, though. In addition to his "Kojak" duties, he recently completed work in the World War II movie "Midway," whose cast includes Charlton Heston, Henry Fonda, James Coburn, Robert Mitchum and Glenn Ford. Dobson plays as Navy ensign, George Gay, shot down in an air battle over the Pacific and saved by an inflatable "Mae West" life jacket. (Miss West posed for publicity pictures with Kevin recently.)

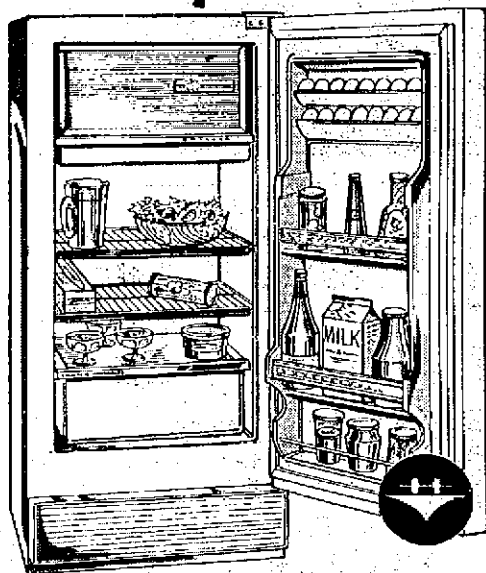

ASKED HOW it is to work with Telly Savalas, Kevin replied: "An education. A real education. If I ever need any help in a scene, I just go to him and get his advice."

The young actor admits he'd like to be the top star of a series someday, but doubts if he'd "want the responsibility" yet.

Meanwhile, he's happy in his work. Acting, he's convinced, beats working on the railroad. Or even playing pro football.

Shaving on TV pays off for teacher

By ED HERING
Ridder News Service
SUNNYVALE, Calif.

How do those average-looking people get on television commercials?

Are they professional actors disguised as average citizens? Or are they really lay persons volunteering to promote their favorite soap, deodorant or razor?

It's a little of both, according to Brian Smith, a 28-year-old Sunnyvale Junior High School teacher.

Smith parlayed his boyish good looks and glib, articulate responses into $3,500 residuals from a razor company.

NO ACTOR, the genial, fun-loving history and drama teacher at Mango Junior High was so good he appeared in four different versions of the same spot.

It was made by a national advertising firm, Bennington and Bowles, for Gillette, promoting the then new Trac II shaver.

Smith's face became such a common fixture on TV screens the first seven months of 1974 that people would frequently look at him as if they knew him from somewhere.

Occasionally, some stranger would stop to ask where he'd seen him, Smith explained, but no one ever connected him with the razor.

Each time one of the new commercials began a 13-week run on prime-time, national network broadcasts, Smith earned $180.

"I MADE about $3,500 altogether. Not bad for about 20 minutes work," he said, with a smile.

The amount of the residual fees varied, he continued, from the $180 for each airing to a minimum of $30 at the end of the three-month run of the commercial.

Smith was the only man — he was picked from among 50 in the San Francisco Bay area — to appear in all four versions.

Although he was never prompted by the Madison Avenue types as to what to say, Smith's savvy of the situation put him at the top of the "class."

FIRST, THERE was the 10-minute interview at the Sunnyvale Motel, where he gave the "right" answers to all the questions about shaving.

Next was the actual filming in a San Francisco house with the sparkling bay as a backdrop through a window.

In between the interview and the shooting the producer did call him to ask if he could appear as a bush pilot.

"A bush pilot?" Smith asked incredulously. "You mean like in Australia?"

"Yes," came the voice over the phone. "We think you'd make a good, rugged outdoor type."

SMITH SAID he might consider it, but later was told instead to appear as himself, the Sunnyvale teacher, in corduroy sport coat and tie.

In front of two cameras, a battery of bright lights and a suave, red-haired interviewer in a business suit, Smith dutifully answered questions about the razor he held.

"I gave replies like, 'I never had a better shave,' and 'It's not only a great shaving system, but it's inexpensive and lasts for months.'"

And he can truthfully look himself in the mirror every morning — he actually still uses the Trac II.

As for the windfall, it couldn't have come at a better time.

"We had just had a child and bought a house and we couldn't have put food on the table without it," he said.

SHEREE NORTH plays Honey, a former showgirl who is married to ex-gambler Eddie Smith (Sheldon Leonard), in the comedy series "Big Eddie," which airs on Ch. 2 at 8 p.m. Fridays.

Video helps singles pick dates

By VICTORIA GRAHAM

NEW YORK (AP) — Singles turned off by the singles scene are turning on to a new video dating service that first lets them see, hear and select their dates via television.

"It's the end of the blind date," proclaims Videomate, New York's only video dating service that provides the latest electronic refinement in the age-old game of boy-meets-girl.

"Now, you can see and hear your date on closed-circuit TV before you date," says a Videomate advertisement. "It's fun! It's riskless! It's new!" the ad says.

INSTEAD of making stilted chatter over costly drinks in a crowded bar, Videomate members pay $60 to tell a camera and microphone about themselves and their romantic ideals.

They view tapes of other "Videomates" who in turn look at their tapes. If it is mutually agreeable, they get together.

"Video dating cuts out a lot of the baloney in getting to know people," says Jim Wilson, 27.

Wilson, 27, a freelance photographer and antique dealer from Iowa, went to Videomate and met Janie King, 24, a secretary and soprano from Ohio.

She says: "I'm very picky about the men I go out with. And video dating helps because it's like window shopping — you can look but you don't have to buy."

IT MAY NOT be love at first sight, says Videomate, but there's a good chance that what you see is what you'll get.

Videomate was started 10 months ago by Jeffrey Wolfert, 34, a divorced former real estate agent who suddenly found himself adrift in the beckoning, bewildering singles scene.

"Our object is dates for people who are tired of the singles scene and its pressures and the hit or miss of computer dating," says Wolfert.

"We are not a marriage service or a flesh market," says Wolfert in his pale television-blue office equipped with video camera, viewer and film library of 400 lonely hearts.

"Everybody wants to meet somebody special, and this crazy town is the toughest place to do it,"

he says. "We are for serious people who want to meet sincere and quality dates."

VIDEOMATE, one of the few video dating services in the nation, has about 400 members, about equally men and women.

Wolfert claims he is 98 per cent successful, meaning that almost everyone gets several acceptable dates. He says he is starting a weekly cable television program that will present a sampling of some of the date tapes.

 IN-GROUND VINYL

REMEMBER:

VINYL is satin smooth with a resilient surface. No scrapes or scratching.
 VINYL-lined pools (in ground) account for one-half of all pools built nationwide.
 VINYL-lined pools cost less, last longer.
 VINYL-lined pools have been proven better everywhere - yet cost far less.
 VINYL is tough, strong, flexible, completely watertight.
 VINYL is easier, cheaper to care for, practically maintenance free.
 VINYL never requires costly acid baths, repainting, sand blasting, or replastering.
 VINYL-lined pools have been in service 15 years and longer, and still look and perform like new.

A BANNER POOL GIVES YOU . . .

- ... Floating bond beam engineering — guaranteed for life!
- ... Modern, proven vinyl-liner construction.
- ... Concrete-and-steel side walls for strength and durability.
- ... A permanent improvement that increases the market value of your home.
- ... The convenience and privacy of your own pool.
- ... An answer to over-crowded highways and polluted beaches.
- ... A pleasant way to keep physically fit.
- ... The perfect setting for entertaining family and friends.
- ... Maximum useable pool area.
- ... A pool that is practically maintenance free.
- ... Faster installation — from dig to swim in a matter of days — not months.
- ... Equipment designed and engineered to exceed the demands of your pool size.
- ... A swimming pool engineered and built to meet the stringent requirements for a 10-year home improvement loan, with 10% financing.

RAUL JULIA plays a police detective investigating the murder of a young woman stabbed in view of 15 witnesses, in the movie "Death Screams" on Ch. 7 at 9 p.m. Friday.

The BIBLE Says

QUESTION: What takes place when we are baptized? P. L., Long Beach

According to the Apostle Paul, we are "quickened" (made alive) while we are buried with Christ in baptism" (Colossians 2:11-13). Paul says we are "circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh" (verse 11). Thus, the circumcision that Paul is talking about is not the circumcision of the Law of Moses. Paul explains this to the Romans in Romans 2:28-29. "For he is not a Jew which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh: But he is a Jew, which in one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart...."

But when does this spiritual operation take place. Paul says it is while we are "buried with him in baptism..." (Col. 2:12). Thus, those who teach that one is saved before baptism are teaching that we are saved without the "operation of God," and without being "quickened" (made alive). For, all of these things take place when we are baptized. Also read Romans 6:3-6. This passage also says that we "put off the old man of sin and put on the new man of righteousness" when we are buried with him in baptism. How then can preachers teach that baptism is not essential to salvation? I cannot understand it!

for 'Cannon' drama

Six guest stars, in addition to Joan Fontaine, have been set by producer Anthony Spinner for "The Star," two-hour special episode of Quinn Martin Productions' "Cannon," starring William Conrad. Guesting will be Linden Chiles, Dana Elcar, Richard Hatch, David Hedison, Michael McGuire and John Vernon. William Wiard will direct Margaret Armen's teleplay. Quinn Martin is executive producer. The appearance by Miss Fontaine is her first dramatic video venture in more than 10 years.

The making of animal shows

It has been said, and with good reason, that animal series provide the purest form of escapism to be seen on television today. The beat of jungle drums, the grace of the big cats, strange tribal customs, often breathtaking scenery in faraway places (to cite just a few basic examples) seem to have a universal appeal for millions of American viewers.

Most of these viewers in an entire lifetime will never get closer to, say, Africa, Antarctica, Japan and other locales favored by producers of wildlife-adventure films than the distance between their armchairs and the television screen.

And for these true wildlife aficionados a "chase" to film a rare cougar or a magnificent Bengal tiger seems to have a great deal more appeal than the cops-and-robbers variety of chase at 90 miles an hour.

Aside from Disney's nature episodes and occasional Jacques Cousteau and other specials, there are almost a dozen wildlife-adventure series seen on a regular weekly basis on Los Angeles TV stations.

FOUR OF these, "True Adventure," "Wildlife Adventure," "World of the Sea" and "Animal World" are the work of Bill Burrud, pioneer independent producer of wildlife films. Best-known of these is "Animal World" seen Sundays at 6:30 p.m. on Channel 4. It is reportedly the No. 1 rated show in its time slot in its ninth consecutive year on the air.

When you watch one of these outdoor episodes unfold on your home screen, Burrud's narration and the action in exotic locales blending with split-second precision and wild beasts doing everything almost as though on cue, it all seems very simple. Right? Wrong.

Behind the finished product is a vast, complex effort which often girdles the globe.

Story ideas are the initial responsibility of Burrud's research department at his production company headquarters in Los Angeles. Its members scan the newspapers and wildlife publications and study suggestions from a global network of scientists, fish and game officials and governments. These contacts have been built up in the United States and countries where the company has filmed 160 episodes in the past.

Long experience has proven that often a subject that looks simply great on paper must be made more glossy and attractive before it reaches home viewers, while at the same time adhering strictly to the facts. If inaccuracies were to reach the screen, Burrud would be certain to hear about it from not only the lay audience but also involved scientists and even governments.

ONCE THE final synopsis (outline) of the story has been approved by Burrud and his aides, a starting time is set. Frequently even such a supposedly simple item as a start date provides problems.

Example: The episode in question dealt with vampire bats. It was to be filmed in bat caves in Mexico, Central America and Latin America. The weather is a major consideration in outdoor filming, but weather conditions vary in those areas. In this instance the weather (foul) made the starting date impossible. It also prevented the crew from simply doing a hop-skip-jump from one area to the next and wrapping up filming within a reasonable time. Each location had to be visited by the crew at the proper season and this caused considerable delay.

Among other complexities of this particular segment were: (1) Permission to go in had to be obtained from three governments; (2) bat caves call for very special lighting; (3) added health precautions in the form of special immunization shots against vampire bat bites had to be provided for the crew, (4) inasmuch as the episode dealt with millions of bats, Burrud felt it best to have a "batman" along as technical adviser, a fellow well versed in the habits of the creatures.

BURRUD revealed that, generally speaking, his crews frequently shoot close to 27,000 feet of film to come up with the 800 feet needed for a 30-minute program, less commercials. That's an "overshoot" ratio of 30 to 1 as compared with 4 or 5 to 1 for regular motion pictures.

But he pointed out that perhaps half of the unused footage is "good" and consequently is added to his wildlife library which has now reached the staggering proportion of more than 6 million feet of potentially usable film.

Due to the various logistical and other allied problems in the making of a 30-minute animal film for television, production on a single episode may consume up to two years from its inception in the research department to the finished product. In contrast, there's the average nine-day shooting schedule of a one-hour scripted network detective program.

Concluding stages take place when the footage brought back from location by the crew is screened for Burrud and his production committee in the company's projection room. When they are satisfied with what they see, the footage is turned over to the film editors who tailor the production to specified form and time.

Finally, the completed film is run off frame by frame for head writer Miriam Birch and she pens the narration script to fit the action being portrayed on the screen. Then, music and sound effects, if needed, are added. Later Burrud will voice the narration... and thus another "Animal World" episode has been born.

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. What sort of woman is Betty Ford, the President's wife, compared to her predecessor Pat Nixon?—D.L., Orlando, Fla.

A. Mrs. Ford is far more forthright and less inhibited than Mrs. Richard Nixon. Mrs. Ford is a woman of character, truth and candor. She is without pretense or affectation. She tells no lies. She reared four children almost single-handedly—her husband was on the campaign trail most of the time—and they love and respect her as well as confide in her. Betty Ford is a pleasant, easy-to-be-with woman who influences her husband more than Mrs. Nixon did hers.

Q. The Shah of Iran... is it a fact that the CIA code name for him is Irving?—Albert Cashio, Greensboro, N.C.

A. At one time the CIA code name for the Shah was Ralph—but never Irving.

HAPPIER DAYS: MUHAMMAD ALI WITH HIS PARENTS WHEN HE WAS NEW CHAMPION

Q. Mr. and Mrs. Cassius Clay, of Louisville, Ky., parents of world heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, are they divorcing?—M. Evans, Lexington, Ky.

A. The word is that the Clays have not been getting along and that son Ali has suggested a divorce, which his mother, Odessa, is willing to obtain.

Q. Who originated the Purple Heart?—J.M. Kahn, Portland, Oreg.

A. The award was established by George Washington in 1782, revived in 1932, is awarded to members of the Armed Forces or citizens of the U.S. honorably wounded in action against the enemy.

TATUM O'NEAL & WALTER MATTHAU

Q. Tatum O'Neal, 11-year-old daughter of Ryan O'Neal—is she really being paid $1 million to act opposite Walter Matthau in "The Bad News Bears"?—Barbara Stone, Tucson, Ariz.

A. Tatum is starring opposite Matthau in a Little League baseball story written by actor Burt Lancaster's son, William. But she is receiving much less than $1 million for her stint. About $200,000 is closer to the mark.

Q. Can you please tell me when William Saxbe died? He was Richard Nixon's last Attorney General.—David Scott, Columbus, Ohio.

A. Mr. Saxbe is not dead, just uncharacteristically silent as the U.S. Ambassador to India.

Q. Who was Kitty O'Shea in Irish history?—Ken Daugherty, Danvers, Mass.

A. Kitty O'Shea was the daughter of a Church of England vicar. In the 1870's she was married to Capt. William O'Shea, who found great difficulty in obtaining a steady job. After giving birth to three children, Mrs. O'Shea met the Irish Nationalist leader Charles Stewart Parnell, a Protestant and son of an American mother. They moved in together. Subsequently Mrs. O'Shea bore Parnell three children. Eventually Mr. O'Shea, little more than a blackmailer, charged adultery, sued, and won. In 1891 Katharine O'Shea married Parnell, whose career, of course, was ruined. Excellent book on the subject is "The Uncrowned Queen of Ireland," by Joyce Marlow, published by Saturday Review Press and E.P. Dutton.

Q. We have sold the Russians wheat, corn and soy beans. We have given them computer and communications know-how. What have we gotten in return?—Mario Vigri, College Point, N.Y.

A. Détente.

Q. Is it true that director John Huston, 70, plans to marry the 22-year-old Mexican governess of his stepchildren?—Helen Coleman, Los Angeles.

A. John Huston, film director-writer-actor, is a colorful, unpredictable character. He is being sued for divorce by his fourth wife, Celeste "Cece" Shane, whose children have been looked after by Maricella Hernandez, 22. Whether Huston will marry Maricella after the divorce comes through is anyone's guess. Certainly an age-differential of 48 years would not deter him.

Q. If the U.S. does not give up control of the Panama Canal, isn't there a very good possibility that the Panamanians will blow it up or sabotage it?—Charles Young, Wilton, Conn.

A. There is a strong likelihood of that happening. Says Julio Yao, Panamanian foreign policy adviser, "If Panama does not recover the Canal Zone no one can prevent the Panamanians from destroying, making inoperative, or paralyzing the canal."

JULIE CHRISTIE

Q. How old is actress Julie Christie? Is she a tax exile like Rex Harrison and other British movie stars? Where does she live? Does she still go with Warren Beatty?—Mildred Hornaday, Fayetteville, N.C.

A. Julie Christie is 33. She has a farmhouse in Wales, an apartment in London, no longer goes with actor Warren Beatty. Her current residence is in Malibu, Cal., where she pays her taxes.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

BLOODBATH THREAT

For years, observers, statesmen, politicians and journalists have predicted "a South African bloodbath," an uprising of the black majority against the white minority in South Africa.

It is interesting to note therefore that in the past year the number of white South Africans who have purchased guns has doubled.

There are 1,053,225 registered firearms in South Africa, one for every four whites, double the number of guns in register last year.

Gun dealers report a constantly mounting business. Why the sudden rush for guns? Obviously it has something to do with the newly won independence of two black countries adjacent to South Africa -- Angola and Mozambique.

FRENCH VALUES

What is the No. 1 status symbol in the French culture?

According to the news magazine "Le Point" reporting on a poll, French women treasure a chauffeur-driven car above all else.

After that they rank the family jewels (48%) and an ocean cruise (41%).

Other status symbols they value in order of preference are a fur coat, an evening dress, an alligator bag, an apartment larger than five rooms, a pedigreed dog, a color TV set, and 10 pairs of shoes.

Frenchmen, however, prefer the Legion of Honor Medal to a private swimming pool, 53 to 52%, then rank a live-in maid as their next most prestigious status symbol.

COMPETITION & HEART DISEASE

The American way of life, competitive and stressful, tends to produce heart attacks. Japanese in the United States who retain their traditional ways suffer less heart disease than those Japanese who adopt American ways.

So concludes a group of University of California researchers who believe that stress and heart disease go hand in hand.

Michael G. Marmot, project director and medical researcher, reports that the group's findings are based on 10 years of research in which 4000 Japanese men were studied.

The Japanese-Americans in the San Francisco Bay area who become Westernized suffer two and a half times more heart disease than those who follow the stress-free way of life in Japan. Those who have most departed from their Japanese culture suffer five times the rate of heart disease found in the most traditional group.

Many physicians assume that diet alone lies behind the increase of heart disease among Japanese men who have emigrated to the United States. But the School of Public Health researchers at the university disagree; they point out that in Japan the group is more important than the individual so that a man is not obsessively preoccupied with a heart-weakening drive for success.

BOTTOMLESS

How many American men are going bottomless? No one knows for sure. But Byron Reed, president of Munsingwear, Inc., attributes the drop in underwear sales this year -- down 15% from last year -- to the recession.

He suggests that men are beginning to save where it doesn't show. "If America pulled down its pants," he says, "there would be a lot of shabby underwear showing."

NEW UN LEADER?

Kurt Waldheim's term as secretary-general of the United Nations expires December 1976. He is an odds-on favorite for another term. Should he decide, however, that he's had enough, possible successors are Dr. Abderrahman Khene of Algeria, who was General Secretary of OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) until 1974; Indonesian foreign minister Adam Malik, and Argentine ambassador to the U.N. Carlos Ortiz de Rozas, who was an unsuccessful candidate in 1971.

KIDNAP COVERAGE

A few weeks ago after major kidnappings in Italy this year exceeded 40, "La Stampa," one of Rome's most conservative newspapers, editorialized: "It will be a great day when state officials apprehend tax-evaders before the kidnappers."

Ordinary Italian citizens are amazed at how much money wealthy Italians can pay to ransom their relatives and are angry, too, that for years these millionaires have paid little or no income tax.

pers as Robin Hoods.

The Italian government has requested local insurance companies not to issue any more anti-kidnapping policies. The authorities are afraid such policies will serve to encourage more kidnappings. As a result Italian millionaires are seeking such coverage from Swiss and British companies, which have raised their rates and lowered the terms of their coverage from one year to six months.

If you live in Rome and take out $10 million worth of kidnapping insurance, your premium for 180 days of ransom coverage is $100,000.

Sen. Frank Church— Dark Horse Candidate for the Presidency

by Lloyd Shearer

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Sen. Frank Church, Democrat of Idaho, would like to be elected President of the United States next year. So, too, would a dozen other Democrats, declared and undeclared.

At 51, however, Church seems more qualified than most. He is honest, intelligent, semi-charismatic, personable, but most important, experienced.

A boy wonder of sorts, he was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1956, at age 32, the youngest Senator in the 85th Congress and then the fifth youngest in the history of the Senate.

Frank Church is into his fourth term, the first Democratic Senator from Idaho to be so honored, and he ranks 13th in seniority, which means he has power, prestige and precedence.

Soon he will become a nationwide TV celebrity as chairman of the U.S. Senate Select Committee on Intelligence. Intermittently the committee, with its revelations of questionable and illegal behavior by the CIA and FBI, has made headlines and prime time. But open TV hearings à la Watergate are scheduled to get underway any day now if they haven't already. And possibly TV will do for Frank Church what it did for Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina. It will boom him into a household name, a political celebrity, a widely known personality.

Unaffordable exposure

In an overcrowded field of Democratic Presidential candidates, the TV exposure, which under ordinary circumstances he would never be able to afford, will undoubtedly set Church aside from the pack. It may very well launch the "Church-for-President" campaign.

"I've thought about the Presidency," Church frankly admits. "Which one of us in the Senate has not? But I'm now engaged in an investigation that I can't mix with Presidential politics. So I've deferred any serious consideration of running for the Presidency until that investigation is completed."

When will Church and his committee finish running the members of the intelligence community through their filter?

"November may bring us to the close of public hearings," he estimates. "And possibly by February we will complete the reports and recommendations."

"And by then," adds his wife, Bethine, "it may be too late."

The tall, boyish-looking, full-cheeked Senator nods his black-haired head. "It depends on a lot of variables," he explains. "I think by February we might have a baker's dozen of announced Presidential candidates. If none of them has developed sufficient momentum to separate themselves from the pack, it might still be possible for a latecomer like myself to enter the race.

"Much depends on financing," he points out. "A late entrant would be handicapped in getting together the necessary funds in a very short time. Clearly he couldn't enter the first primary [New Hampshire in February]. He'd have to organize a campaign and collect money for the later primaries."

Church suggests that if he decides to run, "I would have to select a few of the later primaries in the East and the West, which would be fairly representational so that if I did well in those, I could then come to the convention, albeit with many fewer votes, but with a case to be made that I entered representational primaries late in the campaign and demonstrated a strong national potential."

Political family

Senator Church's wife is one of the most politically knowledgeable of all Congressional wives. Her father, the late Federal Judge Chase A. Clark, was Governor of Idaho; her uncle was also a governor; her cousin, the late Worth Clark, served as a U.S. Senator. Says Mrs. Church: "Frank is not thinking about the Presidency, he is concentrating on the intelligence investigation and his other committee hearings. Ever since his bout with cancer, he's become pretty much of a fatalist. When he was 24 the doctors gave him about six months to live."

Frank Forrester Church was born in Boise, Idaho, on July 25th, 1924, into the conservative Republican family of Frank and Laura Church, who owned a sporting goods store.

When young Church was in Boise High School he won first prize in the American Legion's National Americanism Oratorical Contest. It won him a $4000 scholarship to any college of his choice.

In 1942 he chose Stanford University at Palo Alto, Cal., then after one term quit at 18 to enlist as a private in the U.S. Army. He was sent as an officer candidate to Ft. Benning and later shipped overseas to the CBI (China-Burma-India) theater as a military intelligence officer. After the war Church returned to Stanford where he made Phi Beta Kappa, earned his B.A., then married Jean Bethine Clark, and decided to enter Harvard Law School.

Medical disorder

At Harvard he came down with excruciating back pains. "At first," says his wife, "we thought it was the climate or that Frank was studying too hard. The pain kept getting worse, and the doctors couldn't diagnose it. We decided to go back to Stanford where it was warmer, and Frank could study at Stanford Law."

But life in Palo Alto did nothing to relieve the back pain. Finally the doctors found the cause: cancer of the testicles and abdomen. They operated and discovered that the cancer had spread to the lymph nodes. They pronounced it incurable, predicting death within six months.

"They were wrong," Church says happily. "There was a Dr. Wood in San Francisco. At that time he was one of the leading authorities in cancer at the Stanford Medical School. When he looked at the pathology report, the biopsy analysis, he said that what I had was a very rare type of cancer, frequently confused with incurable malignancy, but that in fact it was a type of cancer which was highly responsive to X-ray treatment.

Dr. Wood's treatment

"Dr. Wood insisted that I be given the full course of X-ray treatment, and in the end that saved my life."

Says Mrs. Church: "It was truly a miracle. There he was 6 feet tall and down to a little more than 80 pounds. The X-rays burned into him, turning him increasingly nauseous. It was almost unbearable. I read to him aloud during the treatments trying to divert his mind, trying to beat the nausea, trying for him to hold on. He did, yes, he did, and he beat it."

Trim, athletic, in good health, Church says, "Whenever I go out to Walter Reed or the National Institutes of Health for my yearly physical, they tell me I'm lucky to be alive. I tell them I'm lucky to have had Bethine. It was her determination which pulled me through."

Like most men who have cheated death, Frank Church believes passionately in the oneness of life. "Right now," he declares, "what I want most is to do a creditable job in this present intelligence investigation that I'm heading, because I think that's perhaps the most important service I can render in my whole career in the Senate."

CIA murder plots

Of all the sins and crimes the CIA has been accused of, Church says, "The most shocking is that the agency was involved in murder plots and murder attempts directed against foreign governments with which we were not at war. These particular attempts were directed against small countries whose leaders could never have been a real threat to the United States.

"I think that when the committee makes its report, it will be clear that in these cases there was no possible justification, no urgent national interest that had to be protected.

"We must make certain in the future that assassination never again becomes an instrument of American foreign policy."

Church believes that it was a suggested instrument during four administrations — Eisenhower's, Kennedy's, Johnson's, and Nixon's — and that "there is evidence which tends to show that the CIA may have been behaving like a rogue elephant on a rampage.

"I am not in favor of abolishing the agency," he states, "but it needs to be restructured. The laws governing the agency need to be more strictly drawn. The control of the agency needs to be tightened. One thing that is clear from the present investigation is that in each of the administrations, from Kennedy's through Nixon's, there has been such looseness of control over the agency that it's always been possible for the agency itself to construe its authority more broadly than those concerned have intended.

"I think that in the future we will have to be more careful that the President, through his policy makers, has stricter control over the agency. Also it may be possible to establish a joint committee along the lines of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, as long as we make certain that the committee is fully empowered to deal with intelligence agencies.

"By that I mean it must have the authority to determine the money they should have. It must have full authority to know at all times what is happening, to know the full scope of covert actions. It must be advised in advance or concurrently of decisions that are made in this field so that the committee can make sure that the agency is living within the law."

Church is unsure whether the CIA should or should not partake in covert operations. "As regards covert activities," he says, "I think the agency is probably most proud of the support it gave to the constituting of democratic governments in Western Europe in the period following World War II. Now that kind of covert activity at least conforms to our traditional values. I'm not speaking of the methods that are used. I'm speaking of the objectives. The worst example of covert CIA activity that I can think of was our intervention in Chile where we undertook to depose a government that had been lawfully elected by the Chileans.

"What we've come to call covert operations has relatively little to do with collecting intelligence. They are clandestine efforts to maneuver things, to control events abroad.

"If we were to put the CIA back exclusively in the business of operating an intelligence agency and confine it to gathering the information we need for our own defense and to conduct an informed foreign policy, we would find, and the agency itself would today admit, that 95 per cent or 98 per cent of the information that is gathered comes from either overt sources or through the technical facilities that are available to the agency. The old cloak-and-dagger work which is connected romantically with the espionage methods of the past accounts for precious little."

According to the Senator, the intelligence agencies obtain the least amount of information from undercover agents in Communist countries.

A real job to do

"I have no objections whatever," he maintains, "to the utilization of whatever means there are at our disposal to collect essential information about foreign governments and their intentions and capabilities. That's intelligence work. I think most of it will come from our technical capabilities, but even if clandestine operations are necessary, I have no objection to them if they are confined to that purpose. But when it comes to manipulating events abroad through covert actions, then the first thing you must realize is that it's not intelligence. That is a method of concealed interference in the affairs of others in order to manipulate them."

Church also heads the subcommittee investigating multinational corporations such as International Telephone and Telegraph (which offered the CIA a million dollars to interfere in Chile), Exxon, Northrop, and Lockheed which for years have regularly been bribing government officials overseas. "What you have got," he explains, "is the American intelligence community and the American big-business community taking part in the internal affairs of foreign countries. We would not tolerate it if it were done to us. That's the double standard we live with all the time."

Publicizing a menace

What Church hopes to do in the weeks to come in his open televised hearings is "to demonstrate the dangers that are implicit in the spreading use of illegal methods of surveillance, improper mail openings, and various other ways of spying on the American people.

"I suppose," he offers, "that George Orwell would have called it Big Brother government in this country. The sad truth is that the methods first adopted by law enforcement and intelligence agencies like the FBI and CIA have spread to other departments of the government. And if this isn't exposed and checked, then it could continue to grow into the beginnings of a police state in this country.

"I want to dramatize the dangers so that there will be sufficient public support for the changes in the law that must come to prevent this from spreading further.

"George Williams, one of the much beloved professors of theology at Harvard Divinity School, said to me one time something that I have always remembered, 'Choose your enemy very carefully, for you will grow to be more like him.' After World War II the Soviet Union became our perceived enemy and we undertook to contest with the Russians everything in the world.

'Our own worst enemy'

"To justify emulating their methods we said we had to treat fire with fire. And in the process, of course, we've become more like them. In a free society that can go only so far. We become our own worst enemy if we bring down a free society in the very name of defending it."

The Senator, having been a school-boy orator, is, of course, a loquacious man. He has been accused of being overserious, a Boy Scout, too sincere, self-righteous, and a goody-goody, who's intoxicated with the sound of his own voice.

When Church became one of the first Senators to oppose the Vietnamese war, an angry Lyndon Johnson began referring to him as Frank "Sunday School" Church. Later, apoplectic John Birchers in Idaho called him a "Commie-Symp," tried by petition to remove him from office by charging treason. Convinced that the President did not have the right to order American troops into combat in Vietnam without Congressional consent, sure in his mind that the American involvement in Vietnam was a tragic mistake, Church refused to be swayed even by well-meaning friends who told him he was committing political suicide. In the end he was proved right.

"Although he is pragmatic and willing to compromise—I've always had the pragmatic view that you ought to legislate, and to legislate you have to remain in the realm of the possible"—Church is recognized by most of his colleagues as a man of integrity.

"Frankly," says one veteran Senator, "I'm not interested in what sort of image Church projects. Some members around here think he'd be better off if he stopped playing Mr. Clean or Mr. Nice Guy or Mr. Orator. I'm not interested in that. What interests me is the kind of work a Senator puts out. Church does good work. He does his homework. He works hard and long. I don't care about his style. I care about his substance. He's got plenty of that. One day he'll wind up succeeding John Sparkman as head of the Foreign Relations Committee, and I predict he'll do as good a job as Bill Fulbright did."

A Senator's view

Says another Senator: "Personally I like Church. He's pleasant, intelligent, hard not to like, but if you ask him what time it is, you face the very real danger of getting an answer on the history of watchmaking."

A journalist who's covered Church for years claims the Idaho Senator is "suspect" because he never denounces anyone as a 'stupid son-of-a-bitch,' he doesn't tell off-color stories, he drinks hardly at all, and has a political brain-truster in his wife the likes of which few other Senators have. Bethine Church is the ideal campaigner. Whither he goest, she goest, a politically supportive spark plug."

Ever since he beat cancer nearly 30 years ago, Senator Church has kept in prime physical shape. Volleyball helps.

Frank Church is aware of his Boy Scout image and laughs at it. "They keep calling me an Eagle Scout," he says. "The truth is that I never got beyond Boy Scout Second Class."

"They also keep calling him the American Legion orator who uses words pompously," says his wife. "But he's not one bit pompous. I think Frank likes words. I think he's a Jeffersonian-type man. All the time he was in China during the war he wrote letters to me and they began, 'Darling Bethine' and ended with 'Love, Frosty.' In between they contained wonderful accounts of what was actually happening in China at that time. Frank is not pompous, he has the best sense of humor and laughs at himself more than anyone I've ever known."

Privacy and freedom

"Just because he comes through as being very careful and serious on these intelligence hearings doesn't mean he's that way about himself at all."

Church is serious about matters of principle. And he believes that the people's right to privacy and freedom has been violated on occasion by the CIA, the FBI, the IRS, the Post Office, the Secret Service and other government agencies.

"I'm pretty relaxed about most things," he concedes. "But when it comes to the growing insidious danger to freedom in this country, when it comes to Big Brother government prying into every facet of our lives—I'm not relaxed about that. I'm alarmed."

If in that process, the public becomes grateful to Frank Church and catapults him into the top echelon of contenders for the Democratic Presidential nomination—that would not be half-bad. Ford versus Church would provide the nation with a very real ideological choice.

Church as a freshman Senator in 1957 celebrates with Sen. Hubert Humphrey passage of bill for Snake River Dam.

Translator Viktor Sukhodrev (center) is right there when bigwigs gather. But here, the smiles of Gerald Ford and Leonid Brezhnev speak for themselves.

The Indispensable Russian

by Charles Peterson

When Leonid Brezhnev arrives in Moscow, D.C., later this year to confer with President Ford, as he is scheduled to, he will have with him the indispensable Russian, Viktor Sukhodrev.

At 43, handsome Viktor has become the Soviet's top English interpreter.

Sukhodrev is so quick and accurate that Henry Kissinger, as well as Presidents Nixon and Ford, have used him at Soviet-American conferences in preference to an American interpreter.

Kissinger says, "It shows we have faith in the accuracy of his translation. It's also a courteous gesture."

The ever-present Sukhodrev translated for Chairman Brezhnev as he greeted President Nixon on his arrival in Moscow's Vnukovo airport in June, 1974.

Sukhodrev is the face-to-face communicator every time the Soviet bigwigs meet with their English-speaking counterparts. He speaks British English and American English flawlessly and also has an exhaustive knowledge of the British as well as the American idiom.

Khrushchev began using him in the late 1950's, and Viktor has served the top Soviet echelon ever since, interpreting for Kosygin, Podgorny, and Brezhnev in their meetings with Indira Gandhi, Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Harold Wilson, Edward Heath, and according to Sukhodrev, "Anyone who speaks English, which includes Canadians, Africans, Australians."

Childhood experience

Viktor, a personable, cheerful man, owes much of his fluency in English to the six schoolboy years he spent in England during World War II. Back then his mother worked for the Soviet trade delegation in London while his father was stationed in Moscow. As a 9-year-old, Viktor spent a good deal of time with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Holloway, who looked after him in their Hampstead apartment. Mr. Holloway, a former postman, has passed on, but Mrs. Holloway, 78, who lives on the Isle of Wight, remembers Viktor well.

"He was as bright as a button," she recalls, "a natural mimic. He spent some time in Cheltenham before he came to us, and he picked up every dialect he heard, also some naughty words from the soldiers' My husband was very fond of him. Viktor used to call him 'Uncle Jack.'"

"Viktor wanted more than anything else to join the Russian Army, so my husband made him a gun out of some pipe and let him wear his helmet from World War I. Viktor was thrilled. He wrote us some years ago and said he had given the same toy gun to his son, Sergei."

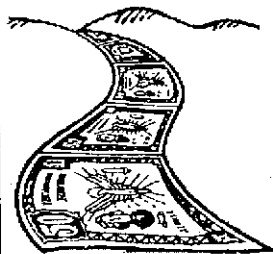

Pursues his studies

Sukhodrev returned to the Soviet Union in 1945 when he was 12. By then his English was better than his Russian. The Soviets assigned him to study at Moscow's Institute of Foreign Languages from which he was graduated with honors.

In 1967 when Viktor came to London with Kosygin, the first people he telephoned were the Walter Holloways. "Ever since then," says Mrs. Catherine Holloway, "I've followed his career with pride. He really has the most amazing facility. He can speak Oxford, he can speak cockney, he can speak American. He has a great ear."

And a personality to match.

Buick 1976: To the Free Spirit.

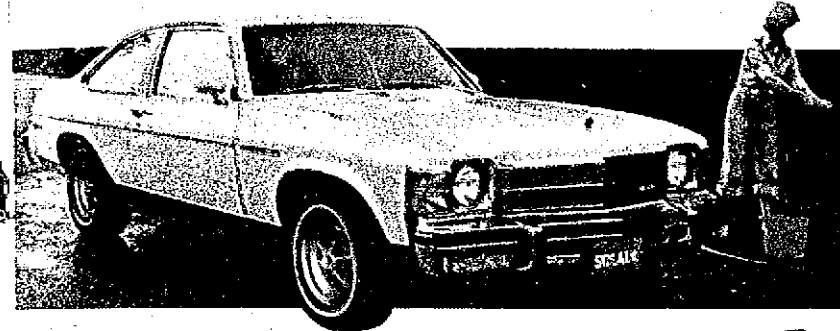

SKYHAWK. Aerodynamic. Gutsy. Nimble. The most free-spirited Buick of all. Small. Efficient underway. With 2-plus-2 seating. Hatch in back. And set in motion by Buick's own V-6 engine. Skyhawk—it's a ball to drive. Try one.

REGAL AND CENTURY. A lot of bright, free-spirited people are going to take their first real look at Buick this year. And these new, mid-size Buicks are why: Buick luxury, comfort and ride, concentrated in a package that's a foot shorter and over a thousand pounds lighter than most full-size cars. Best of all, Regal and Century are the only American mid-size cars powered by a V-6 engine. The Buick V-6, naturally. Which means they span time and distance very efficiently. There are nine Regal and Century models in all. Any one of which is a nice way to enter the House of Buick.

SKYLARK S/R. Built to the discipline that a practical car doesn't have to be bland. Its small size and Buick V-6 engine make it practical; its cockpit makes it dashing. With high-rise, ribbed velour bucket seats (the passenger side reclines), console-mounted shift lever, etc. Skylark S/R—practicality with flair.

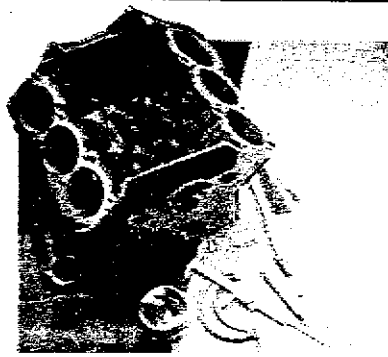

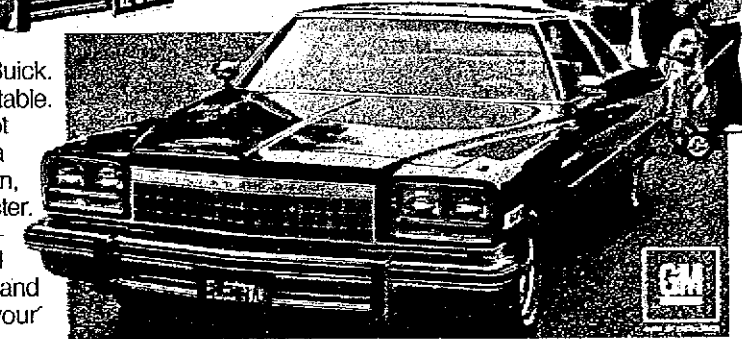

RIVIERA. Pictured below is a car that has fostered more than one person's love of car. Obviously, its classic look does much to stir the soul. As does the opulent Buick interior (power windows and tilt steering wheel are a few standard items). But underway, in motion, is where Riviera thrives. And where you'll fall in love with one. You owe your self this one. It won't be a brief fling—it'll be a long, happy relationship. Drive one, you'll see.

LESABRE. Here is a car that occupies a unique position. It is the only six-passenger, full-size car in the world that you can order with a V-6 engine.* It's just another in a series of progressive steps that Buick engineers have taken to improve the efficiency of our cars. But LeSabre is more than efficient. As long as there are Little Leagues and car pools and vacations, families will need LeSabre's six-passenger room and large trunk. And, because LeSabre is a Buick, the brood will travel in comfort, heck, in luxury. It's nice to have a car with real talent on your side. LeSabre, the recreational Buick, dedicated to the active American family.

ELECTRA. The ultimate Buick. Accommodating. Comfortable. Opulent. But decidedly not ostentatious. Buick Electra is more than transportation, it's a vehicle of real character. A source of genuine satisfaction. We think you'll find it most enjoyable. Electra and all the new Buicks are at your Buick dealer now.

BUICK V-6. The only V-6 designed and built in America. The Buick V-6 shares many design efficiencies with its Buick V-8 brethren. Which means when you step on the accelerator, it responds with authority. It also is sparked by our High-Energy Ignition system which sends 35 percent more voltage to the spark-plugs than a conventional ignition system, eliminates the points and ignition condenser and helps produce impressive overall operating economy. And, because there are 25 percent fewer cylinders to feed, you get the efficiency of a six. All this makes for a very spunky, very efficient, little engine.

*V-6 LeSabre not available in California.

Newly Developed Time Release Capsule Contains:
THE MOST POWERFUL REDUCING AID EVER RELEASED TO THE PUBLIC without a prescription

THINK of it. You take just one of these amazing time-release capsules each morning . . . then for the rest of the day, tiny doses of the most powerful reducing aid ever approved for public use are gradually released into your system to constantly curb your appetite, calm your desire for food. But that's only your first giant step on this exciting new journey to slimmness.

CONTINUOUS 5-WAY ACTION ATTACKS THE MAJOR CAUSE OF OVERWEIGHT —OVEREATING—THE MAJOR CAUSE OF FAT BUILD-UP

Because thanks to Permathene-12's "miss-no-meals" eating program, not only do you eat better than ever before . . . but do so in such a way that your body actually breaks down those bulging pockets of fat and flab . . . starting in just days!

In other words, with the PERMATHENE-12 continuous action capsule reducing plan—the first and only ONCE-A-DAY time-release capsule—you actually help your body.

TURN FOOD INTO BURNED UP ENERGY INSTEAD OF INTO FAT!

Yes, with PERMATHENE-12, here's what happens when you take this great new ALL-DAY time-release formula . . . and launch yourself on this wondrous new capsule reducing plan:

- Gnawing hunger pangs are suppressed, so it takes less food to satisfy you. Meaning . . .
- The food you do eat turns into burned up energy instead of into fat.
- Fat build-up, that up to now you've found impossible to budge, is burned away by your own body chemistry and gradually disappears.
- Gentle diuretic action helps eliminate excess water and bloat.

• And even though you may lose as much as 10—20—30 pounds or more . . . you never miss a meal . . . never deny yourself snacks or desserts . . . never for a moment starve yourself one iota!

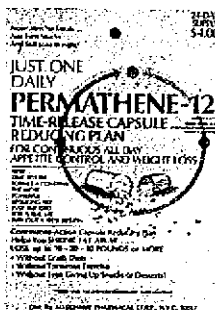

THE MOST EFFECTIVE WEIGHT-LOSS METHOD KNOWN TO MEDICAL SCIENCE
 That's because with the PERMATHENE-12 way to slimmness you arm yourself with the most modern and effective way to weight control known to science. The final, all-out triumph over overeating . . . the basic cause of overweight. And because the PERMA-

THENE-12 ONCE-A-DAY "slim-down capsule program" is working all the time . . . both day and night . . . it is by far the easiest way ever developed to achieve that slim, trim body of your dreams.

JUST THINK! YOU MISS NO MEALS—YOU EVEN EAT SNACKS AND DESSERTS—AND STILL LOSE WEIGHT LIKE NEVER BEFORE!

Yes, with the PERMATHENE-12 plan you are not asked to constantly battle your appetite. You simply take one of these new ALL-DAY time release capsules each morning . . . then following the PERMATHENE-12 satisfying eating program, still shed pounds and inches like never before . . . and all without ravishing hunger.

So, no matter what your goal may be—10 . . . 20 . . . 30 pounds thinner . . . here at last is the no-hunger way to LOSE WEIGHT with the first and only ONCE-A-DAY reducing product in America. Not to be used in cases of high blood pressure, heart, kidney, diabetes, thyroid, or where other disease is present.

*Not a crash diet—but the most satisfying, fully balanced reduced calorie eating program you've ever seen.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

RICK AKINS DOES A NUMBER FOR A HIGH SCHOOL ASSEMBLY

Changing Youth

"Waving a flag in front of a high school assembly five years ago would have brought more boos than yeas. Now it often brings a standing ovation."

That contrast points up a major change among high schoolers, according to Rick Trow and Rick Akins of Rick Trow Associates, a Philadelphia-based company that last year staged assemblies in more than 7000 high schools.

Trow and Akins cite Watergate and related scandals as a possible reason for the new patriotism. "A few years ago," they report, "everyone wanted to picket and carry signs. Now, the kids say, 'By golly, the system does work.' Watergate renewed their faith in the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights."

"Teen-agers have mellowed out," Trow declares. "Once you could turn them on with songs about injustices in the system. These songs don't sell anymore. Now the mood is more 'I want to feel good, succeed professionally, get established and enjoy the good life with my family.'"

Trow discovered the new attitude toward the flag while testing a Bicentennial show scheduled to tour for the next two years.

Trow has also noted other developments:

Dress codes in many high schools have been abolished. Boys wear jeans and T-shirts more than ever before. Girls wear hip-huggers and halter tops. Many schools now designate areas where students may smoke, usually in the cafeteria or in a student lounge in many cases equipped with a jukebox.

The music of high-schoolers in some cases has become "softer, smoother and sweeter." For example, the Beach Boys rock group toured the country this summer playing their original melodic songs to enthusiastic crowds of teen-agers who were in diapers when the Beach Boys gained their first popularity in the early 1960's.

Rebellion at Eton

A centuries-old feature of British boarding schools is fagging, a system in which senior boys are allocated a young boy who is charged with fetching books, running errands, keeping the senior's room neat and tidy, and doing other chores.

A rebellion against fagging is underway at Eton, the British prep school founded in 1440.

Sim Emerson, former president of Britain's National Union of School Students, has denounced fagging as "institutionalized thuggery" and wants it stopped. A leaflet issued by his organization says, "People have at last realized the truth about Eton. They have seen what lies behind the pomp and circumstance which is the putrid core of snobbery."

"Fagging is another example that Eton is out of touch with reality. Almost no other school student would accept this kind of degradation and humiliation. Slavery was abolished hundreds of years ago. They seem to have forgotten fagging."

AMERICA'S FIRST THREE PRESIDENTS

Here are striking modern examples of the ancient silver craftsman's art. They possess an exceptional value that fits them for beyond the realm of ordinary art. The Washington spoon, for example, depicts the first President in Mount Vernon, Virginia, visited by millions each year. The bowl of the John Adams spoon carries a tribute to John Marshall, appointed by the President as the first Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. The event selected for the Jefferson spoon is the Louisiana Purchase in 1803.

EMPRESS FARAH

DEMIS ROUSSOS

Royal Favorite

Farah, the beautiful empress of Iran, considers Demis Roussos, 29-year-old Greek singer, one of the best pop artists of all time.

After hearing him sing "Rain and Tears," she was so taken with the roly-poly that she flew him and his 10-man entourage from Toronto to Teheran at a cost of $50,000, of which Roussos got half.

The empress is so hung up on Roussos that she is flying the outfit back to Iran again this month.

GOING WITH THE WIND

Wind Surfing

This past summer wind surfing became the "in" sporting event for would-be surfers who had no access to big waves.

Five years ago two Californians, aviation engineer Jim Drake and computer analyst Hoyle Schweitzer, got the idea of transforming a normal nine-foot surfboard into a 12-foot sailboard. The two designed a small tail fin, a 14-foot mast, and a 5.7-square-yard sail.

In wind surfing, the participant stands on the board, back to the wind and steers by manipulating a pronged bar which surrounds the sail and moves the mast.

Wind surfers can reach speeds of 28 to 40 miles per hour.

What more unforgettable way to say: "America, I love you!" than to mount this inspirational commemorative plate in a place of honor on your wall! Striking plate of fine creamy white porcelain has a dramatic 22K gold-rimmed bordering a month-by-month 1976 calendar boldly marked in red and blue. And to complete the patriotic color scheme: the center of the plate depicts a majestic American eagle, in red, grasping a red, white, and blue flag emblem firmly in his powerful talons. All this, plus a commemorative bicentennial inscription honoring our 200th Anniversary Year. Our designer has combined all these elements with true artistry, in a design so original — it's copyrighted! It's ours exclusively. You won't be able to obtain this Bicentennial Calendar Plate anywhere but from Spencer Gifts!

PARADE OF PROGRESS

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

TENNIS ORGANIZER: Mountable almost anywhere and decorative as well as functional, this solid hardwood holder stores tennis rackets, with or without their presses, in padded compartments. It also has a slide-in storage for ball cans. Walnut finish. Two-racket model: $10.95 in stores; 4-racket: $15.95. Heritage International, Dept. PP, 1330 Stuyvesant Ave., Union, N.J. 07083.

BATHING WITHOUT SCALDING: Two new devices for tub and shower prevent hot-water accidents by immediately interrupting water flow when temperature reaches unsafe or uncomfortable levels. Not until temperature drops back to safe level or you adjust it do the units permit flow to resume. Shower unit fits all standard showers and is used with existing nozzle. Tub unit is easily installed in place of standard tub spout. $14.95 each. Apor Industries, Dept. PP, Village Bank Bldg., 251 W. Garfield Rd., Aurora, Ohio 44202.

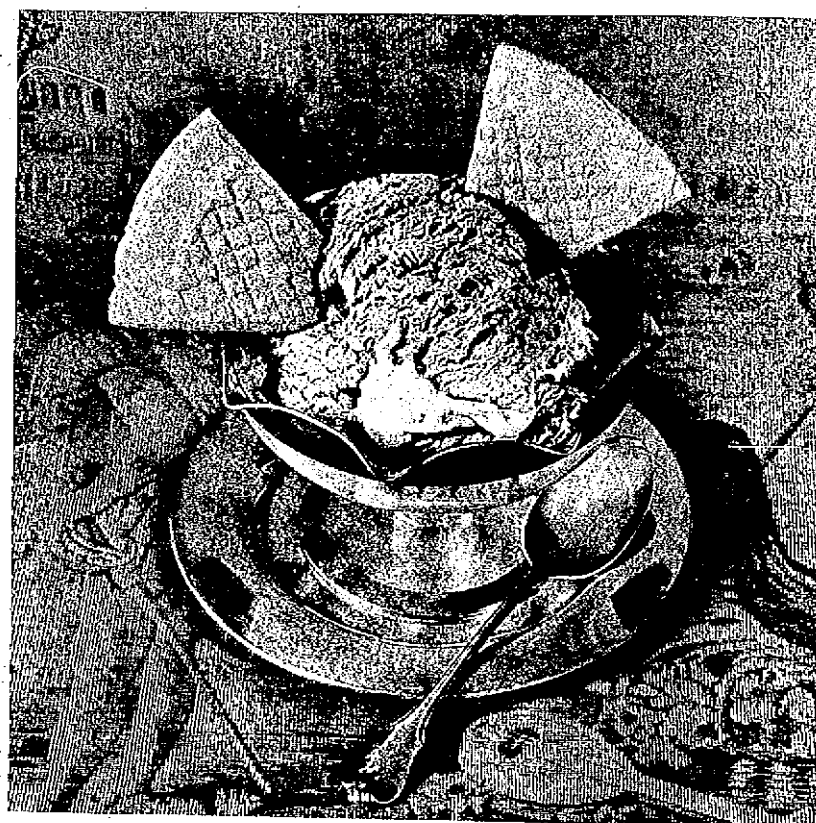

POUR-THROUGH PURIFIER: Handy to carry with you anywhere in the world, this 1/4-pound purifier is guaranteed to supply at least 1000 gallons of pure water. It uses a special purification process, claims the maker, that destroys bacteria and viruses on contact while removing sediments, bad tastes and odors. $34.95 in stores. Water Pollution Control Systems, Dept. PP, Suite 122, 6350 LBJ Freeway, Dallas, Tex. 75240. (below left)

A NEW POCKET KNIFE: Sharper than conventional types because it uses a cutlery-grade stainless steel blade, this one also is safer because a safety lock holds the fold-out blade securely while in use, claims the maker. You can use it for whittling, carving, cleaning game, cutting fish line, and cutting paper, string, wood and plastics. Blade is easily replaceable. $2.75 suggested list price. Stanley Works, Dept. PP, 195 Lake St., New Britain, Conn. 06050. (above right)

NEW FOR HOME SEWERS: Said to be the first fusible knit interfacing/underlining for home sewers, a new tricot knit fabric is combined with a fusing agent, and you can steam-press it in place in 10 to 12 seconds. After you apply it, it can stretch and recover with a knit, providing shape and support, eliminating sagging and overstretch. You can use it to control and shape garment areas such as collars, cuffs, pockets, flaps, yokes, center fronts, and hemlines—and for detail reinforcement at corners and points, zippers, bound buttonholes, slash pockets. Available in colors and 22" and 45" widths. Armo, Div. Crown Textile, Dept. PP, 206 W. 40, New York, N.Y. 10018.

divinely delicious DESSERT

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Just for once put your calorie-counter out of sight and out of mind. Enjoy one of the most marvelously creamy and flavorful frozen desserts we have ever tasted. Be prepared to part with the recipe, because everyone who tastes this Brandied Espresso Mousse will want to have it. And as it will make eight servings, the requests will be numerous!

The menu that precedes this dessert should be light. How about thinly sliced London Broil, frozen asparagus and circles or cubes of yellow crookneck squash, with a salad of endive and Italian dressing?

brandied espresso mousse

- | | |
|-------------------------------|--|
| 1 envelope unflavored gelatin | 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel |
| 1 cup brewed espresso coffee* | 1/2 cup chopped Brazil nuts or almonds |
| 1 cup sugar | 3 egg whites |
| 2 cups heavy cream | 1/4 teaspoon salt |
| 1 tablespoon brandy extract | |

Sprinkle gelatin over 1/4 cup cold water; let stand 5 minutes. In small saucepan, heat brewed espresso and 3/4 cup of the sugar until mixture simmers and sugar dissolves. Add gelatin to hot mixture, stirring until gelatin is dissolved; cool. Turn refrigerator control to coldest setting. Pour espresso mixture into 2 ice cube trays, with cube sections removed. Place in freezer compartment for 45 minutes or until solid 1 inch around edge. Pour mixture into cold bowl; beat until smooth and creamy. Beat cream until soft mounds form; fold into espresso mixture with brandy extract, lemon peel and nuts. Beat egg whites with salt until foamy. Add remaining 1/4 cup sugar gradually; beat until stiff peaks form. Fold into espresso mixture. Freeze until firm, 2 to 3 hours. Garnish with Gaufrettes wafers if desired. Makes about two quarts.

*To make the espresso coffee, pour 1 1/2 cups boiling water over 1/2 cup ground espresso coffee. Let stand 10 minutes; strain. Measure 1 cup.

Beate Klarsfeld's autobiography tells the story of one woman's mission, tracking down Nazi war criminals: 1968 photo shows her being led away by security men—in handcuffs—after slapping West German Chancellor Kurt Kiesinger.

She Hunts Hitler's Men 'Wherever They May Be!'

by Jonathan Braun

PARIS, FRANCE.

It's unusual for a woman of 36 to publish an autobiography, but to Beate Klarsfeld the unusual has become commonplace. She's already widely known throughout Europe as one of the world's most relentless Nazi hunters; been arrested three times in different countries; almost pulled off a daring kidnapping in broad daylight, and slapped the face of the Chancellor of Germany in public.

Why does she do these things? In her new book, Wherever They May Be!, already a success in Europe and just published here by Vanguard, Beate—the mother of two young children—says it's because she's decided that "it is necessary to be brave, follow your conscience, keep your eyes open, and act."

In an interview with PARADE in her Paris apartment, Beate explained: "The reason I act is because I'm a German—and a woman. As a German I feel I must help to bring to justice those Germans who were responsible for killing and torturing so many innocent people during World War II. And as a woman I feel I must act because so many men are afraid to."

Beate's being a woman probably helped her pull off her most successful and best publicized coup to date—her slapping of West Germany's Chancellor Kurt Kiesinger in 1968. None of the security guards figured she was a dangerous character when, pretending to be a reporter and wearing a red skirt and a white turtleneck sweater, she sauntered up to the table at which Kiesinger was sitting, preparing to make a speech to a hall full of Social Democratic party members. Then, suddenly getting behind him, she cracked him across the face with her open palm crying out "Nazi, Nazi!"

The incident made headlines all over the world—and gave Beate ample opportunity to trot out Kiesinger's record as assistant director of Hitler's foreign propaganda apparatus. Ten months later, Kiesinger was out as Chancellor, and Willy Brandt in. Other political factors were also involved in his downfall, but Beate feels that her "slap heard round the world" played a major part.

Beate, who hopes her new book will make the public aware that many proven Nazi war criminals have escaped justice and are living comfortable and protected lives, says that when she looks at her own growing family, "confidence springs up—and courage, too."

Beate's children, Arno, 9, and Lida, 2, are cared for by her mother-in-law when she's away from home hunting Nazis. It's a dangerous life for them as well as for her, because death threats and warnings to give up her activities arrive regularly at her apartment. One day the mail even brought a small bomb, surrounded by iron nails and hidden in a candy box. Fortunately the lethal package was discovered and defused before it could do any damage.

"I don't think I'm very brave," says Beate. "There are much braver people in the world. My husband has sacrificed his own work to join in mine."

He gave up a career

Beate's husband, Serge, gave up a budding career as a grain broker to assist his wife in uncovering war criminals. Actually it was through her marriage to him 12 years ago that she first became interested in her work.

He was Jewish; she was not. She'd come to Paris from Berlin at the age of 21 to take a job as a mother's helper. She met her husband-to-be on the subway. She recalls that a dark-haired young man in a checked suit, carrying a briefcase, came up to her on a station platform and asked: "Are you English?"

In telling her about his childhood, Serge recounted how one night during the war he, his sister and his mother had hidden in a cupboard while the Gestapo arrested their father, a member of the French resistance, and shipped him to the Auschwitz concentration camp, where he was killed.

"Serge's stories made a profound impression on me," Beate told PARADE. "I experienced an inner awakening. My own father had been an insurance salesman who spent the war as a clerk in the German army. He was never a Nazi. But when I asked him why he accepted the Nazi regime, all he could say was: 'Because everybody did.'"

Not always successful

Beate admits that her efforts to bring ex-Nazis to justice haven't always been crowned by as much success as she'd like. She succeeded in tracing to South America 62-year-old Klaus Barbie, known as the "Butcher of Lyon"—the city in central France from which, as head of the Gestapo there, he deported thousands to their death. But though she positively identified Barbie and amply documented his crimes, the courts in Bolivia have so far refused to extradite him to France, where he is under death sentence.

Similarly, German authorities have yet to hand over to the French Kurt Lischka, now 64 and top Gestapo official in Paris during the war, who is charged with responsibility for 100,000 deportations. In desperation, Beate, her husband, and three young helpers once tried to jump Lischka in a Cologne street, force him into a car, and drive him across the border to France, where he's already been sentenced in absentia to life imprisonment. But the plan misfired and Lischka was able to break loose and call to a nearby policeman.

'A brick wall'

Beate says that such setbacks—and the indifference of many people to crimes they would rather forget about—sometimes make her feel she is "fighting a brick wall." In Germany, she says, some people refer to her and her helpers as "the Klarsfeld gang."

She's hopeful that her autobiography will have the effect of making more and more people aware of the existence of the ex-Nazis and of the protected lives they are managing to lead in Germany and in South America—and that the result will be pressure on the local authorities to give them up for trial! "Perhaps some day I may even be a prophet in my own country," she writes.

And what will she do when all the criminals on her wanted list have either been turned over to justice or died of old age?

"I don't know," says Beate Klarsfeld. "Perhaps I will devote myself to fighting dictatorships throughout the world. Or maybe I'll just retire and become like every other wife and mother."

Don't bet on the latter.

Beate's husband, Serge, helps in her work. The couple are pictured here in their Paris apartment with their children, Arno, 9, and Lida, 2, and pets.

my FAVORITE jokes

by GEORGE SCHINDLER

EDITOR'S NOTE: A volunteer from the audience, a woman, is on stage propped on a table nervously waiting for magicomedian George Schindler to begin his trick of sawing the lady in half. "Please don't worry," he calms her. "We're taking extra precautions today because of the accident yesterday. I used to rehearse this act with my sister—my half sister. She's not with the act anymore, she has a lovely apartment in Pittsburgh and Dallas. Think of it this way—you'll get severance pay!"

Schindler's, performed at resort hotels and clubs, has worked at different times as a comedian and magician and delights in bringing the two together in his act. He also owns Show Biz Services, which supplies comedy material and ventriloquial dummies to performers. Schindler also teaches magic in his School for Magicians.

Here are some magic jokes from George Schindler:

The Great Colossus used to make an elephant disappear. He traveled the world with this great act. One day he went to see a psychiatrist. "Doctor, I have two questions. First, can a man fall in love with an elephant?" "Of course not," said the doctor. "What's your second question?" "Where can I sell a very large engagement ring?"

One night we had a magician over for dinner. We served rabbit stew. When the man found out what he'd eaten, he got up and left. It was the first time in history a rabbit ever made a magician disappear.

Two bunnies were watching a magician pull a baby rabbit out of his hat. One rabbit said to the other, "I don't know what you think, but I liked the old way much better."

The Great Mentalo used to open his act with... "There is a man sitting in the third row who lives at 45 Pine Street. He wears size 36 underwear and a 15 shirt collar..." His assistant was amazed, she asked, "How do you know all that?" Said Mentalo: "Easy, during the week I do his laundry."

One mind reader met another one on the street and opened his conversation with, "Oh, yeah! Well the same to you!"

There is a tale told of the old magician who left show business and decided to go into something else. He decided to open a jewelry store but had no luck. Just as he opened the store the police caught him, and he got 20 years.

In my act I turn a balloon into a rabbit. My brother-in-law does better. He can turn himself into a saloon.

Then there was the ventriloquist who was so bad his dummy found another partner.

Did you hear about the ventriloquist who got a divorce? His wife claimed he snored on her side of the bed.

I know an alcoholic magician who became a medium and kept bringing back 90-proof spirits.

Stacking a deck of cards may mean nothing to you, but it means a good deal to me.

The 1975 Danbury Mint Christmas Bell

- * Limited edition available at original issue prices only until December 25, 1975.
- * Based on a beautiful angel by the genius Michelangelo.
- * Each fine silver covered bell is hallmarked and registered.
- * Guaranteed Christmas delivery for all orders mailed by November 25, 1975. Attractive gift package.
- * A prized limited edition and a uniquely beautiful Christmas gift. Not available in stores.
- * Priced at only $29.50

The 1975 Danbury Mint Christmas Bell is based on an enduring work of art. The angel that sits majestically atop the bell was inspired by Michelangelo's famous angel sculpture at the Shrine of St. Dominic in Bologna, Italy. It is a fitting tribute to the world's greatest sculptor in the 500th Anniversary year of his birth.

This beautiful bell will be issued in strictly limited edition and is available at original issue prices only for orders postmarked before December 25, 1975.

As a gift, for yourself or someone else who is special, it is a unique collectible that could well be the beginning of a most interesting and rewarding tradition.

When you're exploring a fascinating new technology books alone are not enough.

If you're like most men, deep down inside there's still a bit of the boy who loved to go exploring... and who'd love to go again.

Well, now you can. Only this time you'll explore the expanding world of electronics... a world more fascinating than any you ever dreamed of as a boy.

Learn by exploring... Bell & Howell Schools offers an exciting way for you to gain new occupational skills in electronics.

Everybody enjoys learning something new, but why learn it the old way? Classes to go to. Lectures to sit through. And only a bunch of books to keep you interested. Bell & Howell Schools' adventure in learning is a far cry from all that.

You can probe into electronics and learn exciting new occupational skills right in your own home, in your spare time. On whatever days and whatever hours you choose. So there's no need to give up your present job and paycheck just because you want to learn something new.

What's more, when you're exploring a field as fascinating as electronics, reading about it is just not enough. That's why throughout this program you'll get lots of "hands on" experience with some of today's latest electronic training tools.

You'll be stimulated for hours on end as you build, experiment and learn while using the latest ideas and techniques in this fascinating field.

As part of the program you'll actually learn to build and work with your own electronics laboratory. Using it to put many of today's most dynamic electronic discoveries to the test... including electronic miniaturization.

Among the things you'll discover is how the development of tiny integrated circuits has made possible an electronic calculator small enough to fit into a shirt pocket! And a wristwatch that flashes the time with the push of a button.

You'll investigate the concept of "logic circuits". An idea that has been with us for centuries but only in recent years put to use as the "brain" behind all the new digital consumer appliances we see today.

But more important than anything else is the new occupational skills you'll develop in electronics troubleshooting. While no assurance of income opportunities can be offered, you will develop skills that could lead you in exciting new directions. Use your training:

1. To seek out a job in electronics industry.
2. To upgrade your current job.
3. As a foundation for advanced programs in electronics.

You build and perform many exciting experiments with Bell & Howell's Electro-Lab®. An exclusive electronics training system.

Using our successful step-by-step method, you'll build:

1. A design console, for setting up and examining circuits.
2. A digital multimeter for measuring voltage, resistance and current (it displays its findings in big, clear numbers like a digital clock).
3. A solid-state "triggered sweep" oscilloscope—similar in principle to the kind used in hospital operating rooms to monitor heartbeats. You'll use it to monitor the "heartbeats" of tiny integrated circuits. The "triggered sweep" feature locks in signals for easier observation.

Step-by-step you'll build and experiment with Bell & Howell's new generation color TV—investigating digital features you've probably never seen before!

This 25" diagonal color TV has digital features that are likely to appear on all TV's of the future. As you build it you'll probe into the technology behind all-electronic tuning.

And into the digital circuitry of channel numbers that appear right on the screen! You'll also build in a remarkable on-the-screen digital clock, that flashes the time in hours, minutes and seconds. Your new skills will enable you to program a special automatic channel selector to skip over "dead" channels and go directly to the channels of your choice.

You'll also gain a better understanding of the exceptional color clarity of the Black Matrix picture tube, as well as a working knowledge of "state of the art" integrated circuitry and the 100% solid-state chassis.

After building and experimenting with this TV, you'll be equipped with the skills that could put you ahead of the field in electronics know-how.

We try to give more personal attention than other learn-at-home programs.

1. Toll-free phone-in assistance. Should you ever run into a rough spot during the program, we'll be there to help. While many schools make you mail in your questions,

2. In-person "help sessions". These are held in 50 major cities at various times throughout the year where you can talk shop with your instructors and fellow students.

No electronics background needed.

What you really need is the thing you've never lost. A boy's love for exploring. Now you can go again, only this time learning new occupational skills all along the way!

Mail the postage-paid card today for more details!

Taken for vocational purposes, this program is approved by the state approval agency for Veterans' Benefits.

"Electro-Lab" is a registered trademark of the Bell & Howell Company.

The Scissors that are molded to your hand

Some time ago entirely new concepts in scissors came out of Europe. Scissors with a special cushioned handle anatomically designed to fit your hand. The comfort was incredible. You could cut through the most intricate curve, cut all kinds of materials, cut free hand into all kinds of designs or slip the scissors along the table for an even straight line cut. People who were used to the old fashioned kind of scissors couldn't imagine a pair of scissors working so efficiently and so effortlessly as this new design. Seamstresses and anyone who needed them knew they had discovered a secret. But originally scissors like these cost much more. In fact, even today you can find similar designs selling for $10 or more in fine stores. But now we've captured the essence of these designs at a fantastically low price. "Shear Joy". It's got the familiar colorful, cushion soft plastic handle, the stainless steel blades, weighs only 3 ounces, and they're 8 1/4" long. If you thought there was nothing glamorous about a pair of scissors then wait until you've tried these. At this new low price you can't afford to be without them. Order now. If they are not shear joy, simply return for full money back.

How to eat Knudsen Yogurt without a spoon.

Everyone knows that getting the fruit and energy snack from cup to mouth requires a very basic form of transportation. A spoon. But sometimes it's almost impossible to get your basic active kid to sit still long enough to use your basic spoon. Which brings us to Knudsen Frozen Yogurt Pushups. The new fruit and energy snack you can pass on to your kids as they dash by.

Knudsen Yogurt Pushups have a great deal in common with ice cream. In looks. In taste. (They're even in the ice cream case at your supermarket.) Yet Knudsen Yogurt Pushups still manage to maintain their own individual fruit flavor. And you have a choice of flavors, too. Raspberry. Strawberry. Orange. Or Pineapple.

There's nothing to stop you from grabbing a Knudsen Yogurt Pushup on your way by the freezer. They're 98% fat-free.

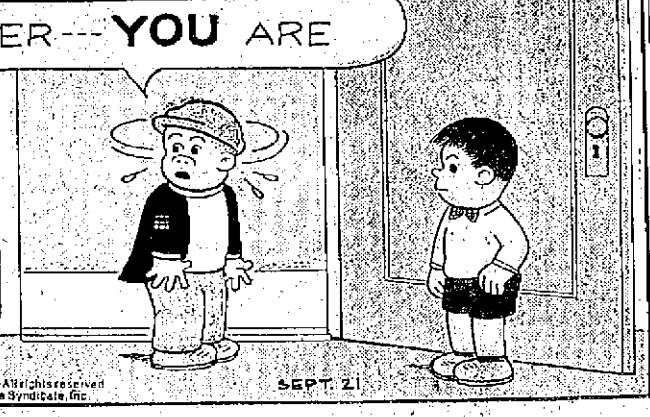

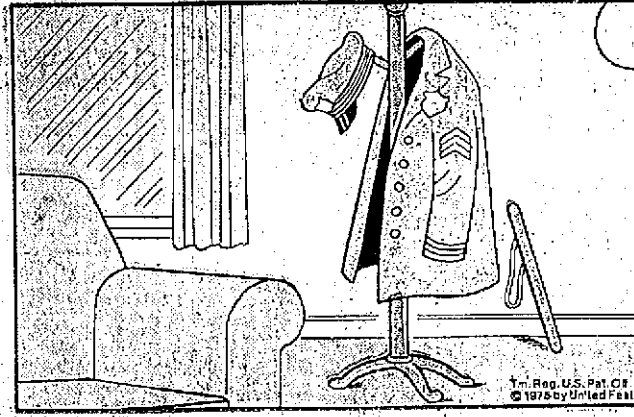

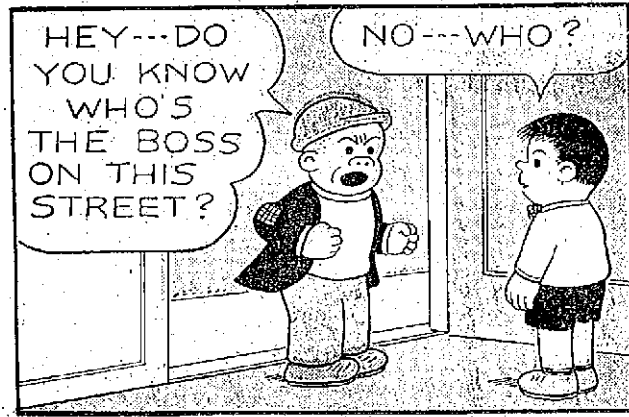

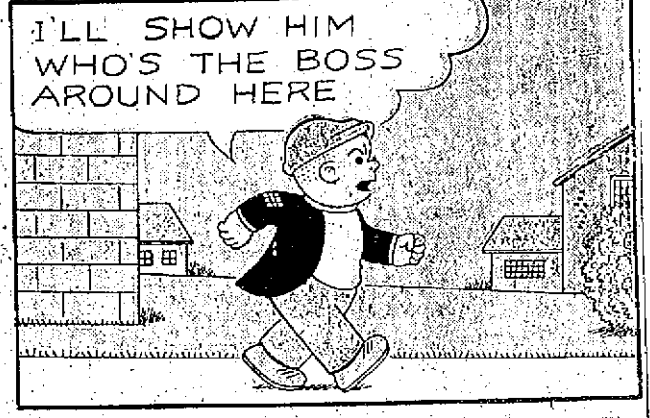

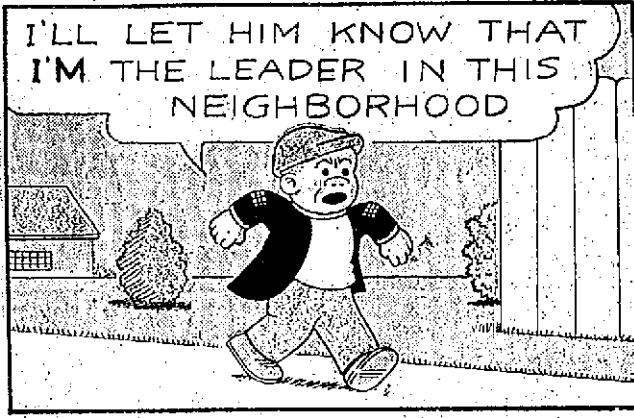

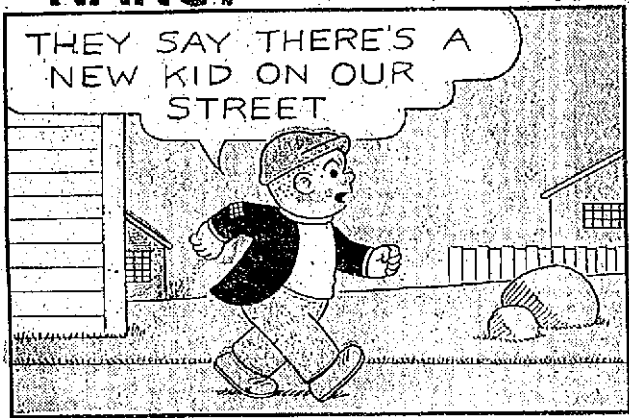

Next time anyone in the family can use a quick and delicious fruit and energy snack, get out the Knudsen Yogurt. The spoonless version.
